Another Question Week. France Will Answer. Mellon Is No Talker. 2.2 Beer. You Will Not Get It.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

TODAY BEGINS another week of questioning.

Do you think Europe can recover?

Can Germany re-establish her finances?

Will America pay the bill, as usual and will Uncle Sam be called Shylock—afterward, as usual?

Is there any danger of my losing the money that I put in those foreign bonds?

Could failure to agree, and Germany's desperate plight, in consequence of failure, lead to another war?

Such are samples of the questions that everybody asks and only time will answer.

THE BIG POWERS, Britain, Italy, France, Germany, and this country, will meet in London to discuss possibilities including the amount that Uncle Sam may be persuaded to contribute.

Our bankers, not enthusiastic about sending more money, begin to have "that Russian feeling," the feeling that money sent may STAY. It was all right to buy foreign bonds, any kind, while foolish Americans were waiting to buy them, the bankers getting a profitable "rake-off."

WHILE BIG COUNTRIES, including this, which has little idea what anything is "all about," prepare for their talk in London, France, which knows what it is all about, is preparing the dotted line, on which our innocents abroad will sign.

Dr. Hans Luther, head of the German Reichsbank, is in Paris, conferring with Monsieur Moret, head of the Bank of France, and high French officials.

They will tell Germany, through Dr. Luther, just what France will, and will not do. And, what the French arrange in Paris is what the big nations will confirm in London, as though it were their own bright idea.

Write on your cuff that the French are logical, and determined. They won that war; they know it, and they did not win it for nothing. What they want, they will get.

WHAT A WONDERFUL example Secretary Mellon sets before other important Americans that go traveling and talking. Requested by President Hoover to confer with Secretary Stimson in Paris, Mr. Mellon tells reporters of various countries:

"I grant no interviews outside the United States, and as few as possible there."

And, that settles it.

OTHER AMERICANS; other methods. Some senators go to the Philippines, and tell the natives, to whom America has given the opportunity to rise from dirt, ignorance, poverty and darkest superstition, that they ought to govern themselves.

The natives, delighted, organize a parade in honor of the senators. Two hundred thousand gather, several American citizens are injured and one killed to emphasize Filipino patriotism.

IN SWEDEN you can buy beer with two and two-tenths per cent alcohol by weight, paying practically no tax. That it is not a cause of drunkenness is proved by the fact that drunkenness has diminished by two-thirds.

Congressman Hull of Illinois, having studied this idea in Sweden, cannot wait to introduce a bill authorizing the same kind of beer.

HE NEED NOT hurry, no such bill will be passed for various reasons. It would destroy 80 per cent of bootleggers' profits, take away the great political power that resides in well-organized uncompromising prohibition, substitute a working plan for one that will not work, and thus annoy a powerful body.

You may say that the plan might diminish by two-thirds the drunkenness and crime now increasing so rapidly under prohibition, but such results are not important, in serious prohibition discussions.

Besides, Republicans count on prohibition to carry them through 1932, in spite of the depression.

THE UNITED FRUIT Company will launch two new liners, and Mrs. Hoover has kindly consented to dedicate them. She will use two ancient Mayan vases, made about 400 B. C., filled with water brought from nine Caribbean countries with which the ships will trade.

IT IS A BEAUTIFUL idea, but for the average, superstitious sailor, who does not like clergymen on board, or cold water in his stomach, a bottle of champagne would be more "lucky" than the nine kinds of water, even if you added others, from the Jordan, Ganges, Tigris, Euphrates, and the miraculous spring that stops flowing at midnight each Saturday and does not start until the following Monday morning.

Assessors' Chairman Summons Aides for 'Ghost' Voting Quiz

Schad Wants Facts On Vacant Lot Registrations.

FLAGRANT CASES

Investigator Bares 25 Votes From Boiler Yard.

Subordinate assessors of the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes will be called in tomorrow to explain how it happens that vacant lots, empty buildings and dead men happen to be producing votes at election time, according to George J. Schad, chairman of the board.

Schad said that when it was called to his attention by Peter J. Connors, head of the Registration Commission investigators, that persons have been assessed in boiler factory storage yards and vacant lots that he was unable to account for it.

WILL CALL AIDES

Schad said yesterday:

"I am going to call in the subordinate assessors in the districts where Connors claims he has found evidences of illegal assessment. We have to depend entirely upon our subordinate assessors in making their canvass. With all the business of our office, it is impossible to recheck every subordinate's work."

Meanwhile, the investigation under Connors has developed that at the St. Clair Hotel, in the Boulevard of the Allies at Market street, 36 "permanent guests" are listed for voting purposes, but a physical check of the hotel shows but three persons actually residing there, they claim.

FLAGRANT CASES

Connors has 35 investigators working. Some of what the board calls the most flagrant cases turned up by the investigation are:

A boiler factory, storage yard at 2223 Liberty avenue, where 25

'MA' TO FACE LUNACY BOARD

LOS ANGELES, July 18.—(AP.)—Mrs. Minnie (Ma) Kennedy, whose honeymoon was ended within the past week by annulment proceedings was ordered examined today by two psychiatrists, H. J. Gormley, County Lunacy Commission secretary, announced.

An affidavit was filed with the commission by B. F. Clearwater, special Angelus Temple officer, who charged Mrs. Kennedy was "senile and afflicted with childish delusions." Gormley refused to issue a warrant until Mrs. Kennedy could be examined.

The secretary appointed Dr. E. H. Stele and Dr. Victor Parkin, Los Angeles psychiatrists, to examine Mrs. Kennedy at her Hermosa Beach cottage where she took refuge since filing her annulment action against the Rev. G. Edward Hudson.

Mrs. Kennedy is the mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist of Angelus Temple. Her marriage to Hudson in Longview, Wash., on June 28 resulted in the discovery he had failed to divorce another wife.

Doug Will Record Story of Travels

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 18.—(INS.)—Douglass Fairbanks said today he planned to appear only in future films "recording my travels." He said he would play no more roles in which he "used my gleaming cutlass to rescue fair maidens," adding:

"At present I'm completing a travel picture on my recent tour around the world. The talkie tempo moves too slowly for the characters I like to play. Dialogue slows up the picture."

40 Persons Burned In Oil Well Fire

MOUNT PLEASANT, Mich., July 18.—(AP.)—Forty persons were reported to have been burned, five or six of them seriously, in a fire that broke out tonight at a new oil well just drilled in about 13 miles east of here.

The well burst storage tanks 500 feet away and oil sprayed out on the ground and caught fire, presumably from a cigaret.

SUING

INA CLAIRE

JOHN GILBERT SUED BY WIFE

LOS ANGELES, July 18.—(INS.)—Ina Claire, famous stage and film star, today filed suit for divorce from John Gilbert, noted screen lover. She claimed he failed to portray that role in his home life. The charge was cruelty.

The troubles of the film pair began a few weeks after their marriage, according to the complaint, which recited that Gilbert complained continually that they were incompatible and told his wife that she "had too much intellect" and was insulted to one of his temperament.

Sinclair to Confer On Oil Firm Deal

DEL MONTE, Cal., July 18. —(INS.)—A conference was scheduled here over the week end between Harry Sinclair, president of the Sinclair Oil Company, and William F. Humphrey, president of the Associated Oil Company, relative to a proposed merger of the two companies, it was learned today.

Bank Loses $6,000 In Third Holdup

MADISON, Ill., July 18.—(Universal.)—For the third time in three years, the First National Bank, of Madison, was robbed today. Two bandits bound the cashier and janitor and escaped with $6,000. Three years ago robbers got $23,000.

PARENTS WATCH STUDENT FLIER FALL TO DEATH

Richard F. DeLong, 21, a student flier at Butler airport, took off from his father's farm in a single-passenger plane late yesterday afternoon, with his parents looking on, the plane dropped several hundred feet, crashed a short distance from the farm house, and killed him.

The farm is near Boyers, Butler County.

DeLong, who recently graduated from Kiski, after finishing Grove City High School, had been taking a flying course for several months. He had flown to the farm of his father, Dr. Francis E. DeLong, had remained there a short while and had barely taken off when the mishap occurred. The reason for the crashup was not apparent.

HALL SLASHES HAWKS' RECORD

HAVANA, July 18.—(AP.)—What was declared by aviation officials to be the fastest non-stop flight from New York to Havana was made today by James Goodwin Hall, former Army flier, when, according to his timing, he spanned the long stretch in 8 hours and 35 minutes.

According to flier's records, he took off at Roosevelt Field at 4:43 o'clock this morning. Unofficial figures placed the takeoff from New York at 4:38, which would make the total elapsed time 8 hours 40 minutes.

Through error Hall landed his Lockheed-Altair monoplane at Columbia airport instead of at Curtiss airport, official government field at Rancho Boyeros. Officials there clocked his arrival at 1:18, eastern standard time, which would mean that he had beaten Capt. Frank M. Hawks' time of 9 hours 21 minutes by 46 minutes on the basis of a takeoff at 4:43 a. m.

10 Lashes, 6 Years Given Chicken Thief

WILMINGTON, Del., July 18.—(AP.)—Robert Elliott, 33, convicted at Georgetown, on a charge of larceny in stealing chickens, today was whipped with 10 lashes at the New Castle Workhouse. He will also serve six years. Elliott's long prison term is due to an effort to stop chicken stealing which has increased considerably recently.

Hungarian Fliers Plan Return Flight

BUDAPEST, July 18.—(INS.)—Capt. Alexander Magyar and Capt. George Endres, who flew in their plane, Justice for Hungary, from Harbor Grace, N. F., to a small town within 20 miles of Budapest, made plans today for a return flight across the Atlantic. Endres said:

"Our machine is so good that I am convinced that we could overcome the difficulties of a return flight."

Goebel Plans Hop Around Equator

LOS ANGELES, July 18.—(AP.)—Col Arthur Goebel, transcontinental flier and winner several years ago of the Dole race to Hawaii, said today he has under consideration a flight around the equator in a diesel-motored airplane.

Title Fight 'Movie' Seized in Georgia

Peggy Hopes She'll Outwit Uncle Sam'l

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP.)—Peggy Hopkins Joyce has figured out a way to settle her argument with the United States government.

Miss Joyce Smiles!

Customs agents charge that Miss Joyce brought a $10,000 diamond plaque into this country from France without declaring it. The plaque was seized and Miss Joyce advised she was subject to pay fines that might total as much as $50,000 in order to get the plaque back.

She began to figure. Finally, her attorney revealed today, she decided to let the government keep the plaque if it would drop its prosecution. The government agreed. So, the attorney said, the case is settled.

But Miss Joyce is not intending to give the government her jewelry if she can help it. She said:

"As I understand it, the government is obliged to sell the plaque, like any other seized article, at auction.

"Diamonds are down in price. It might just happen that I would be able to buy the plaque back at a very satisfactory figure—say about $2,500."

The government, according to Miss Joyce's attorney, is now busily scratching its head.

U. S. Uncovers Plot Against Cuban Head

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP.)—The Sun says the United States Department of Justice, aided by New York police, has uncovered and checked a plot against President Gerardo Machado, of Cuba.

The plot, says the Sun, was instigated by "a distinguished Cuban, now resident in New York—a political exile." He was said to have raised $1,000,000 and purchased a large quantity of arms for shipment to Cuba.

Belle Wins Reno 'Barnyard License'

RENO, Nev., July 18.—(INS.)—Belle Livingston, self-styled "Empress of the Barnyards," late today won her fight to "muscle in" on the night club business of Reno's divorce colony.

In an executive session, the county license board voted 3 to 2 to issue the former New York night club hostess a night club and gambling license for her "Barnyard" project on the Hall ranch near here.

Bert Acosta Plans Brussels-Tokio Hop

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP.)—Bert Acosta, one of the pilots on Admiral Richard E. Byrd's flight to France in 1927, is planning a flight from Brussels to Tokio for prizes he says aggregate about $100,000.

He revealed his plans at an American Legion meeting on Long Island last night, saying he would sail for Belgium to complete preparations on September 15.

King and Queen Mark Centennial

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 18.—(AP.)—The King and Queen and members of the royal family left this evening for Ostend to participate tomorrow in festivities marking the first centenary of the Belgian dynasty.

MACKAY WED TO ANNA CASE; BERLIN GUEST

Millionaire Telegraph Head And Composer Reconciled; Bride Once Opera Star.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Clarence H. Mackay, millionaire chairman of the board of the Postal Telegraph and Cable Company, and Miss Anna Case, former soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, were married today in St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church in Roslyn, L. I. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Vincent Donovan, pastor of the church, assisted by the Rev. Edward McManus.

Mackay is 57, his bride 42. Mackay is a Knight of St. Gregory and high in the lay councils of the Catholic Church.

Miss Case formerly attended the Dutch Reformed Church, but was confirmed in the Roman Catholic Church a month ago by Cardinal Patrick J. Hayes.

BERLIN PRESENT

The fact that Irving Berlin, the song writer and son-in-law of Mackay, was present at the ceremony indicated a new and friendlier attitude between Mackay and Berlin.

When Berlin married Mackay's daughter, Ellin, the father for a time maintained a policy of aloofness toward his son-in-law but, after some time had passed, he gave their wedding his blessing. Berlin himself was a millionaire when he married Miss Mackay. From a poor East Side boy he had risen to fame and fortune.

Mrs. Berlin is said to have been a close friend of Miss Case for a long time, having been an ardent admirer of her talent as a singer.

Only a small and select group, consisting of members of the two families, a few intimate friends and some newspaper reporters, witnessed the marriage ceremony. Besides the Berlins, they included Mackay's son, John W. Mackay, his wife and Miss Case's mother, Mrs. Peter Van Nuys, of South Branch, N. J.

Miss Katherine Mackay, Mackay's other daughter, was married in the same church to Kenneth O'Brien two years ago.

CHURCH DECORATED

The church was decorated with flowers. The bride wore a stunning gown of white lace and a white horsehair hat. She carried a boquet of lilies of the valley.

Mackay's first wife, who was Katherine Duer, obtained a divorce in Paris, and during the war she was married to Dr. Joseph A. Blake, a famous physician. The Mackay children remained with their father. The Blakes lived at Bar Harbor and in Westchester

Aviatrix and Banker Die in Plane Crash

LONDON, July 18.—(AP.)—Dispatches from Wokingham today said Mrs. Violet Baring, niece of the Marquess of Zetland, and Philip Noble, banker, had been killed when Mrs. Baring's airplane crashed at Arborfield, Berkshire.

Mrs. Baring was at the controls, the dispatches said, when the machine went into a nose dive from several hundred feet.

Missouri Quake Zone Feels Shock

NEW MADRID, Mo., July 18.—(AP.) — A distinct earthquake shook buildings, rattled windows and swayed telephone poles and trees here at 8:52 a. m. today. So far as is known no one was injured and no serious damage resulted. Old residents said the shock was the most severe of any in recent years. New Madrid is in the center of an earthquake region. About 115 years ago a sever shock leveled buildings and hills and flattened out the entire countryside.

Mellon, Stimson Meet Teutonic Delegation In Paris.

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, Jr.
Universal Service Special Cable

PARIS, July 18. — The United States stepped to the center of the Old World stage tonight when Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and Foreign Minister Julius Curtius, of Germany called on Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon and Ambassador Walter E. Edge at the American embassy.

The German-American conference, which began at 10 o'clock, followed a prolonged meeting of the Germans with Premier Pierre Laval, Foreign Minister Aristide Briand, Minister of Finance Flandin and Budget Minister Pietri, at which the European politico-financial situation was discussed in its broadest aspects.

When representatives of the seven nations going to London meet tomorrow morning, France will insist that observations be limited solely to the German situation, it was authoritatively stated tonight. Neither the Young plan, nor disarmament will be discussed by the French.

JOIN LONDON PARLEY

The French spokesmen simultaneously declared France's formal readiness to join in the London meeting of government heads on Monday.

Premier Laval, Foreign Minister Briand, Finance Minister Flandin and Under Secretary Poncet will leave Paris for London Monday morning.

The atmosphere in French quarters is distinctly optimistic, indicating that differences revealed at this afternoon's meeting are far from insurmountable. The Germans, probably largely for home consumption, announced they had dealt only with financial phases, avoiding political discussions "most carefully."

While the Germans were explaining to the American statesmen the impossibility of accepting "possibilities" under which France would make financial aid available, Premier Laval and his colleagues were laboring hectically on new calculations based on the day's conversations.

GIVES UP BANQUET

So pressing and intensive was this work that M. Laval at the eleventh hour canceled his acceptance to attend the dinner in honor of the Duke and Duchess of York in order to devote himself exclusively to the vital tasks imposed by Europe's financial crisis.

M. Laval's work involves not only approaching closer to the German objectives, but also reck-

HEROINE

RESCUES GIRL IN WHIRLPOOL

Diving 30 feet from a bridge, Mrs. Edward Hoopes III, of 2880 Dwight avenue, Dormont, well known in Pittsburgh and Sewickley society circles, saved a girl from drowning in the West River, near Guilford, Conn., according to word received here.

Mrs. Hoopes, guest of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Parmelee, of Pittsburgh, at their cottage near Guilford, was driving with Mrs. Parmelee over a bridge when their attention was attracted by screams of children.

Learning that a girl was drowning, Mrs. Hoopes kicked off her pumps, dived headlong from the bridge and pulled out the girl, Mary Brown, 16, as she was being drawn under by a whirlpool caused by incoming tides. The rescue was made known by the girl's parents.

Mrs. Hoopes was formerly Miss Katherine Mansfield, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. J. Clark Mansfield, 1213 Milton avenue, Regent Square. She is a graduate of the school of drama, Carnegie Institute of Technology, and a member of the Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America.

'Lump' in Mattress $1,000 in Currency

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 18.—The mattress on which she slept at her rooming house was so lumpy that Mrs. John Philaja finally went at it today with a pair of shears.

The lump proved to be nearly $1,000 in bills, for which Mrs. Philaja, with the aid of the police, now is seeking the owner.

Hoover Plays Role Of Good Samaritan

LURAY, Va., July 18.—(AP.)—President Hoover, on the road to his Rapidan (Va.), camp today, played the part of the good samaritan.

Coming upon an automobile accident, the chief executive stopped and had his physician, Capt. Joe Boone, attend the wife of Commander William F. Newton, of Washington, injured in the accident.

Commander Newton said that in going around a curve a back tire blew out and caused the car to turn over.

Twin, Nearing 92, Dies in Leesport

READING, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—One of twin sisters, who were believed to be among the oldest in the country, died at her home in Leesport, near here last night. She was Mrs. Sarah Ann Mengel, and would have celebrated her ninety-second anniversary on September 8. The other sister is Mrs. Catherine Ann Stump, of Robesonia.

Westinghouse Coast Representative Dies

PASADENA, Cal., July 18.—(Universal) — Walter Hunter Whiteside, former Pacific Coast representative of the Westinghouse Electric Company, died at his home early today of heart disease.

Mafia Ousted by Mussolini Blamed in Bombings Here

Seventy-five per cent of bombing outrages are pay jobs done by outsiders, in the opinion of City Detective Michael Tortorelli, head of the bomb and arson squad. He said:

"The wave of bombing that is sweeping the large cities of this country I believe is due partly to influx of the Mafia driven out of Italy by Mussolini. There is a nation-wide organization, and bombing has developed into a racket. A bombing will net the perpetrators about $1,000. The aim is not to kill but to frighten the victims."

Tortorelli said while he had not studied the McKees Rocks bombing he was of the opinion it was done by outsiders brought here as a result of political warfare.

Because of influence of politicians and the fact that out-of-town men are usually engaged to plant the bombs convictions in the courts are few, Tortorelli said.

Mayor's Car Consumes Gas Worth $704 in 10 Months

The large automobile furnished by the city for Mayor Charles H. Kline, which gained considerable attention during the investigation into city affairs because of oversized tires and resplendent monogram, has been found to be anything but frugal in its consumption of gasoline, according to city records.

For 10 months in 1930, excluding July and August, high test gasoline for the big car of the city's chief executive was paid for by the taxpayers to the extent of $704.18, according to the report filed in the controller's office.

This represents approximately 2,730 gallons and at eight miles per gallon approximately 21,840 miles, a run which must have had a wearing effect on the tires.

All of the gasoline was purchased for license No. 200, the Mayor's official car. October seems to have been an active month in the official calendar as on one day 30 gallons were placed in the car at diffirent times at the same station. During the entire month 344 gallons were used.

Political Army in Suspense With County Chiefs Haggling Over Hook-Ups

HARMONY HOPE SEEN IN HANDS OF W. L. MELLON

Activity of Coyne Hints Pact With Armstrong; Link Mansfield-McGovern.

Workers in the local political army will begin tomorrow another week of suspense, awaiting word from the generals as to the probable hook-ups for Republican candidates for county commissioner and the slate that will accompany them in the September primary.

W. L. Mellon is expected to pour oil on the troubled waters by bringing warring factions together to promote harmony.

CONFERENCES REPORTED

He was reported to have held conferences last week with leaders and candidates. Reports had it yesterday that Mellon would leave for Canada tomorrow or Tuesday and accordingly word was passed around that the slate positively would be announced in two days.

The solution to the situation appears to be a running mate for County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, who is seeking re-election. State Senator James J. Coyne, while not an announced candidate for county commissioner, is working day and night covering every section of the county.

AGREEMENT SEEN

Belief that Armstrong and Coyne will come into agreement and run together has reached the point of conviction in the minds of many observers. They are of the class that believe Coyne had the support of Mayor Kline, without which it is generally admitted no organization candidate can be nominated.

State Senator W. D. Mansfield is another candidate for county commissioner, and many believe he will run with County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, if the latter decides to enter the Republican primary.

In a few isolated quarters, the plan of having Armstrong, Coyne and Mansfield run as lone eagles is suggested, but it is believed to be inspired by members of Kline's camp who are opposed to Coyne.

CAIN SEEN IN RACE

There is strong probability that Sheriff Robert S. Cain will seek the treasurership with the support of Mayor Kline. Delinquent Tax Collector Walter J. Christy also is a potential candidate and is believed to have the backing of Armstrong.

The independent ticket that was expected to be built around Commissioner McGovern is still as vague as the organization slate. One reason for the independents' reticence is the uncertainty as to McGovern's intentions of entering the primary. Another seems to be the breach between McGovern and James F. Malone, state secretary of property and supplies. The latter is certain to take an active interest in three candidates for City Council, Charles Anderson and Robert Garland, incumbents, and former Councilman P. J. McArdle.

Downey Is Blinded By Sun Ray Lamp

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP.)—Morton Downey, radio singer, and husband of Barbara Bennett, actress, was under the care of a physician today as a result of a temporary loss of eyesight caused by peering into a sun ray lamp.

He visited an ill friend Thursday and did not take the precaution of wearing dark glasses. Early yesterday morning he became ill. He filled a radio engagement last night, but cancelled an appearance at a theater.

County until they were divorced three years ago. Mrs. Blake died last fall. The funeral services were held in St. Mary's Church, where Mackay was married this morning.

After the wedding, the couple, with their families and intimate friends, returned to the Mackay Harbor Hill estate for a wedding breakfast. After the breakfast they left by automobile on a honeymoon, but their destination was not disclosed.

This morning the wedding party entered a rear door of the church with the intention of avoiding the townspeople. They were successful in this, and the townspeople were sorely disappointed when they learned the wedding had taken place without their knowledge.

CURIOUS DISAPPOINTED

Half an hour after the ceremony, curious persons gathered about the Mackay estate. However, they found the gates closed and locked and all was quiet.

A honeymoon aboard the Mackay yacht, Manchonoch II is believed to be planned by the couple.

Society circles were stirred by the surprise marriage of Mackay and Miss Case. News of the wedding was quickly transmitted to the so-called "400."

The marriage license had been obtained from Charles Schmidt, of the town of North Hempstead.

The romance of Mackay and Miss Case is one in which the principals are one of the wealthiest men in America and the daughter of a village blacksmith.

SON OF BONANZA KING

Mackay is the son of John William Mackay, an Irish immigrant, who, with two others, sank a shaft into the famous Bonanza mine in the Comstock lode, which yielded $300,000,000 in six years.

The elder Mackay and James Gordon Bennett established the Commercial Cable Company and later purchased the Postal Telegraph Company. Clarence Mackay expanded these companies and, with the telephone and radio, spread a network of communication all over the globe.

Miss Case was born at South Branch, N. J., the daughter of a village blacksmith. Her singing in the choir attracted the attention of a Metropolitan Opera conductor. That was in 1909, when Miss Case was a little more than 20. The director, Andreas Dippel, impressed by the voice he had heard, stopped on the way to a train, met Miss Case, and started her on her operatic career.

FRIENDS AMONG ELITE

The future mistress of the magnificent Harbor Hill estate has not gone in much for high society, although she has made many friends among the elite since she became famous and wealthy due to her own efforts.

She is described as being very practical. She no doubt remembers the lean years of her childhood when her father's pay as a blacksmith had to be carefully handled. She helped support her family while young by peddling soap, helping neighbors with their housework and driving a horse and buggy for fares.

London Man to Wed One of Gibson Girls

LONDON, July 18.—(AP.)—Notice was given at the London register office today of the forthcoming marriage of Maurice Bennett Flynn and Mrs. Nora Phipps, sister of Lady Astor.

Mrs. Phipps is the youngest of the five Langhorne sisters, of Virginia. She was one of the noted Gibson girls made famous by Charles Dana Gibson, who married one of the sisters.

REFORM LEADER RAPS 'BUNGLING' IN BOMB CASE

Williams Assails Detectives For Arrest, Then Release Of McKees Rocks Suspects

Charging that county detectives have "bungled" again, Alfred Williams, McKees Rocks reform leader, declared late yesterday that the release of the suspects held in connection with the bombing of the home of Thomas J. Conley, veteran vice crusader, more than a week ago, strengthens their plea for a state investigation.

Williams, chairman of the Citizens' Committee, said the investigation of the bombing by county detectives was back where it started. He referred to the release of Mike Cianacco, poolroom proprietor; Joseph Davenjay and Samuel Xittinsto, the last of the 14 men held as suspects.

He said:

SCORES DETECTIVES

"It looks to me as if the county detectives have made another bungle. They said they had evidence to arrest those men, and their release today shows that they had nothing on them. It seems funny. The releasing of the men gives us a stronger cause for having a state investigation. I feel that the county authorities have had ample time to bring those responsible for the bombing to justice, but as it stands now the case is back where it started."

CONFER WITH ATTORNEY

He headed a committee which conferred with Attorney Ralph H. Smith, their counsel, for more than an hour discussing the bombing and the committee's fight against increased taxation in McKees Rocks Borough.

At the conclusion of the conference, Smith announced plans for a personal investigation of the crime, and advised the committee to consult with County Detective Chief George W. Murren.

Murren was not seen. He had left his office for the day. J. J. Driscoll, a member of the executive committee, and Conley, whose home was bombed, were in the group which conferred with Smith.

State Police Probe Bombing at Bethel

State police today were investigating the mysterious bombing of an automobile in front of the home of Charles Hopson, Bethel pop manufacturer, the second such outrage laid to mine strike sympathizers in the district within the past few weeks. The home of a striking mine foreman who returned to work under the United Mine Workers' agreement was bombed first.

Hopson's car was parked in the driveway alongside his home. Several sticks of dynamite, placed underneath the steering wheel, blew out the windows and wrecked teh top.

Clues Fail in Third McKeesport Bombing

McKeesport police were without clues to the identity of two men seen fleeing in an automobile from the home of Frank Passone, of 2939 Chester street, McKeesport, following a bomb explosion which tore a hole in the foundation and damaged the house

Bride's Brother Wants to Know Who She Wed

NEW YORK, July 18.—(INS.)—For some time after the wedding, Peter Stanley Case, brother of Anna Case, today hadn't heard of his sister's marriage to Clarence H. Mackay.

Informed by telephone at his home in Elizabeth, N. J., he thanked the reporter, remarking he knew she was to be married, but "didn't know much about it." Just before he hung up, he said:

"By the way, what was that bridegroom's name again?"

Thieves Steal Auto, Hold Up Two Stores

Two Negroes stole an automobile and then held up two Hill district stores within half an hour last night. The car belonged to George A. Smith, of Bedford avenue.

The pair robbed the P. H. Butler store at 1706 Wylie avenue, where Horace Stobe, manager, was forced to open the cash register and give up $65. They they drove to another Butler store at 2035 Webster avenue. Thomas Pugh, manager, and took $35 from the cash register.

ROADS' PLIGHT COMPARED WITH THAT OF REICH

I. C. C. Told U. S. Faces Collapse of Securities; Danger Point Reached.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—A prompt increase in railroad earnings was pronounced a necessity today before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Fairman R. Dick, New York investment expert, supporting the petition of the carriers for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates, said that unless the lines are given this assistance they will lose a principal source of their capital.

Unless earnings increased, he continued, billions of dollars' worth of railroad securities must be wiped off the legal list of approved investments for insurance companies and savings banks.

Dick said inability to produce earnings of this amount soon would have the effect of taking $5,748,500,000 par value of bonds off the legal lists.

LIKENED TO GERMANY

The witness analyzed the situation from various angles to show how decreasing revenues testimony and likened the railroad situation to that of Germany. He said:

"The country has no idea of the seriousness of the railroad situation today. It is only comparable to that of Germany. Capital is fleeing from railroad to utility, government and municipal bonds, and it will be very hard for the railroads to obtain capital necessary to refinance maturing obligations.

"On June 1, the flight of capital was exactly comparable to the German situation. Since June 1 the flight of capital from Germany has grown."

Comparing a large group of railroad bonds on June 1 with German 5½ and 7 per cent bonds, he said the railroad bonds had dropped 32 points from the 1929 high, while German bonds had fallen 17 points on the same date.

HUGE STOCK LOSSES

Dealing with railroad capital, he said that in 1929, stocks of railroads having $10,000,000 or over in annual gross revenue, had an aggregate market value of $10,331,080,000, while on June 1 last the market value had dropped to $4,094,067,000, bringing the ratio of indebtedness to capital values from 49 per cent in 1929 to 72 per cent at the present time, as compared with the legal limit of 60 per cent considered conservative for real estate loans.

VATICAN FOES ORDERED TRIED

ROME, July 18.—(AP.)—Premier Mussolini today ordered trial by a special tribunal of five newspaper editors accused of writing and distributing a pamphlet entitled, "Away With the Vatican," which was offensive to the Holy See.

The defendants are Amilio Settimelli, Ottome Rosai, Bruno Rosai, Remo Vhiti and Alberto Maurizio.

Their pamphlet suggested that the Pope be arrested and tried before a tribunal for the defense of the state.

It is said the Premier was particularly angry that they should have signed the pamphlet "Faithful to the Fascist Oath," although two of the defendants have been expelled from the Fascist party.

VINCENT DEATH REDUCES G. O. P. LEAD IN HOUSE

Republicans Now Have One More Than Democrats; Vacancies to be Filled.

SAGINAW, Mich., July 18.—(AP.)—Representative Bird J. Vincent (Rep.), of Michigan, died today aboard the army transport Henderson en route from Honolulu to San Francisco, according to word received here today.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—The House Republican majority was reduced to one today by the death of Representative Bird J. Vincent, of Michigan.

Vincent's death was the eighth among members of the next House and left the toll evenly divided between Democrats and Republicans.

The party division now stands 214 Republicans, 213 Democrats, one Farmer-Laborite and seven vacancies.

The representative from the eighth Michigan district was taken ill in March while en route to Honolulu and received treatment in the naval hospital at Pearl Harbor. According to word received here by relatives he had improved sufficiently to start the homeward trip aboard the army transport. He suffered a relapse, however, and death came today.

He leaves his widow and one daughter, Helen Louise.

City's Lease on Exposition Park Being Studied in Tax Cut Fight

SHOW FAILURE MAY VOID ALL PAY LIABILITY

Original Grant at Odds With Agreement Under Which Rental Is Paid.

Legality of a lease under which the city pays $30,000 a year rent for the use of the Exposition Building at the Point is being examined by a group of citizens interested in seeing a tax reduction at the coming budget sessions of City Council.

An apparent discrepancy between the lease now in effect and the original grant would seem to have the city paying rental up until 1939, although the original grant of the property to the Western Pennsylvania Exposition Society was only for a 50-year period to 1936.

GRANT CITED

The lease which provided that the city should pay $30,000 a year for the building in addition to insurance and repairs was in the form of an ordinance which passed City Council November 24, 1919. Even at that time there was a question as to whether the entire property had not reverted to the city because of the failure of the Exposition Society to hold an exposition within a three-year period.

The original grant passed by ordinance March 3, 1886, stated:

"As the purpose of the society is to hold annual expositions of manufacturers, merchandise, agricultural and other products, and said exposition will be of great advantage to the interests of this locality; be it provided, that in case said society shall at any time, during said lease, fail to hold a public exposition of the character above mentioned for three consecutive years, then the said lease shall be forfeited and the city entitled to re-enter upon the premises and become possessed of the same and of all property and improvements placed or erected thereon."

RENTAL PAYS DEBT

T. J. Fitzpatrick, secretary-treasurer of the Western Pennsylvania Exposition Society, which includes a number of prominent citizens, when asked whether the city had taken over the debts of the society, said that the $30,000 a year rental is being used to pay interest and principal on the debt and will wipe it out at the end of the 20-year lease made in 1919. He said the last public exposition was held in 1916.

John S. Herron, president, said that City Council in 1919 practically took over the debt of the Exposition Society in return for the use of the building. He said:

"It was a good deal for the city. We got the use of a large part of the building for a municipal garage and were able to rent other parts of it so as to reduce our own rental to almost nothing."

Herron explained that the city has lost several sub-tenants in the building, thereby causing the property to show a loss. The city sublets parts of the building to the Pittsburgh Railways Company and the Ready Mixed Concrete Company and obtains a total income of $18,060. The city pays out for rental, insurance and repairs a total of $36,401, leaving $18,341 charged up as rent for the municipal garage. The Exposition Society always has been exempt from city taxes.

INVALID MOTHER HURT IN ROW

Tragedy stalked into the home of Mrs. K. Schmittlein, 85, of 28 Royal street, last night, police said, on the heels of a bottle of moonshine liquor.

Mrs. Schmittlein, bed-ridden and paralytic, is in Allegheny General Hospital, expected to die, as a result, the authorities declare, of wounds on her head caused by a bottle in the hands of her intoxicated son, Fred, 36.

Mrs. Schmittlein was enjoying her daily five minutes' relaxation in a wheel chair when Fred entered the house, noisy and rebellious, according to police, George, 40, another son, they say, attempted to quiet Fred and merely served to make him unruly.

A tussle ensued, during which Fred, according to police, forced his way into the room, grasped a large medicine bottle, threw the bottle at his brother, standing between him and the invalid's chair. Ducking, George avoided the bottle, which struck Mrs. Schmittlein, wounding her in two places, possibly fracturing her skull, police say.

Neighbors called Patrolmen Henry Oczarczak and Bernard Holowinski, who subdued Fred after a hard struggle, they said, and arrested him and also George on suspicious person charges.

Divorcee, Acquitted, Spurns Radio Offer

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 18.—Mrs. Edna James, young divorcee, acquitted of the murder of Patrolman Raymond Castner, today declined to reveal her plans for the future. She refused to talk over the radio, as well as the offer of a home on a farm, made by a Swedish farmer and his wife.

Woman Kills Self In Leap Into Dam

POTTSTOWN, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—Mrs. Emma Jordan, 29, wife of Earl T. Jordan, committed suicide today, police said, by jumping into Moser's Dam near her home at Sanatoga, three miles east of here.

The body was found lying across the dam's spillway by a searching party summoned by Jordan when he discovered his wife missing while closing windows in the house during a storm. Mrs. Jordan, police said, had been in ill health and despondent for several weeks.

COURT SCORES PENNINGTON IN ICE PLANT RAID

Court Cites Vandalism in Attack on Alleged Beer Plant Without Warrant.

Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington placed himself in an "altogether indefensible position," by directing prohibition agents to shut down the ice plant and dismantle the brewery of the Labor Products and Ice Company, Brackenridge, without due process of law, Federal Judge R. M. Gibson declared in an opinion he handed down yesterday. The plant was raided June 20.

In a severe rebuke to the prohibition officials, the court held that the seizure was accompanied by acts of vandalism, and in essentials it did not differ from other cases in which the court, "unfortunately, is too familiar."

The prohibition officials are directed in a decree of the court to return to the products and ice company all machinery and parts of machinery, seized by the prohibition agents. Under the decree they are enjoined and commanded to refrain from interfering with the company in operation of its business under its federal permit, or in operation of its ice plant, pending a citation, hearing and lawful order, except insofar as is necessary for a reasonable supervision of making beverages under its permit.

The plant was raided and dismantled by prohibition agents after the seizure of a truck near the plant, loaded with 27 barrels of alleged high test beer. Subsequently at a hearing on an injunction brought by the company to restrain the prohibition officials from interfering with the operations of the plant, witnesses for the company testified the truck did not leave its plant. The company, under its permit, is under $25,000 bond to comply with the prohibition law.

The opinion states that the suppression of the ice plant and machinery parts was under specific direction of Pennington, and closure of the ice plant was peculiarly unjustifiable, as it greatly injured the company and inconvenienced a large community, without advancing the enforcement of the prohibition act.

PARKING WHARF BEAUTIFICATION PLANS DELAYED

Work May Be Held Over for Year Unless Council Speeds Appropriation.

Beautification of the city's parking wharves along the Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers may be delayed until next year unless Council acts with haste on the Public Works Department's request for funds, it was ascertained yesterday.

Legislation introduced by the department asking for a $30,000 appropriation several weeks ago has been tabled by Council's committee on finance. Councilmen said yesterday they did not know when it would be brought up again for action. No reason was given for the delay.

At the same time, a plan proposed by Dr. Alexander Gibson, of the Helping Hand Society, to have charges from his refuge beautify a section of the Monongahela Wharf from Grant street to Smithfield street, had struck a snag. The work was to be done free to the city. Dr. Gibson said the property had been leased to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and permission could not be secured to clean up the section.

Director Lang's proposal is to beautify and repave a section of the Monongahela warf from Market street to Exchange way with used brick from Noblestown road.

Deplorable condition of the wharves was brought to Council's attention some time ago by the Pittsburgh Building Owners and Managers' Association. Charges were made at that time that the city was losing considerable revenue from parking by inefficient operation of the sites by the Department of Public Safety. Figures showed that a few weeks after the complaint was made the collections doubled.

PARK BEER HIT BY LADY ASTOR

LONDON, July 18.—(AP.)—The Englishman, like his German neighbor, soon may be able to get beer, or even stronger drink, beneath the trees of public parks.

With the motto, "I want to let daylight into the bar parlor," George Lansbury, first commissioner of works, is giving consideration to granting of liquor licenses to park concessions.

Lansbury is a teetotaller himself and intends remaining so, but said:

"If other people will drink, then I hope that they will do so in decent surroundings. I think the modern pub where people stand at the bar and drink for hours on end, even if they drink only a little, is very demoralizing. I want to let the pure daylight into the bar-parlor."

Lansbury's project has aroused a storm of protest from a large section of London's public from all walks of life. Some, such as Lady Astor, see in it a further gain for the "demon rum," to which she is violently opposed, while others who are not so interested in ale, or no ale, are afraid it will crowd the parks.

Illness Near Crisis, Judge Gorman Quits

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—(INS.)—Judge James E. Gorman, famous Juvenile Court Judge of the Philadelphia courts, is critically ill today. Aware of the seriousness of his condition, late yesterday he telegraphed his resignation to Gov. Pinchot so there will be no delay in filling his post.

Judge Gorman is 71. He suffered a nervous breakdown several weeks ago.

Youth Acquitted In Woman's Death

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—Arthur Ziegenfuss, 24, who was under arrest here in connection with the death of Mrs. Kate Muthard, 37, who was shot on the porch of her home at Weissport, was exonerated today by a coroner's jury which returned a verdict that the woman was accidentally shot.

FALL PREPARES NIGHT JOURNEY TO U. S. PRISON

Hour of Departure From El Paso Kept Secret; Upset by Photographer.

EL PASO, Tex., July 18.—(AP.)—Albert B. Fall's departure for the New Mexico State Penitentiary at Santa Fe was imminent tonight, but the exact hour was kept secret.

Final arrangements for his incarceration in the New Mexico institution to serve a sentence of a year and a day for bribery were completed. The former Interior secretary's family, seeking to evade all possible publicity, carefully withheld information on just when his journey would begin.

Dr. J. H. Gambrell, Fall's personal physician, was notified by United States Marshal Joseph Tondre by telephone from Santa Fe that the federal order to commit Fall to the penitentiary had been received from Washington. With it was a letter from United States Attorney Leo A. Rover empowering Dr. Gambrell to arrange Fall's transportation to the penitentiary.

READY FOR FALL

Marshal Tondre said the commitment papers would be taken to Warden Ed Swope at the prison, and that Fall would be admitted any time he arrived.

It appeared likely Fall would leave El Paso whenever Dr. Gambrell decided his physical condition would permit the trip. Although the exact physical condition of the former Interior secretary was not divulged today, Dr. Gambrell said Fall was "greatly upset" by an occurrence last night when a rock thrown by an El Paso commercial photographer hit Fall's daughter, Mrs. C. C. Chase.

The photographer, Joseph M. Hill, retained by a picture association, said he tossed a rock into some bushes at the Fall home merely to frighten a Mexican chauffeur who had been watering flowers, and who, the photographer said, had drenched him with water.

STRUCK BY ROCK

Police were called to the Fall home and Mrs. Chase told them the rock had hit her a glancing blow on the leg. Mrs. Chase denied a police report that Fall was sitting in a chair with a shotgun across his knees when they arrived. She said there was no shotgun in the house. Her father, Mrs. Chase said, was greatly agitated. Hill was recalled from the job.

Tonight newspaper men and photographers kept up a vigil at the Fall home, expecting his departure momentarily.

The commitment papers ordered Marshal Tondre to take the former Interior secretary into custody forthwith and deliver him to the New Mexico Penitentiary. His sentence is a year and a day and the papers provide that he shall likewise be held in prison until a $100,000 fine, also a part of the sentence, is satisfied.

Fall was convicted of having accepted a bribe from Edward L. Doheny, oil millionaire, in connection with government oil land leases.

Capital 'Empress' Funeral Monday

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(INS.)—The body of Mrs. John B. Henderson, society leader and widow of the former senator from Missouri, arrived here today from Bar Harbor, Me., where she died Wednesday after a paralytic stroke. She was 90. The body was taken direct to the Henderson "castle," where it will remain until Monday, when the funeral services will be held.

MINE STRIKERS ARRESTED FOR TAG DAY SALES

Women, Children Rounded Up by Police for Violating Ordinance; Denied License

Enforcing a city ordinance against selling tags, police yesterday rounded up more than a score of striking miners, women and children soliciting funds for the National Miners Union relief and detained 19 persons, including two girls and a woman. About a dozen boys and girls, all under 16 years of age, were released and sent back to National Union headquarters with instructions to stay off the streets. Those arrested told police they came from mining towns in Washington and Allegheny counties.

REFUSED PERMIT

The National Miners Union was refused a permit for their tag day by Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the Department of Public Welfare. Leaders of the union declared their intention of defying the police edict against tagging without a permit.

Charges of violating a city ordinance were brought against those detained, police permitting the younger persons to return to union headquarters with reprimands.

1,000 SELL TAGS

National Miners Union leader declared about 1,000 men, women and children were engaged in soliciting funds, and scores were observed in the downtown section.

The Miners Relief Fund of the Socialist party had been granted a permit to solicit funds for relief of striking miners, according to announcement yesterday from the fund headquarters, 613 Lyceum Building.

HUNGRY MARCH, DEMAND FOOD

HENRYETTA, Okla., July 18.—(AP.)—A crowd of 300 men and women marched on downtown grocery stores here today and demanded food supplies be sent to an emergency relief store for unemployed at the City Hall. Several stores sent quantities of food.

Another crowd of about 500 stood about watching the band of unemployed.

The leader of the group was an unidentified preacher, who addressed the jobless at a meeting at the City Hall and led them in prayer before starting the march upon the stores.

There was no disorder, the men and women quietly making known their requests for food and standing about until they were complied with.

Drouth and coal mining troubles have combined to create an acute situation among farmers and miners here.

TAXIS STONED; 7 MEN HUNTED

Mt. Oliver police are hunting seven men who early yesterday hurled paving bricks at two Green taxicabs near the municipal building, Brownsville road. A window of one of the cabs was broken and a large plate glass window of a Brownsville road hat cleaning establishment was shattered.

The license number of the machine in which the seven men were passengers, has been turned over to the police by an eye witness.

Three Suspects Held In Thwarted Robbery

Suspected of an attempted burglary of the P. H. Butler store at 9 Judicial street, Mt. Washington, three men held in Oakland police station were being questioned today by city detectives. The trio, Regis Jordon, 24, of 723 Lowell street, Mike Debelli, 24, of 508 McDonald street, and Dominick Cardollo, 20, of 26 Mayflower street, were arrested at Forbes and Brady street after a chase by police when their automobile caught fire and overturned. They were slightly injured. The robbery was thwarted by a milk truck delivery man.

Playmates at Orphanage Will Bury Drowned Boy

Joseph Tyler's six little playmates at St. Paul's Orphanage, Idlewood, will accompany Joe tomorrow to the altar rail of Holy Rosary Catholic Church, Kelly street and Lang avenue—then Joe won't be with them. He was drowned while attending a picnic.

Joe, 10, went with the other children to the Woodlawn Knights of Columbus camp on Raccoon Creek. Everybody had a "grand time." They returned late, were checked into bed—and all were there except Joe.

A search was started through the woods surrounding the camp. The boy's clothes were found on the bank of the creek, and his body was discovered in three feet of water.

Joe, with the rest, had gone swimming, under adult supervision. Apparently he had gone swimming after dinner.

Tomorrow his playmates, the children whose childish joys and sorrows he had shared for nearly two years at St. Paul's, will share their sorrow. Six small chaps with whom he had played will carry the little white casket.

MONESSEN, Pa., July 18.—The contract for wire cables for the mammoth Golden Gate suspension bridge spanning the entrance to San Francisco's harbor, awarded to the Page Steel and Wire Company here, ensures work for several hundred men during 1932 and part of 1933.

The order calls for 25,000 tons of high carbon steel wire at $6,258,767. While it will be split up with the American Cable Company, another subsidiary of the American Chain Company, the great majority of the work will be done here.

36-INCH CABLES

All wire for the big cables will be drawn here, as well as that for the suspender ropes, which will be finished in the Newark, N. J., American Cable plant. Work is to be started early next year.

C. N. Johns, general manager of the Monessen works, said:

"Each of the two main cables will be 36¼ inches in diameter, made up of 27,572 wires, arranged in 61 strands of 462 wires each. The towers supporting the cables will be 746 feet above water level.

"It will be the largest suspension bridge in the world."

4,200 FOOT SPAN

The bridge will stretch 4,200 feet between supporting piers, with side spans of 1,125 feet, as compared with the Delaware Bridge at Philadelphia, with a main span of 1,750 feet, for which the Page Company manufactured 7,000 tons of wire cables.

G. A. Smith, secretary to Johns, says with the plant working at between 65 and 70 per cent capacity now, it will work at near-capacity during production of the new order.

Increased production at the Donora plant of the American Steel and Wire Company, was indicated today by the announcement that much work previously handled at Braddock would be transferred to Donora. Officials said while the change would not result in an increased number of employes at present, more work would be given to wire drawers and steel production increased.

Suspect in Murder Of 1918 Arrested

SAN FRANCISCO, July 18.—(INS.)—Suspected of a 12-year-old murder, Elton C. Wing, 30, alias Eddie Palmer, was held here today for New York authorities.

Police said Wing was wanted in connection with the holdup and robbery of the East Brooklyn Savings Bank on December 13, 1918. Two men were slain in the robbery.

Farmhand Cremated In Burning of Barn

SCRANTON, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—A man known only as "Tony" aged about 50 years, was burned to death early today when fire destroyed a large barn on the estate of Charles Pallman, at Chinchilla, two miles from here. A cow also was burned to death.

"Tony" was employed as a farmhand by Pallman and slept in the barn which was destroyed.

GROUP STUDIES SPOTS ON SUN

With most of the city's thousands anxious to hide from old Sol, 20 bold astronomers armed with telescopes of their own making climbed the steps of Allegheny Observatory yesterday to take a peep at spots on the sun.

The score: Pittsburgh members of the Astronomical Section of the Academy of Science and Art, and all amateurs, had a weekly study period. They failed to see or photograph the sun spots due to the clouds and mists that hung between. A lecture by P. L. Souther, of Dormont, was given instead, and some of the party remained through last night and early today to study the stars and other inhabitants of the night skies.

The gathering was a preliminary to the first annual assembly of amateur astronomers and telescope makers of the Middle Atlantic states which will be held here August 8 and 9. C. B. Roe is president of the Pittsburgh section, which will be host.

SEEK MAIL VOTE IN TAXI STRIKE

Further efforts looking toward the termination of the taxi strike were being made today by the settlement committee of the cab drivers by the mailing of several hundred cards to men whom they were unable to interview during the canvass of the Pittsburgh taxi drivers.

It is the committee's intention to give every driver an opportunity to express his opinion of the strike. Albert Fabian, cab driver, has been placed in charge of the committee's headquarters at 641 Liberty avenue, it was announced.

Norbert E. Snyder, vice chairman, today predicted that the strike would be definitely terminated before the end of the week.

Treasury Appoints Successor to Hand

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—Daniel W. Bell, assistant commissioner of accounts and deposits, today was promoted to commissioner of accounts and deposits at the Treasury to fill the vacancy caused by the death early this week of Commissioner Robert C. Hand.

Edward F. Bartlet, formerly chief of the division of bookkeeping and warrants, was promoted to become assistant commissioner of accounts and deposits, and Andrew M. Smith, assistant chief of the division of bookkeeping and warrants, becomes chief of that division.

Irene's Pets Are Dumb; Peggy's Much Dumber

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

When you think of bobbed hair you visualize Irene Castle.

Irene just had her Illinois neighbor arrested for cruelty to his livestock.

The embattled farmer claims that he feeds his hogs on the best garbage in Evanston.

We are not an authority on the subject. We refuse to serve on the committee. And, hereby relinquish our share of the estate.

We cannot understand what is meant by the best garbage. Is competition getting so keen that they are sorting and grading that stuff, too?

While Irene won a legal victory, the pigs lost a few pounds. It is going to make the farmer nervous, for a squeal from the sty will be just as legal evidence as one from the still.

Still, Irene means well and she is doing almost as good work among the dumb animals as Peggy Hopkins is doing among the dumber ones.

Boy Shot as Police Battle Gangsters

CHICAGO, July 18.—(INS.)—John Kania, 16, was shot and seriously wounded today during a running gun battle between two squads of police and a trio of gangsters riding in a high-powered automobile.

Kania, an innocent bystander, was felled with a bullet from a sub-machine gun wielded by one of the gangsters. The gangsters escaped.

Auto Crash Victim Believed Bootlegger

CHICAGO, July 18.—(INS.)—One of two victims in a mysterious automobile collision was believed to have been Charles Delmore, notorious years ago as head of a nation-wide liquor ring, and government authorities today were checking his record.

No one witnessed the accident in which the two cars, evident going at high speed, crashed. One of the men was identified as W. S. Dunham, 45, wealthy stock farm owner, of Wayne, Ill. Both died without regaining consciousness.

Steubenville Miners Plan Hunger March

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 18.—Miners' strike relief headquarters were opened here today and announcement made that a "hunger march" of Jefferson County miners would be made on the courthouse Tuesday to demand public money for food and clothing.

Ashurst to Study Silver Situation

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP.)—Senator Henry F. Ashurst, (Dem.), of Arizona, sailed today on the liner Minnetonka to survey economic conditions in Europe.

He said he was going at his own expense to learn, among other things, what the sentiment is in Europe toward stabilization of silver so that the third of the population of the world affected by the "disfranchisement of silver" may be drawn again into world trade.

Teeth Turned Black By Lightning Bolt

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., July 18.—Lightning which struck Leasure Brown, Westmoreland County farmer, residing near Ruffsdale, Friday afternoon, caused his teeth to turn black. The bolt hit him on the back of the head and inflicted burns. Some of his teeth were broken out as well as blackened. The West Penn first aid team from Mt. Pleasant was notified and a physician, who revived Brown, summoned.

Polish Army Officer Executed as Spy

WARSAW, July 18.—(INS.)—Maj. Peter Damkowsky, officer in the Polish Army who was convicted on a charge of revealing vital secrets of the Polish Army to Soviet Russia, was shot as a spy at 7:30 p. m. today.

The execution took place shortly after the chief prosecutor obtained the signature of President Moscicki to the death sentence meted out by the court-martial.

Emsworth Man OK'd For P. & L. E. Job

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—Rudolf Forsberg, of Emsworth, applied today to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to hold the position of chief engineer as well as a directorate in the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie and the Lake Erie and Eastern railroads.

Three Store Theft Suspects Captured

Three men were under arrest in Swissvale today awaiting hearing on charges in connection with the attempted robbery of a chain store at Burton street and Monongahela avenue, Swissvale. Two of the men were captured after a battle by Patrolman Andrew Lotz, who surprised them as they were about to drive off with supplies left in front of the store. The third was taken prisoner by Chief of Police William Campbell after a chase in which several shots were fired. The suspects gave their names as: Edward Sheehan, 26, of 549 Price avenue, North Braddock; Calvin Taylor, 1027 Highland street, and Martin Davis, 39, no home.

Widow Returning From Burial Hurt

READING, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—Motoring after her husband's funeral to the home of a daughter in Lancaster, Mrs. Anna K. Wiegand, was injured in an accident at Ephrata. Another car collided with their machine. Wesley Watson, Ephrata, driver of the other car, was arrested.

Mrs. Wiegand is the widow of the Rev. Dr. John A. Wiegand, Albright College faculty member and Evangelical Church pastor here.

Cadillac Invites You to the Most Gorgeous Presentation of Motor Car Colors

in Automotive History

How bright and sparkling should motor car colors be? How gay and colorful can they be without becoming gaudy? Do most people really prefer the more gorgeous combinations—yet select the more subdued hues through fear of being conspicuous? These are questions that Cadillac executives, distributors and salesmen have asked themselves over and over again—and nobody seems to know the answer.

So Cadillac has decided to try an experiment.

Working in co-operation with the Art and Color Section of General Motors Corporation, Cadillac has brought through its factories a large group of cars—La Salle V-8's, Cadillac V-8's, Cadillac V-12's and Cadillac V-16's — in what are undoubtedly the most unusual color combinations ever conceived.

Many of them will startle the average motorist. A certain phaeton, for instance, is a solid tone of red—even including the leather upholstering. Another is a soft pastel blue—all over—and what a beautiful thing it is! Another matches the green of its wheels with green leather seats and cushions. Another brings you contrasting colors in wheels, fenders and body — a veritable riot of color.

Some of them are, admittedly, a trifle exotic. It was meant that they should be. But even these are strangely beautiful. In fact, you have never seen a motor car display quite so attractive.

These cars have been presented only in the Cadillac Salons in Detroit and New York and the exhibit in its entirety has been moved to Pittsburgh as a special compliment to the Royston Cadillac-La Salle Company in celebration of its second anniversary.

The exhibit will be displayed at the Royston Premier Salon from July 20, 1931, to July 31, 1931. We sincerely hope that you will visit this display, as there has been nothing whatever to compare with it. This display will be open from 9:00 A. M. to 10:30 P. M.

GUARDS PARADE IN INSPECTION AT MT. GRETNA

4,000 March in Review Before Martin and Price; Regiments Honor Dead.

MT. GRETNA, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—The 4,000 Pennsylvania National Guardsmen encamped here abandoned the various gun ranges which have kept them busy for a week and today passed in review before a board of regular army officers. The review and inspection lasted the entire morning. The inspection included their personal appearance, their physical fitness, their individual equipment and the regimental equipment. The soldiers had been given yesterday afternoon off to brush their uniforms, polish their equipment and clean up the camp.

After the inspection, the 109th and 110th Infantry regiments paraded in a memorial service in honor of the dead of the 55th Brigade. Maj. Gen. William G. Price, commanding the guard, joined Brig. Gen. Edward Martin, ing the parade. Later Gen. Price and Lieut. Gov. Edward Shannon, who also commands the 53rd Cavalry Brigade, spoke at memorial services.

The 213th Aircraft reached camp today in 20 trucks sent out yesterday by the 11th Quartermaster's Train. The 213th, from nearly a dozen Eastern Pennsylvania cities, met near Lebanon and entered the camp as a unit, while regular army officers checked its efficiency. The 103rd Observation Squadron, with 140 men, reported for training at the United States Army air depot at Middletown.

Tomorrow will be visitors' day at the camp here. The annual organization meeting of the 109th will be the principal feature of the day.

111TH VETS WILL USE CAMP

The 111th Infantry Veterans' Association has completed plans to take possession of Mt. Gretna training camp for its annual reunion, August 8 and 9, with the 28th Division.

Encampments will be in tents vacated by the State National Guard, according to Maj. John H. Shenkel, general chairman of the committee in charge. The mess equipment and mess halls at Mt. Gretna will be turned over to the veterans for their encampment.

The veterans will board a Pennsylvania Railroad train leaving Pittsburgh at 9 p. m., Friday, August 7, stopping at East Liberty, Pitcairn, Greensburg, Latrobe, Johnstown and Altoona.

Pittsburgh Artillery Camps at Tobyhanna

TOBYHANNA, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—Two National Guard commands, one from Pennsylvania and the other from Maryland, comprising about 1,200 men and 100 officers, came to the Army camp here today for their annual two weeks' training, and two commands, one from Virginia and the other from Connecticut, left for home.

Trains and automobiles brought 605 men and 44 officers of the 176th Field Artillery from Pittsburgh. The advance guard of this outfit, comprising four officers and 50 men, arrived Wednesday. About 600 men and 50 officers of the 110th Light Artillery from Baltimore also arrived by train.

Artillerymen Hurt In Crash of Auto

SCRANTON, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—Three men attached to the United States Field Artillery encamped at Tobyhanna were injured, two of them seriously, and four escaped injury early this morning when the automobile in which they were returning to the camp from this city left the road at Elmhurst and crashed into a telephone pole. The injured are John Pavalic, 20; Steve Balog, 20, and John Murphy, driver. All live in Stamford, Conn.

Police Hold Youth As Hit-Run Driver

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., July 18.—Louis Isabell, 17, of Coal Center, was arrested here today as the driver of a hit-run automobile which struck a horse and buggy at Blainesburg several hours before, seriously injuring I. B. Nixon, 70, West Brownsville truck farmer.

WAR VETERANS PICNIC PLANNED

The date has been definitely set for the Sun-Telegraph annual picnic at Kennywood Park for the service men and women of all wars. It will occur Saturday, August 29. Elaborate preparations are being made for special events.

An earlier date had been originally arranged for the affair, but this was canceled when it was found that it conflicted with one of the state veteran organization conventions.

The committee in charge of this year's picnic includes Bob Cochrane, adjutant of the Allegheny County organization of the American Legion, and Harry Hall, of the Veterans' Service Bureau.

More complete details will be announced later in the Sun-Telegraph.

Four Are Injured In Auto Plunge

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., July 18.—Four persons were injured and four others were unhurt when an automobile en route from Rankin, Pa., to Cleveland, plunged down an embankment and overturned twice on the Elkton road, 15 miles north of here, yesterday.

The injured, all of Rankin, are: Andrew Dudash, 35; Clarence Dudash, 4, his son, and John Hydak, 25, cut and bruised, and Hydak's wife, Mrs. Margaret Hydak, 21, fractured left leg and scalp lacerations.

Escaped Prisoner Hunted by Plane

Drummond, arrested with three others in connection with the holdup of Joseph Shank, gasoline station proprietor at Broad Mountain, escaped from the Carbon County Jail yesterday.

Motorcycle Officer Run Down by Auto

Carl Lippert, motorcycle patrolman on duty at Bigelow boulevard and Bloomfield Bridge, was taken to the Mercy Hospital yesterday after being struck by an automobile attempting a cross-traffic turn onto the bridge.

John Johnston, 26, of 5000 Penn avenue, was arrested.

BALLOT OF BAR FAILS TO CLEAR JUDICIAL RACE

Judge Stadtfeld Given Largest Vote; Pledge Over Indorsement Fails.

Balloting of the Allegheny County Bar Association to show its preferences on Common Pleas and County Courts judicial candidates will have little effect on the number of candidates to enter the fall primaries, a poll revealed yesterday.

Judge Stadtfeld

In the balloting, Judge Joseph Stadtfeld received the largest number of votes for endorsement for Common Pleas Court, his total being 1,126.

Others indorsed for the Common Pleas judgeships besides Judge Stadtfeld, and the number of votes each received follow:

Judges A. B. Reid, 1,075; Sylvester Snee, 898, and Samuel H. Gardner, 713; Attorney Thomas M. Marshall, 669; Judges W. Heber Dithrich, 644, and William H. McNaugher, 625.

Several of the aspirants indicated that if they were not included in the first seven of the association's choices for the Common Pleas bench or the first four for County Court, they would withdraw.

Yesterday's poll disclosed that the only ones who have done so are Attorneys William S. Doty, Edward J. McKenna and Frank K. Willman, in the County Court race.

3 JUDGES INDORSED

Three of the sitting judges in County Court received the association indorsement. They are Judges Richard A. Kennedy, D. Paulson Foster and Sara Soffel. The fourth incumbent is Judge David M. Miller, who is not seeking re-election. In his place the attorneys indorsed Attorney Benjamin Lencher.

Attorneys Clarence B. Nixon, M. A. Musmanno and Burtt Harris, defeated aspirants for the bar indorsement, will remain in the county race.

In the Common Pleas race not one of the defeated aspirants withdrew.

Four of them — Alexander P. Lindsay, Joseph A. Richardson, Robbin B. Wolf and J. Garfield Houston—were undecided as to their plans. Each said he would make a definite announcement Monday or Tuesday.

EGAN TO RUN

Other Common Pleas aspirants not receiving the association indorsement but who said they would continue their candidacies are:

Judge John P. Egan and Attorneys Raymond D. Evans, Frank F. Canuti, Frank A. Pieraski, Joseph H. Reich, John F. Haggerty, William M. Ewing and Carl C. Baldridge.

Three other attorneys, who did not participate in the bar referendum, announced their candidacies in the Common Pleas race yesterday. They are William M. McJunkin, Thomas L. Kane and N. L. Wymard.

CHECK AT CLUB

When they checked the Keystone Athletic Club it was found that although 18 men make it their home, only one of them has been assessed. One man, dead 18 years, was voted at the last election, according to Connors.

In the Cathedral Mansions, Ellsworth avenue, where 215 persons live, 96 have not been assessed. John K. Morrow, chairman of the Registration Board, said yesterday that the investigation has not been under way long enough to develop all the facts that it may. He said:

"As far as we have gone with the check-up of the lists, the indications are that in the so-called controlled wards about 80 per cent of the voters are assessed, while in the independent wards the ratio is about 30 per cent."

The Registration Commissioners say they have listed practically every piece of vacant property in the First, Second and Twenty-second wards and a careful check of the residences given by persons assessed in these wards is being made.

3 on Blimp Safe As Storm Hits Ship

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich., July 18.—(INS.)—The sudden squall which tore the Goodyear blimp, Puritan, from its mooring mast during the national cherry festival here yesterday, did $20,000 damage to the ship, Commander S. H. Shepherd, of Akron, O., estimated today.

The commander and two pilots, Harold Crum and Russell Crosier, were aboard the ship when the squall came in from Grand Traverse Bay. The storm destroyed the nose of the ship and permitted $8,000 worth of helium gas to escape, Shepherd said.

Mexico City Road Blocked to Travel

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—Motorists were warned today by the American Automobile Association against attempting to reach Mexico City by automobile.

The association said it would be at least a year before the capital of Mexico and the United States were connected by an adequate highway, and that motorists should not under any conditions attempt to travel much farther south than Monterey "which is reached by an excellent highway."

PHILA. STARTS BIDS FOR G. O. P.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—Philadelphia opens the national convention bidding on Monday with an appeal to the Republicans to go there for their party meeting next year.

Mayor Mackey, of Philadelphia, with Senators Reed and Davis and a delegation of Philadelphians, will lay the proposal before Chairman Fess of the Republican National Committee here.

This is the first formal offer to go before the Republicans, but informal proposals have been bobbing up from coast to coast for both the Democratic and Republican conventions.

There is a definite opinion among Republican leaders that the convention will be in the Middle West or East. Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican National Committee, is booming Cleveland.

Senator Reed in a telegram today to Chairman Fess emphasized that he indorsed the movement originating in Philadelphia, supported by public officials and public opinion there, to have the next Republican national convention held in that city. He gave assurance of every facility to make the convention a success.

Republican concern over the Democratic inroads in the central states last election is expected to influence the leaders in behalf of the bids from this territory. In addition to Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago are in the running.

POLICE START DRIVE AGAINST USE OF GUNS

Wounding of Woman, Narrow Escape of Second Spurs Drive on Target Fans.

Promiscuous shooting, which last week resulted in the wounding of one woman and the narrow escape from wounding of another, must cease, Public Safety Director James M. Clark said yesterday.

After conferring with Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh, an order for the confiscation of all fire arms found in the possessions of boys and adults on the streets has been issued.

The shooting of Mrs. H. E. Wise, of 7403 Meade street, as she was hanging clothes in the yard of her home, and the narrow escape of Mrs. Catherine Floyd Hubbard of 5514 Center avenue, when the windshield in her automobile was shattered by a bullet, prompted the order.

Mrs. Wise was injured by two boys shooting at a target in the neighborhood.

A new state law, effective September 1, police say, will aid in their work. The new law requires a permit for the purchase of firearms and dealers must make a return on the sale to the state and to the police bureau.

TWO DAYS ONLY—MONDAY & TUESDAY

SOUND FILMS IN FOUR PARKS

Free movies under the auspices of the Kline administration will be inaugurated in four parks tonight, Arthur Burgoyne, chairman of the movie committee, announced yesterday. The showings of current Hollywood releases will continue throughout the summer.

Attractions are: Schenley Park, "Reducing," with Marie Dressler and Polly Moran; Highland Park, Jackie Coogan in "Tom Sawyer"; East Park, Charles Chaplin in "City Light," and McKinley Park, Eddie Cantor in "Whoopee."

Tonight's performances will begin at 9 o'clock.

New talking picture and sound equipment has been installed at the parks within the past few days.

Why Drug the Stomach

When Your Blood Cells Control High Blood Pressure and Most All Chronic Diseases?

The blood stream is merely the medium through which these energies float and carry on their duties. If the stream is thick and slovenly, if engorged, swollen, contracted or tortuous, is not the function hampered or arrested as the case may be? A clot in the brain—apoplexy. If a stoppage in the lungs or limps—dropsy. If in the brain—paralysis. If in the heart—sudden death. If in the eye—blindness. If too much blood—vertigo, insomnia. Repeated colds, low vitality, due to faulty blood. The germs themselves are harmless, but the toxins formed by them produce the poisoning. If an infection takes places, what suffers? The blood. In fever, where is temperature the highest? In the blood. In malaria, where is the germ? In the blood. In diphtheria, smallpox, rheumatism, gout—nearly all infections find their seat in the blood stream. Don't you believe it is time to give some special thought to these basic facts and eliminate this stomach drugging, which you know is wrong, neglecting the one only sure and effective avenue of medication—the blood stream? Lack of protein hinders cells' work. When the body cells undergo degenerative changes in Bright's Disease, arteriosclerosis and in all chronic diseases, we find distinct and demonstrable evidence of impairment in nutrition.

Thousands of patients (men and women) were successfully treated for Rheumatism, Anemia, Debility, Diabetes, Asthma, Kidney Troubles, Heart Trouble, Stomach Trouble, Swollen Glands, High Blood Pressure, Blood and Skin Diseases.

Watch Your Blood Pressure

Patients pay small cost of Serum only. One Serum gives relief in many cases. Come and talk to patients. Hundreds are being treated. They are satisfied—come and see for yourself. 25,000 have taken Blood Cell Serum at this Laboratory.

POLICE CHIEFS OPEN SESSIONS HERE TUESDAY

Business Meetings, Banquets And Boat Ride Scheduled; Officials to Give Talks.

The eighteenth annual convention, Pennsylvania Chiefs of Police Association, will open with a luncheon Tuesday at the William Penn Hotel. Mayor Charles H. Kline will welcome the visiting police heads. Col. G. J. Shoemaker, of Harrisburg, will respond.

Following a business session Tuesday afternoon, a dinner will be held at night with Register of Wills J. N. Mackrell, Judge A. B. Reid and City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt as the principal speakers.

TRIPS FOR WOMEN

Wednesday's program includes business sessions and a sight-seeing trip for the women. Ralph H. Smith, deputy attorney general, will be toastmaster at a luncheon at the William Penn Hotel. The speakers include Raymond D. Evans, assistant United States attorney, and Congressman Harry A. Estep.

Attorney C. B. Prichard, a former safety director; the present director, James M. Clark, and John F. Haggerty, assistant district attorney, will be honor guests and speakers at a 6:30 o'clock dinner.

The visitors will be taken on a boat ride Thursday afternoon as guests of the Carnegie Steel Company to visit industries along the Ohio and Monongahela rivers.

BANQUET TO END MEET

The concluding feature of the convention will be a banquet in the William Penn Hotel at 6:30 p. m. Thursday, at which Judge Frank P. Patterson will be toastmaster. Rabbi Herman Hailpern will give the invocation. The speakers will include former Congressman James F. Burke, District Attorney Andrew T. Park, Frank R. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Company; James F. Malone, secretary of property and supplies of Pennsylvania, and the Rev. Lucian Ducie. The Rev. Dr. W. A. Jones will pronounce the benediction.

GAVE WIFE RUM, DENIED DIVORCE

A husband who teaches his wife to drink has no right to charge her with excessive drinking in seeking a divorce, according to an opinion by Judge James H. Gray in Common Pleas Court.

He refused the plea of Charles R. Henney, of Thornburg road, Thornburg, for a divorce from Mrs. Mary Henney, of 1 Jackson road, Crafton.

The Henneys were married July 20, 1916, and parted in October, 1918, being reconciled for short periods afterwards until 1925. In his opinion, Judge Gray said:

"There is no evidence of cruel and barbarous treatment. They both agreed that up to about October, 1918, they lived a happy life together. He testified that after that time she began drinking liquor to excess. She admitted she drank, but testified that he got her to drink and insisted upon her drinking with him, that she never drank with anyone else. She testified that for the last five years she has not touched liquor. I believe her and do not credit him."

Newspaperman Weds Sea Flier's Ex-Wife

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ruth Thurston Maitland, former wife of Lieut. Lester J. Maitland, one of the Army fliers to Hawaii, and Cecil B. Dickson, of the Associated Press staff in Washington, were married yesterday in Rockville, Md.

Mrs. Dickson is the daughter of the late Senator Thurston, of Nebraska.

France Launches Submarine 'Hope'

CHERBOURG, France, July 18.—(AP.)—The French submarine L'Espoir (Hope) was launched here today.

She is of 1,560 tons displacement, with 11 torpedo tubes and one 100-centimeter gun. There will be a crew of 66, and she was built for a speed of 20 knots.

BE IT CASTLE or COTTAGE
—it's not HOME without a Piano

DEEP in the heart of every man, woman and child there is an irresistible longing to play or to hear music. Only music can adequately express our emotions, console us in sorrow, rejoice with us in happiness.

The standard of all musical expression is the piano. It is the basic instrument, outstanding in its prestige and unequalled in its depth of appeal to human emotions. Without the piano, your home lacks one of life's finest treasures. The undying source of happiness and entertainment, a social asset of first importance, is not yours without a piano.

In the display rooms of the Pittsburgh Music Merchants you will find pianos suited to every type of room and every pocketbook—grand pianos, baby grands, uprights and player pianos.

Stop in one of their stores today and find out how little it costs to own a piano, and the convenient budget terms by which you can arrange payment.

MISSIONARIES IN AFRICA HEAR KDKA PROGRAM

Three Pittsburgh Girls in Ethiopia Delighted on Hearing Voices of Friends

Three girls of Greater Pittsburgh, missionaries in Gorei, Ethiopia, sat up all of one night recently to hear messages from relatives and friends and a concert sent them by KDKA. The program was sponsored by the United Presbyterian, a denominational publication.

Miss Viola Bayne, of 3403 Reuben street, North Side; Mrs. Ruth L. Walker, of Butler, and Miss Isabel Blair, of Washington, have written to KDKA and the Presbyterian to express their gratitude. They said:

"We could hear the voices as plainly as though they were in the room. After the message we heard the beautiful song, 'God Be With You Till We Meet Again,' sung by Mrs. Werner and Miss King. It was about the sweetest music in the world. There was scarcely a dry eye when it was over."

WAIT FOR HOURS

The natives refused to believe the missionaries had heard voices from their friends in America, they said. The girls were so anxious to tune in on the program from Pittsburgh they turned on their radio and adjusted their ear phones hours before the broadcast began.

They used earphones because they feared the loudspeaker might not reproduce such a distant broadcast, they said.

At 9 p. m. they received some music from Rome. Consulting their chart they found that station near KDKA on the dial. One of them listened constantly until 3:45 the next morning. Then they got a program through the National Broadcasting Company. They were not sure whether this was the hookup they wanted, but experimented with the dial until they heard a new whistle.

BRAZIL HEARD

They were none too soon. Immediately they heard J. C. Downs, manager of the United Presbyterian, introduce Dr. Reid, the editor. Then the message was on the air! After the KDKA broadcast was finished, they listened a few minutes to messages from Brazil, but the interest was gone. They said:

"We could not listen to anything else after hearing the home voices."

SCHOLARSHIP FOR ENGINEER

Frank C. Rushing, of 6753 Thomas boulevard, connected with the industrial motor engineering department, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, has been given the the Lamme Memorial scholarship award by the company, enabling him to study in Germany for a year.

Mr. Rushing

The scholarship was established by the company as a memorial to its late chief engineer, Benjamin G. Lamme. Rushing, a native of Range, Tex., was graduated from the University of Texas, later attending the University of Michigan and University of Pittsburgh. He received his master's degree from Pitt in 1930.

MILK AND ICE FUND AIDED

Through the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph several organizations and individuals have contributed to the Pittsburgh and Allegheny Milk and Ice Association. From a lawn fete conducted at the home of Judge George V. Moore, $38.15 was raised by a number of little girls Mary Louise Baker, Mary Ellen Smith, Marion Croup, Eleanor Roberts and Judge Moore's own little daughter Margaret Moore, with the assistance of Helen Morgan, Alice May Wheeler, Josephine Hartzell and Jeannette Croup.

Another group of children living in Hampton Hills gave a playlet and netted $20, which they have sent to the association; the Arcadians Bible Class of the Crafton Methodist Church has contributed $10 and a similar amount has come from the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church; $5 is the gift of the Women's Civic Club of Emsworth and $15 of the Highland Women's Bible Class of the Highland Presbyterian Church.

Vets Here Lauded In Member Drive

East Liberty Post No. 5, American Legion, has been commended by the national organization for its present membership drive which carried the roster up to 770 members, the largest enrollment in Allegheny County. The drive was under the direction of Vice Commander C. P. Spangler. South Hills Post No. 156, Dormont, and the Pittsburgh Pennsylvania Railroad Post No. 500 shared honors for doubling their enrollment. The Legion has more than 1,000,000 members, according to national headquarters.

SEES $1,000,000 SAVING TO CITY

An annual increase of $1,000,000 in the city's water revenue may be possible soon if City Council agrees to continue the Pitometer Survey by the Bureau of Water, James H. Kennon, managing engineer, said yesterday.

The survey has been half completed, Kennon reported, and 14,636,000 gallons of wasted water daily have been discovered and saved. In addition to this, it was pointed out, waste of 1,500,000 gallons daily on Herrs Island was detected by the survey in unmetered and unauthorized fire lines.

So far, the report shows, the Pitometer Survey has cost the city $42,500. To complete the job will take an appropriation of $43,000. At the cost of 14 cents per thousand gallons, the minimum rate at which water is sold here, the value of 14,636,000 gallons plus 6,200,000 which the survey could save in the Highland section, would mean $1,000,000 in revenue to the city, he said.

Coaches to Be Held For Balloon Races

Coaches of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, making the excursion trip to Akron, O., today, will be held at the airport to permit patrons to witness the start of the National balloon elimination race, according to F. R. Cogswell, director of traffic promotion. It had been previously announced by the company that the return trip would be made at 4 p. m., but it will be postponed until the start of the elimination race at 5 p. m. The coaches were to leave Pittsburgh at 9 a. m. from Fifth and Liberty avenues.

Munhall Family's $2,000 Gems Taken

A description of the jewelry, valued at more than $2,000, stolen from the apartment of Samuel Siegal, of 622 Fourteenth street, Munhall, was being broadcast today by Munhall police. The robbery ocurred while members of the Siegal family were visiting relatives.

Hunt for Source Of White House News Leak Fails

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—Theodore Joslin, secretary to President Hoover, said today the White House had failed to find the source of 15 or more "human interest" news stories which had been under investigation because of Hoover's objection to them.

He said the inquiry begun last week of "leaks" to correspondents had been closed.

At the time the investigation was started Joslin outlined a new policy for White House news by saying it should come from "a stated" source.

Secret service operatives at the White House and newspaper correspondents were questioned.

Hall Welcomes Quiz On Commerce Data

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—Dr. Ray O. Hall, dismissed Commerce Department official, said today he viewed "with great satisfaction" the suggestion that a committee of the American Economic Association pass on his controversy with the department.

Secretary Lamont has asked a committee to pass on Hall's protest against deletion of an item of $175,000,000 from data prepared by him on foreign trade which, he said, represented the amount of over-valuation of imports in 1930.

Swope Clan to Hold Reunion in Fulton

The annual Swope family reunion will be held Saturday on the Patterson farm, McConnellsburg, Pa. There will be a basket picnic at noon, followed by sports and amusements for the children. Charles W. Swope, 9 East Montgomery avenue, North Side, is president of the oranization. Forebears of the Swopes came to America 350 years ago.

CHURCH URGES SHOW CLEANUP

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—The Methodist Episcopal Board of Temperance today proposed that drastic steps be taken to clean up the theater nationally, after attacking particularly many of the stage performances seen in Washington during the last season.

An editorial in the board's weekly clip-sheet, describing the experiences of a man characterized as a "professional reformer," asserted the present portrayals of both the stage and screen were "driving the American people toward censorship."

Speaking of the audience at a vaudeville performance in a local motion picture theater, the editorial said, "the stuff they were getting was the kind of antiquated burlesque jokes heard in theaters where the majority of people do a lot of scratching." Of a stock company it added:

"Three out of four of the plays presented by that company during the winter were characterized by a constant flow of profanity and obscenity, by constant drinking of bootleg liquors and by dialogue which clearly indicated that all of the women characters in the play (not the performers) were without any regard for chastity or fidelity as principles or policies. The comedy was frequently 'raw' or worse."

C. D. A. and Knights Outing on Tuesday

The joint annual outing of Western Pennsylvania courts, Catholic Daughters of America and councils of Knights of Columbus, will be held Tuesday at Kennywood Park. Nearly 20,000 are expected to attend.

Sporting events and card parties will be features. Miss Frances Maher, state regent of the Catholic Daughters; Mrs. Katherine Donnelly, state treasurer as well as state officers of the knights will be honor guests. Miss Catherine J. Monahan, is general chairman of the outing.

P. & L. E. to Improve New Castle Station

NEW CASTLE, Pa., July 18.—Announcement was made today by Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad Company and Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company officials that a plan to provide modern station facilities for the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie in this city had been decided upon. The plan involves the joint use of the Baltimore and Ohio station and the expenditure of approximately $250,000 in providing facilities. The Pittsburgh and Lake Erie will erect a waiting room, shelter canopies and concrete platforms opposite the Baltimore and Ohio station and a subway will permit passage to and from the main station.

DR. J. G. HOWARD, DESIGNER, DIES

SAN FRANCISCO, July 18.—(INS.)—Dr. John Galen Howard, 67, one of America's foremost architects, died suddenly of heart disease in a Turkish bath today.

Associated for the past 29 years with the school of architecture of the University of California at Berkeley, Dr. Howard was internationally known.

Born at Chelmsford, Mass., in 1864, Dr. Howard studied at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the Ecole des Beaux-Arts in Paris, winning medals for his work in mathematics, archaeology and design.

He first established his architectural practice in New York, designing the Hotel Renaissance, Hotel Essex and a number of public buildings in the New York City parks.

Daughters of Vets To Picnic Thursday

The Daughters of Union Veterans will hold their annual picnic Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Catherine Hamilton, Blawnox.

BUS STATION TO BE STUDIED

The possibility of off-street bus terminals for Pittsburgh will be discussed at a joint meeting of the off-street terminal facilities section of the better traffic committee and the municipal affairs committee of the Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon meeting tomorrow noon in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

The use of streets as free parking garages during lay-overs from trips; curb loading for long-distance trips and other matters will be discussed, according to Edward B. Lee, chairman of the traffic group.

Figures of City Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre show nearly 1,800 buses entering and leaving the downtown triangle during the 10½-hour period of the annual May traffic count, many of which parked on downtown streets between trips, adding to congestion.

Mutual agreement of the various bus companies might lead to a union bus station similar to other cities, Lee stated.

A plan of action leading to the ruling of buses off the streets for loading purposes will be decided upon at the meeting.

THRICE A HERO, LAD SAVES TRIO IN RUNAWAY CAR

Boy of 12 Caps Previous Rescues With Rush to Aid Of Imperiled Children.

Today, for the third time within three weeks, Davie Packler, 12, of 36 Overhill street, was being hailed as a hero. His latest rescue took place when he saved the lives of three youngsters, all under eight years of age, caught in a runaway automobile on Overhill street.

The automobile had gone more than a block, rushing toward a steep slope with the three terrified children in it, before Davie was able to get it stopped. The children had been playing "auto" in the vehicle, and Marvin Cohen, 4, of 35 Overhill street, who was the "chauffeur," released the emergency brake. Three children on the running-board of the car jumped. The screams of the remaining three in the car attracted Davie's attention, and leaping into the car he pulled the brake on, at the same time changing the course of the auto, which came to a sudden stop.

The children were Marvin Cohen, David Goldenberg, 6, of 36 Overhill street, and Esther Yelner, 8, of 35 Overhill street. The automobile was owned by William Fiedler, 30, of New York, who was visiting relatives in the vicinity.

Davie's other rescues include that of a drowning girl, whom he carried to safety in a swimming pool three weeks ago. Wednesday night he was again a hero when he rushed in front of a speeding car and saved the life of a little girl, Anna May Evans, 3½, of 37 Overhill street. Davie is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Packler.

SAVED THESE THREE!—Davie, 36 Overhill street, lecturing three neighbors, all of 35 and 36 Overhill street, about playing in autos. One released the brakes on a car, Davie chased, leaped aboard, steered to safety and stopped. It was his third heroic episode in three weeks; he saved a girl from drowning and a baby from a speeding auto.

BANK SUSPECTS FIGHT RETURN

City Detective Walter Monaghan is in New York today awaiting the final hearing Tuesday of five suspects of the $50,000 robbery of the Manchester Savings Bank and Trust Company, North Side, who are fighting extradition to Pittsburgh. The men, James F. Foley, Joseph F. Flynn, Samuel Ruben, Robert Maple and Barney Nienfeld, were arrested in New York following information by Pittsburgh detectives that they were there.

The men were indicted here by the grand jury on a charge of bank robbery. Inspector of Detectives Frank R. Boyd said that there was little doubt that the men would be extradited, and that if they were, they would arrive in Pittsburgh Wednesday. The men are said to be wanted for other bank robberies in Philadelphia, New York, New Jersey and in other cities in the East.

$2,000,000 Brewery Forfeiture Asked

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP.)—United States Attorney Medalie today started legal action whereby he hopes to have forfeited to the federal government $2,000,000 worth of property belonging to the Consumers' Brewing Company, whose supposedly abandoned brewery in the fashionable Sutton place section on the East River was raided a few weeks ago.

The property includes the brewery and its site, and the forfeiture is demanded on the ground that officers found 246,000 gallons of molasses mash, 39,000 gallons of whisky, distilling apparatus, and other equipment indicating the plant was in full operation.

Grocery Is Robbed By Gypsy Women

ERIE, Pa., July 18.—(INS.)—Two gypsy women, attired in native garb, perpetrated a daring daylight robbery at the grocery store operated by Mrs. Blanche Shorts, 2311 French street, police learned today.

According to Mrs. Shorts, who was robbed of $65, the two women entered the store late yesterday afternoon and forced her into a rear room. They escaped in a maroon colored touring car.

Baby Killed, Grandfather's Dream True

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., July 18.—(INS.)—Two days ago, Will H. Young, president of the Seaman's Bank dreamed that his granddaughter, 18 months old Anna McKenna, child of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest McKenna, of Newton, had been killed by an automobile, and today his dream had become a reality.

The child was killed as she lay in her carriage outside a store here. An automobile, operated by Mrs. Mollie K. Jaffe, of New Haven, Conn., careened down a hill and crashed the carriage against the store front.

BANDITS STEAL CARGO OF SILK

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—(INS.)—Six armed bandits kidnaped two truck drivers and hijacked their truck loaded with a valuable silk cargo on the northern outskirts of this city early today. Hours later the chauffeurs were dumped unceremoniously from their captors' automobile in a lonely section of Chestnut Hill.

The truck stolen was loaded with 50 cases of silk valued at approximately $35,000.

Starting Positions Drawn For National Contest Beginning at Akron Field.

AKRON, O., July 18.—(AP.)—Army balloons will take off both first and last in the twenty-first the advantage of watching prograce from Municipal airport here tomorrow, the draw for positions today revealed.

Army No. 1 bag will get away in the last or preferred position. The crew of this balloon will have the advantage of patching progress of all its competitors and determining how the wind currents lie aloft. They will also have the advantage of a half-hour's less travel in the bright sunlight which expands the gas and causes gradual loss through the value of lifting power.

START AT 5 P. M.

Army Bag No. 2 takes the air first. It is to get under way at 5 p. m., with the other entries following at five-minute intervals as follows: Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association; Radio Station WJR, U. S. Navy and Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation.

Pilots were busy today inspecting their bags. Three civilian and three service entries were to compete for the P. W. Litchfield trophies and a chance to represent the United States in 1931 international race at a site not yet selected. First and second place winners qualify for the international event with Ward Van Orman of Akron, automatically qualified through winning last year's international contest, rounding out the American team.

One former international and two former national titleholders are included in tomorrow's field. Ed J. Hill, veteran Detroit balloonist, piloting the entry representing Radio Station WJR, was winner of the 1927 international.

AIDES LISTED

Lieut. T. G. W. Settle, chief of the Navy Inspection Bureau at the Goodyear-Zeppelin plant here, is handling the Navy entry. He was winner of the 1929 national.

Frank Trotter and Roland Blair, winner of the 1930 national, are again flying the Goodyear-Zeppelin entry. Trotter is pilot and Blair aide.

Capt. Karl S. Axtater, pilot of Army Balloon No. 1, and Lieut. Edgar M. Fogelsonger, pilot of Army Balloon No. 2, both have participated in previous national events. L. P. Furculow, who pilots the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association bag, is making his first appearance in a balloon race.

Aides beside Blair, are Station WJR, Arthur Schlosser; U. S. Navy, Lieut. Wilfred Bushnell; Army No. 1, Lieut. M. H. Couch; Army No. 2, Lieut. John Tarro; Eastern Shore Association, John Reiker.

Pittsburgher Slain In Holdup Attempt

INDIANAPOLIS, July 18.—(AP.)—In his second attempt to rob a grocery here, Earl F. Beals, 42, formerly of Battle Creek, Mich., was shot and killed last night by Benjamin Sherrod, store manager.

Beals' widow, who said his death left her penniless, told police a fortune teller two months ago had predicted her husband would be shot to death. Detectives said Beals was on parole from Eastern Penitentiary of Pennsylvania after conviction of a felony. Mrs. Beals said they were married in 1920 and came here a year ago from Pittsburgh.

BABY CONTEST ENTRIES GROW AS DATE NEARS

Sun-Telegraph-Kroger Event At Picnic August 4 to Draw Many Child Beauties

Pittsburghers will get a feast for the eyes when they attend the second annual Sun-Telegraph-Kroger Stores baby beauty contest at Kennywood Park, Tuesday, August 4.

Last year's contest was a great success, but from the present outlook it would seem that this year's will surpass that of last year, not only in the number of babies but in the beauty of the children entered.

WIDE INTEREST

There seems to be an unusual interest in this year's affair, which will be the feature of the Kroger Stores' annual picnic. Entries have come in by the hundreds. In fact, in many families two and three children have been entered by their parents. From the pictures that have already been turned in it looks as though there will be plenty of child beauty.

Child beauty is the only thing that counts in this contest. Clothes will not be considered—neither will the physical condition be considered other than as it would apply to the beauty of the child. In other words, this is not a contest to find the healthiest or the best-dressed babies—beauty is the only thing that counts.

THREE CLASSES

There are three classes for boys and girls under 5 years of age, and silver cups will be awarded as prizes to the children selected as the most beautiful—three in each class. Impartial judges will make the awards.

Entry blanks are ready at your nearest Kroger store. There is no cost to you. The Sun-Telegraph and the Kroger stores will welcome your children in the contest.

Colombian Cabinet Resignations Slated

BOGOTA, Colombia, July 18.—(AP.)—President Olaya Herrera said today the ministers will turn in their resignations next Wednesday to give him a free hand in reorganizing the cabinet. The President will open the new Congress on Monday.

REAL ESTATE and BUILDING

SALES REVEAL SMALL HOMES NOW DESIRED

House Market in Pittsburgh Proves Recent Survey of National Realty Group.

By EDWARD W. GOSS
Real Estate Editor.

With few exceptions purchasers of homes in the Pittsburgh district are confining themselves to the small houses, judging from realtors' reports of sales.

Several realtors point out that the type of home now finding purchasers in Pittsburgh helps to demonstrate the accuracy of the recent national survey made by the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

LOW PRICES PREVAIL

In making the survey the national association based its calculations on the most recent 10,000 homes sales made by its members. The survey indicated that the greatest present demand is for homes ranging from $5,000 to $7,000. The association also stressed that an urgent need was manifest for building of homes that could be sold within the $5,000 to $7,000 price bracket.

Among the recent sales of small homes is listed the transfer of a six-room brick home at 937 Flemington avenue, Fourteenth Ward. This property has been acquired for $6,350 by Mr. and Mrs. John Vetter through the offices of White and Company, realtors.

A two-story frame dwelling with a three-car block garage, Frankstown avenue, near Lang avenue, Thirteenth Ward, has been sold through the same realtors to Mrs. A. Y. Yonkers for Harry Corshenhausen. The price paid, according to the brokers, was $5,500. The lot measures 25x135 feet.

SELL HILL HOME

White and Company has also sold for James M. Short to Mrs. Mary A. Cunningham the nine-room frame house at 312 Meridan street, Mt. Washington. The realtors then resold the property for Mrs. Cunningham to Mrs. Julia Alexander for an approximate consideration of $4,500. The lot is 40x130 feet.

PUBLIC VIEWS ESTATES HOME

A six-room brick veneer house with tile bath and two-car garage attached to the house has been opened for public inspection in Frankstown Estates, latest Penn Township sub-division.

The house, of Georgian architecture constructed on a plot fronting 50 feet on Frankstown road and extending back a distance of 150 feet, was designed by Architect Raymond A. Fisher, Carnegie Institute of Technology faculty member.

The home, now open for inspection, is the second to be completed in the plan. Two more homes are being plastered and plans are completed for four more houses of somewhat similar design.

Developers of Frankstown Estates announce that all streets are now graded and several squares of sidewalks and rolled curbing laid.

314 Mortgages on Record for Week

A total of 314 mortgages, valued at $1,398,238.85, were placed on record from July 9 to and including July 15, reads the weekly mortgage report of C. C. C. Stotler, secretary-treasurer of the Title Guaranty Company.

Of this total 291 with a valuation of $1,212,941.66 were straight mortgages. The remaining 23 were purchase money mortgages valued at $185,297.19. Eighty-nine of the straight mortgages were to corporations, 119 to building and loan associations and 83 to individuals.

Architect Stresses Beauty in Factory

Buildings which look prosperous have a remarkable advertising value, William Orr Ludlow, chairman of the committee on industrial relations of the American Institute of Architects, declares in stressing the importance of making a factory, disposal plant or waterworks attractive in appearance. Although this is a machine age, beauty in buildings is as desirable as ever, in Lundlow's opinion.

Improved Property Bought for $17,000

An improved property in Farragut street, Eleventh Ward, has been conveyed by Charlotte McKennan to David L. Clark for a consideration totaling $17,000. The lot size is 19x135 feet.

Sharpsburg Sale Closed for $6,000

A parcel of land 35x101 feet in Noble avenue, Sharpsburg, has been deeded by Ludwig Frederich to George P. Johe. The consideration was recorded at $6,000.

PITTSBURGHER WINS CONTEST

Miss R. Alice Dean, 6723 McPherson boulevard, is a winner of one of the tours of famous American homes, according to notification received by her from the National Home Furnishing Program, Chicago, under whose auspices a nation-wide home styling contest has just closed.

Miss Dean

Miss Dean in preparing her entry material for her entry in the contest was counseled by S. E. Craig, Jr., of the Joseph Horne Company. Miss Dean will join the tour at Chicago, August 1.

On the itinerary of the tour will be Henry Ford's museum of colonial relics at Dearborn, Mich., Niagara Falls, Boston, New York City, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Asheville, N. C., Nashville, Tenn., New Orleans, Galveston, San Antonio and El Paso, Tex.

The party will travel in a chartered pullman with all expenses paid.

Club to Finance Grotto Building

An organization known as the Foundation Club has been formed to assist in the financing of the new $200,000 Grotto Temple, now under construction in East Montgomery avenue, North Side.

The membership of the organization is composed exclusively of Islam Grotto members. The officers of the club are E. Sydney Youden, president; J. Boyd Euwer, vice president; George G. Schmidt, treasurer and Louis H. McMahan, secretary.

Insurance Companies Back Real Estate

The great life insurance companies of America, which already have investments totaling billions of dollars in real estate mortgages, have not lost faith in real estate and stand ready to invest additional billions when the demand for space warrants new construction. This was the message from the insurance companies to the National Association of Building Owners and Managers delivered by Osgood F. Fifield, vice president of the Massachusetts Life Insurance Company, of Springfield, Mass., at the recent annual convention of the association, held in Seattle, Wash.

Modern Home Goes In North Side Sale

In the Twenty-seventh Ward, John H. Piquet has taken title to a modern eight-room brick veneer home with garage at 3408 California avenue, from John E. Hess. In part consideration Hess accepted a three-room frame dwelling on a lot 30x91½ feet at 910 Reiss street, Twenty-seventh Ward. The sale was handled by R. Frank, North Side and Bellevue realtor.

Small Communities Benefit by Zoning

According to a survey of zoning laws and ordinances for 1930, just completed by Norman L. Knauss of the division of building and housing of the Bureau of Standards, one of the striking developments in the zoning field is the control of municipal growth of smaller communities by zoning.

Old Brick Houses Prove Easily Sold

When it comes to the resale of a house real estate men have found that the brick structure makes as great an appeal to the buyer when it is sold as when it was new. The colors only mellow with age, and with the vines that often clamber up the brick, the wall becomes more charming as the years go by.

$150,000 Trade Deal Involves Houses, Garages

An exchange deal, said to have totaled $150,000, has been consummated through the office of the Samuel W. Black Company, represented by H. H. Hunter and S. H. Ebberts.

In the transaction the W. L. Stewart property, consisting of nine brick dwellings and 14 garages in Beeler street, has been conveyed to an unnamed buyer. In part payment, the realtors say, Stewart took title to a large residence in the Squirrel Hill section. The Samuel W. Black Company has been appointed renting agents for the Beeler street property.

LOANS REACH LARGE VOLUME

Real estate mortgage loans made by the Prudential Insurance Company of America during the first six months of 1931 amounted to $71,242,750, officials of the company declare.

Adhering to its policy of aiding in the construction of homes and apartments, the company loaned $48,044,938.69 of this sum for such purposes. There were also 7,599 dwelling loans for $40,580,947.25 and 355 apartment loans for $7,463,991.44, affording, in all, living accommodations for 11,842 families.

Farm loans totalled 2,865 for $13,823,904.90, and the remainder of $71,242,750.06 loaned during the first half of 1931 is represented by 126 mortgages on city properties other than those for residential purposes, the total of these being $9,373,906.47.

Timber Men Form Finance Company

Leading retail lumber dealers throughout the United States have organized a new finance organization known as the National Homes Finance Corporation, to provide financing for new owner-occupied homes on a 15-year basis.

The corporation will lend up to 75 per cent of the combined value of house and lot. Mortgages carrying 6 per cent interest, monthly payments of $8.44 per thousand dollars will be financed. This service is expected to be available in 800 markets immediately, in 500 additional markets this year, and eventually in several thousand communities.

Concrete Footings Best for Chimneys

Chimneys, whether located on the interior or the exterior of the home, should always rest on solid concrete footings, extending well below maximum frost penetration and of sufficient width and thickness to carry the weight of the chimney without danger of settlement.

SEE REVIVAL OF BUILDING

"The carpenter's hammer will some day be heard again in the land."

This is the conclusion drawn by the National Association of Real Estate Boards from its seventeenth semi-annual survey of the real estate market, which revealed that but few representative American cities are overbuilt, either with apartment structures or single family residences.

The survey covered 381 cities located throughout the country, and the figures furnished were secured during the last 30 days, the association reports. It is a comprehensive study made by the local member boards of the association of the supply and demand situation in buildings of all types, rent trends, the present status of the real estate market and of the real estate money market.

Of the 381 cities which reported on realty sales, 49 per cent say their market is the same or more active than at this time last year, while a less active market is shown by 51 per cent.

Brokers' License Laws Tightened

CHICAGO, July 16.—Extension of the legal regulations covering people who are permitted to sell real estate is shown by a survey completed last week by the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The survey covers new legislation enacted in 11 states in which the brokers' license laws have been strengthened so that in the future brokers and salesmen in this field must be even better qualified before they attempt to call on prospects.

Blame Politicians For Heavy Taxes

Incompetent politicians and inefficient governments were charged with the major responsibility for the high cost of government by Dr. Simon E. Leland, of the University of Chicago, in a recent address before a meeting of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers.

Dr. Leland asserted that there is more need for common honesty and sense in public office to keep cost and taxes within bounds than anything else.

Home Ownership Claims Thought

The housing situation on three continents will occupy the attention of the third International Congress of Building Societies and Building and Loan Associations in meeting here, August 10 to August 15. Financiers from Europe, Great Britain, Australia and the United States will discuss promotion of home ownership.

Highland District Home Finds Buyer

A modern brick home and garage, 6030 Grafton street, has been sold by the J. H. Aronson Company, realtors, for Thomas McKennan to D. L. Clark, Jr., for a private consideration. The lot is 70x130 feet. The purchaser will occupy the house, according to the realtors.

SCHWAB GREETS SCHOOL CHUMS

Charles Schwab greeted several hundred of his old friends, acquaintances and former school mates at the thirty-third annual basket picnic, reunion and dance of the Loretto Club, of Allegheny County, yesterday at Immergrun Grove, Loretto.

Schwab, looking very fit in knickers, arrived in the midst of the dancing. He greeted his mother, who was watching the dancers on the outdoor pavilion. He mingled freely with his guests, and exchanged greetings with many of his former school friends. He remained at the park for more than a hour.

Besides dancing, sports, a picnic supper, vaudeville and a cake walk were features of the day. Many Pittsburghers were there. The general committee consisted of William A. Kessler, Homestead postmaster, manager; E. C. Shaffer, assistant; Oscar Topper, J. B. Carney, W. T. Burke, Ray Pfoff and John Burkey, from Homestead; Charles A. Yinger, Elworth Meyers, Nonie Storme, Edwin McGough and James A. McCoy, from Pittsburgh; Frank Willdebrand, Donora; H. J. Bearer and Frank Flick, from Monessen, and J. C. Callan, from Edgewood.

Soviet Ready To Make Cotton Synthetically

Perfection of a machine which "cotonizes" rough bast fibers, converting them into manufacturable textiles, is announced by the Institute for Experimental Research.

The announcement follows closely publication of Russia's plan to increase its output of actual cotton to the point where imports will be unnecessary by next year. Development of the cotton substitute would provide cheaper textiles to augment the production of cotton goods, vast quantities of which are needed by the population.

Ex-Bank Cashier Held in Forgery

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., July 18.—J. P. Byrne, former cashier of a defunct bank at Republic, is under arrest on a forgery charge, involving a check for $97.49. The prosecutor, G. B. Shaffer, charges Byrne with affixing his (Shaffer's) signature and mark on a check in October, 1929. Shaffer is unable to read or write. Byrne will be arraigned Wednesday.

DIVING FATAL TO LIFE GUARD

James Taylor, 19, life guard at a swimming pool at Rock, near Bluefield, W. Va., drowned in the pool, according to word received here late yesterday. Taylor's body was found in the pool an hour and a half after he had been seen making fancy dives. Physicians believe he struck his head on the bottom of the pool. He was a son of Mrs. J. P. Creagar, 251 Penn avenue extension, Turtle Creek.

Child Killed by Auto, Woman Driver Held

Mildred Burge, 6, died in Columbia Hospital last night from brain concussion following injury received yesterday when she was struck by an auto in front of her home in Verona boulevard, Sandy Creek. Mrs. A. R. Schell, 1215 Virginia avenue, Oakmont, who, police say, drove the car, is being held.

Big Increase in Garages Predicted by Managers

A ray of hope for the building industry is held out in the report of the downtown garage committee of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, which predicts the rapid increase of downtown parking accommodations in the near future. The report was presented to the recent twenty-fourth annual meeting of the association held in Seattle, Wash.

Although there is a supply of office space on the market adequate to meet the needs of business in the United States and Canada for several years, there is actually a shortage in many American cities of parking space for businessmen and shoppers to park their cars.

Parking regulations are becoming more stringent each year in the business districts, and at the same time the increasing number of automobiles in use makes it difficult to find places to park the cars. This points to the inevitable increase of parking facilities provided by private enterprise. Possibly some of this space will be provided in vacant lots, but a great deal of it will be provided in garages where cars can be washed, serviced and protected from the elements. This, of course, suggests some new business for the building industry.

The committee has found that office buildings with garages in conjunction have had a decided advantage competing with buildings which lack such facilities.

GARBAGE BIDS TO BE STUDIED 2 MORE WEEKS

Council to Delay Action On New Concern Pending Testimony by Chicago Man

Award of the 1932 garbage and rubbish removal contracts will be delayed at least two weeks by City Health Director C. B. Maits pending continuation of a council-manic investigation into personnel and equipment of the Modern Service Company, it was learned yesterday.

The Modern Service Company's bid for three years was $1,000,000 lower than that of its competitors, the American Reduction Company and the Allegheny Garbage Company.

Opened earlier than usual this year to permit competition, the bid awards will be delayed until Council hears the testimony of Samuel A. Greeley, Chicago incineration engineer, who will be brought here by Francis Guthrie and Attorney Earl Reed. Greeley is expected to tell Council what he knows of garbage and rubbish collection as it affects Pittsburgh.

DISPUTE OVER PLANS

At a public hearing last week Attorney Reed charged that Dr. Maits refused him permission to see plans of the Modern Service Company's incinerators. Maits then pointed out he refused the request because he had not yet had opportunity to study the plans.

Later, however, an engineer of the American Reduction Company visited Maits' office in the City-County Building and went over the specifications in detail.

Attorney Charles B. Prichard, treasurer of the new company, outlining the plan the new company proposes to carry out if given the contract, said:

"Our method would be the last word in garbage and rubbish disposal. Odorless incinerators would be used and a bond furnished to protect the city against any possible inability to have the incineration plants built by next January 1. We bid low last year, but were refused the business because there wasn't sufficient time to enable us to build. The bids were opened in December. We could have our plants in operation within 90 days after the contract is let.

PLANTS CLEAN

"The plants—looking more like school buildings than disposal plants—would be absolutely clean. They are now in use in many cities through the United States. They can be built anywhere without evil effects to neighbors.

"Trucks would be steel covered. There would be no opportunity for refuse to fall from the trucks into the streets, causing a disease menace. The trucks would be backed up to the circular incineration furnaces and dumped with as little delay as possible."

"The incineration plants would have a daily capacity of 2,400 tons—about twice the amount of garbage collected daily in Pittsburgh.

"All we want is an opportunity to show the citizens of Pittsburgh we can save them $1,000,000 in three years."

James J. Deighan, for eight years adjutant of the department of Pennsylvania, American Legion, will be honor guest at a banquet in Westinghouse cafeteria, East Pittsburgh, August 6. It will be given by Woodrow Wilson Post No. 2, East Pittsburgh. Lieut. Frank Schoble, blinded while in service and a past national commander, will be the principal speaker.

Col. Morris, 'Father Of Army Polo,' Dead

NEW YORK, July 18.—(INS.)—Col. Willis V. Morris, 55, known as the "father of Army polo," died last night from injuries suffered Saturday in a polo match at Meadowbrook.

Morris was a leader in Army polo for more than 30 years. He played with teams at West Point, Omaha, Leavenworth, Kan., Washington and in the Philippines.

Fear of New Slides Halts Rescue Work

MEXICO CITY, July 18.—(AP.)—Rescue workers today gave up efforts to reach four men who were buried in a landslide at the Merced sand mines near here Thursday. The work was considered too dangerous in view of threatened new slides and it was decided there was no chance of any of the entombed men remaining alive.

WIFE RAN BILLS, CHARGE IN SUIT

A wife's extravagance ruined the marriage of Russell C. Lang, 38, 801 Millvale avenue, auditor for the J. C. Penny Company, according to his testimony in Common Pleas Court. Judge Samuel H. Gardner granted him a divorce from Marion B. Lang, 28, of Donora, on the ground of desertion. They were married on Christmas Day, 1919, and parted November 17, 1925. Lang testified:

"Our difficulties were due to the simple reason that at different times she ran a lot of bills in different department stores. It seemed I could not make enough money to supply her with or to pay the bills. Several times I had to borrow $400 or $500 to pay bills. I gave her all the money I made. I borrowed $250 to pay a bill the day she left. She just took her clothes and left and I never heard from her since."

Singer Wakens Poor In Dormitory, Ousted

When Salvatore Gazazza, who said he was a former operatic tenor from Chicago, tried out his voice on several jazz songs at midnight 500 men at the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor, Duquesne way, shouted, "Put him out." According to officers of the relief society, Gazazza was the first guest at the sleeping quarters ejected for singing.

GERMANY GIRDS FOR FINAL TEST IN DEBT CRISIS

Von Hindenburg Imposes Rigid Decrees on Outside Currency; Plan 'Self Help.'

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Universal Service Special Cable.

BERLIN, July 18.—While German statesmen today presented their politico-financial compromise program to the French government in Paris, President Paul von Hindenburg promulgated a draconian decree designed to prevent the flight of capital from Germany.

Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius told the French they could not agree to any outside control of German finances save by an international committee, and intimated that Germany had measures of self-help at her disposal.

One important means by which Germany will aid herself out of the slough of financial despond was the Hindenburg decree, second emergency decree the president has signed since his return from his vacation at Neudeck.

The decree gives the government the right to purchase with reichsmarks any foreign exchange or securities possessed by anyone paying taxes in Germany.

SEVERE PENALTIES

Under penalty of up to 10 years imprisonment, all persons subject to taxation in Germany must advise the Reichsbank of any and all foreign moneys, securities, drafts and checks in their possession, either within Germany or abroad.

Moreover, the reichsbank may demand the purchase of all such foreign exchange or securities for the German reichsmark at such official rate as the reichsbank may fix.

The decree specifically includes foreign stocks, bonds and other securities, including travelers checks. There is no exemption for foreigners living in Germany who pay taxes here. The new decree became effective immediately.

PREPARE FOR CRISIS

Another decree, effective July 22, compels Germans traveling outside the borders of their country to pay $25 each time they seek a visa. In this way Germany is preparing her own way should the conferences in Paris and in London fail of their object.

Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and Foreign Minister Julius Curtius arrived in Paris today with the following program, it is learned reliably, which the cabinet agreed upon before their departure from Berlin:

1—They will not discuss any French demands that touch in the slightest on Germany's full sovereignty or independence.

2—They are willing to discuss guarantees of an economic and financial nature for any credits extended the reich.

3—They will reject any and all conditions that openly or veiledly mean foreign financial supervision or control of the public debt.

4—They are willing to discuss a check system by the Bank of International Settlements on expenditures of credits, providing that an international commission, on which Germany is represented, be appointed to sit outside the reich's borders.

5—Germany will be willing that the French and all other European nations be invited to negotiate customs unions with Germany, and that until such invitation is accepted or rejected, the Austro-German project will be postponed; or the customs union idea may be incorporated into the United States of Europe idea.

Germany is willing to drop pocket battleship "C," the third to be built, which as yet is nothing but blueprints.

RECEDES ON CRUISER

Chancellor Bruening, it develops, had to recede from his previous suggestion to Washington that cruiser "B" would be dropped because of the immovable opposition of Gen. Groener, minister of national defense.

Gen. Groener, who is said to have acted in full accord with President von Hindenburg, flatly declared that if Chancellor Bruening contemplated halting construction of the second vest-pocket battleship, he would resign.

If the French are adamant, Dr. Bruening, it is believed here, will declare that Germany must then renounce foreign financial aid and must undertake drastic "national self help." This would begin with a moratorium of all foreign debts in order to keep money in the country.

At the same time, Chancellor Bruening is prepared to tell the French that immediately on returning to Berlin, he will reorganize the government by taking in all nationalist parties, including the Hitlerites, to whom the French object, in order to put through such a severe program. This would probably necessitate the declaration of a state of siege to hold down the Communists.

FRANCE AGREES TO JOIN PARLEY

oning with the fact that both Washington and London are not in sympathy with many aspects of the elaborate "suggestions" put forward by Paris.

America and Britain are known to be resolutely opposed in particular to those phases of the French proposals which would, in effect, put Germany to the slightest extent under foreign financial tutelage.

So far as possible, Laval and Briand desire to iron out their difficulties in the atmosphere of Paris, feeling certain they can gain more here than in London's neutral environment. Their idea is to proceed as far as possible to agreement before crossing the channel to London.

STILL FAR APART

While the French communique which came on the heels of the afternoon session described the Franco-German discussions as having been of a "most frank and cordial character," in "a broad exchange of views," it was plain that the statesmen of the two nations are still far apart.

Tomorrow morning, representatives of Great Britain, the United States, Germany, Belgium, Italy and Japan will gather at Premier Laval's office for a general round-table discussion. Then, following a dinner tendered by the French premier, all the visitors will withdraw, leaving the French and Germans again to go hammer and tongs at their particular problems.

The official communique, issued shortly after the Franco-German talks ended at 7:35 p. m. declared:

"During the conversations, Chancellor Bruening gave the French ministers detailed information regarding the financial and economic situation in his country, also the complex aspects of the problems they impose.

FRANK EXCHANGES

"M. Flandin, the French minister of finance, presented the French government's suggestions concerning remedies which could attenuate, if not solve, the crisis.

"Following this there was an extended exchange of views of the most frank and cordial character, involving not only measures to overcome the financial crisis, but also the ensemble of Franco-German relations, with a mutual eagerness to effect a lasting collaboration between the two peoples.

"The conversations will continue tomorrow afternoon.

"At 10 o'clock tomorrow morning there will be a general conference in M. Laval's office, to be attended by representatives of those countries who are to participate in the London conference, and who are in Paris en route to London."

It was obvious that while the Germans exercised the greatest discretion in the discussion today, they did not take kindly to what M. Flandin described in his presentations as "suggestions of the French government relative to remedies envisaged for improving the situation."

U. S. ACTIVE

The Americans were secretively most active throughout the day, even while being outside the walls of the Franco-German meeting. The American cabinet officers conferred with technical and other experts on various aspects of the problems to be dealt with here and in London.

Tonight they received from the lips of the German chancellor and foreign minister much the same story which Dr. Bruening told Premier Laval and his confrees.

An ordinary Pullman car brought Chancellor Bruening and Dr. Curtius into the French capital at 2:05 p. m. at the Gare de L'Est. On the flowery platform, they were met by Premier Laval, M. Briand, and other members of the government. Thunderous "Hochs" from the Paris German colony and cheers and jeers from French spectators greeted them as they left for their hotel. After courtesy visits, the conferences began.

U. S. Opposes French Debt Proposal

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(Universal.)—Ambassador Edge in Paris today informed the White House by telephone that Secretaries Stimson and Mellon will leave tomorrow for London to attend the German relief conference.

Stimson and Mellon have been officially designated to represent the United States at the meeting which opens Monday, to consider political and economic problems pertaining to the German crisis and the European financial situation.

What the French will demand at London in the way of guarantee in return for a loan to Germany still appeared uncertain. This much is known, however, that the United States will flatly reject the French proposal for a guaranteed government loan to Germany by the other World Powers.

AUTHORITY LACKING

In official quarters, it was pointed out today that the State Department has no authority to commit the United States, either to make a foreign loan, or to guarantee a loan from private sources. If the French put forth such a loan proposal at London, it will be rejected posthaste.

That France had suggested the making of a government loan to Germany was confirmed by Secretary Stimson in his telephone conversations with officials here.

The administration is also inclined to scout the idea that efforts will be made to guarantee the proposed loan by using the German customs receipts as security. These receipts are now mortgaged as a guaranty of reparations payments, and it is hardly likely that France will agree to allow the new loan to Germany to take precedence over reparations.

HOOVER IN CONFERENCE

Before departing this afternoon for his summer camp on the Rapidan, President Hoover spent long hours with Castle and Acting Secretary of the Treasury Mills, discussing the German crisis.

Mr. Hoover will be prepared to leave the Rapidan camp on a few minutes' notice if the negotiations at Paris require his presence here tomorrow.

Reports from London that the United States is preparing a surprise by proposing an armaments holiday to run concurrently with the debt moratorium were not taken seriously. That the armaments problem will be discussed is looked upon as a foregone conclusion.

REED VISIONS MENACE OF WAR IN DEBT PARLEY

Former Missouri Senator Scores Administration For European 'Bungling.'

CHICAGO, July 18.—(INS.)—That the United States may be drawn into serious international difficulties, and perhaps war, as a result of its participation in the coming London politico-financial conference, was the prediction made today by former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri. He said:

"The interference by the Hoover administration in European controversies is liable to involve the United States in serious and international difficulties."

The Senator explained that this country cannot mix in disputes between France and Germany without incurring at least an implied responsibility. He continued:

"The words of George Washington that Europe has a set of interest in which we have little or no concern are as true today as when first uttered.

CITES WARNING

"In the teeth of Washington's warning and the policies of American presidents for nearly a century and a half, we find the Hoover administration, without the slightest authority of law, first proposing to extend the French payment to the United States of $260,000,000 in consideration of France extending the payment of her war claims against Germany.

"In a word that means that the United States for 12 months will carry Germany's indemnity to France and shall in order to do so assess our taxpayers for $260,000,000 to pay interest on the national indebtedness we incurred in order to obtain money to loan France.

"Immediately when that proposition was made we were confronted with a second proposition. That was that France or French capitalists shall carry certain other obligations or advance to Germany large sums of money, France demanding political advantage and securities.

"Thus the first step we propose to take already draws us into a second proposition which before we are through with it, if we go into it, may involve the United States in political disputes ultimately engulfing the nation in a new European war.

"This blunder of the administration may be fraught with the most tragic consequences. The administration should keep within the bounds of legal authority and if it does it will recall Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and his conferees.

"With wheat at 25 cents a bushel, railroads running at a loss, finance houses staggering on the precipice of bankruptcy, with the banks suffering great losses through crash of financial and industrial corporations and with 10,000,000 out of employment and taxes draining the life blood of enterprise we had better look after our own household."

Morgan Speeds to Debt Conference Aboard Corsair

NEW YORK, July [illegible]—(AP.)—J. Pierpont Morgan's floating palace—the jet-black yacht Corsair—was speeding across the Atlantic today bound for England.

Although the financier plans to spend several months at his 16,000 acre country estate in Aldenham, Hertfordshire, his impending proximity to Paris and London gave rise to considerable speculation as to what role if any he might play in the international negotiations arising from the German crisis.

The Corsair slipped quietly out of Long Island Sound shortly after midnight. On board with Mr. Morgan was his friend, John S. Lawrence, prominent Boston financier and yachtsman.

100,000 FREE PARK TICKETS FOR CHILDREN

Sun-Telegraph to Aid in Kiddies Day Fete With Celebration at West View.

Mother has had her special day. Dad has been honored with a special date on the calendar. And now comes National Kiddies' Day—Tuesday, August 4, for which date a plan is on foot for a nation-wide celebration in the parks and playgrounds.

Pittsburgh's celebration will take place at West View Park, among the myriad rides and games and shows created to amuse and entertain children. It's going to be a free show and plenty of it.

The Sun-Telegraph is perfecting arrangements to distribute 10,000 strips of tickets, 10 to a strip, good for the Caterpillar, the Tumble Bug, the Merry-Go-Round, Greyhound coaster, Hilarity Hall, the Cuddle-Up, the Whip, the Racing Whippet and other popular rides and amusement devices.

There will be a big program of special entertainment for the kiddies, including a contest for freckeled faces, boys and girls; for juvenile pie-eaters, and a costume parade.

Bear in mind that the tickets will be free. Watch for additional details and plans for the distribution in the Sun-Telegraph.

Bullet Through Bath's Keyhole Kills Electrician

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 18.—(AP.)—But for a queer twist of fate Dan Murphy, steamship electrician, would be alive today.

A bullet fired through the keyhole of a bathroom door, wounding him fatally, would have missed him had it not struck metal and been deflected at an acute angle, police said.

Mrs. Murphy, charged with suspicion of murder, said:

"I did not mean to kill him, although he had abused me for eight years."

Mind Blank Since War, Veteran Says

CHICAGO, July 18.—(AP.)—A well-dressed man with the word "Winona" tattooed on one arm, was confined to a police station today, unable, he said, to remember anything previous to 1919, when he was mustered out of the Canadian Expeditionary Force at Quebec. He is about 55 years old.

Three photographs were found in his pockets, one each of a woman, a boy and a girl. He said:

"They must be my wife and family."

Typhoid Epidemic Halts Gold Rush

NOGALES, Ariz., July 18.—(AP.)—F. O. Bostwick, mining man, said 11 persons died of typhoid the day he left the newly discovered gold fields in the Tamblor district in the State of Sinaloa, Mexico. Bostwick arrived here yesterday.

He said that the disease was raging throughout the camp and that the gold rush had died down. The population, he asserted, has dwindled from 3,000 persons two months ago to a scant thousand.

Artist Gets Studio, New York Gets Arch

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP.)—George Gray Barnard, the sculptor, announced that John D. Rockefeller has procured a studio for him in which he will finish his monumental "Arch of Democracy" thus ending the controversy over Barnard's eviction from his present workshop.

When Barnard was ordered to move from his studio in Washington Heights last year to make way for a street, the sculptor vowed he would not finish the arch, which is to be presented to the City of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Yost Sattler, of Braddock, asked $25,000 damages for injuries to Mrs. Sattler in a traffic collision through their suit filed in Common Pleas Court against the Trafford Transportation Company, of Trafford. She was injured when their automobile was struck by a truck of defendant company on Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh, November 1, last, the suit charged.

Archbishop's Funeral Attended by Royalty

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, July 18.—(AP.)—Members of the royal family today attended funeral services for Archbishop Nathan Soederblom, of Upsala, winner of the 1930 Nobel peace prize, who died on Sunday.

Ben Avon Estate Of $20,000 Divided

An estate worth $20,000 was disposed of by the will of Joseph T. Donaldson, Irwin avenue, Ben Avon, probated in the office of Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell. After a bequest of $500 to a sister, Lettia C. Donaldson, the estate was left to his wife, Ellen B. Donaldson, for life, and then to their three children, William C., Helen S. and Joseph T. Donaldson.

Two Men Arrested In Antique Thefts

Ernest Aspinwall, 22, and Linus Schwartz, of Cambridge, Mass., were turned over to Cambridge police yesterday by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg, in Central Police Court. They were arrested in a North Side rooming house. Aspinwall admitted at the hearing he had stolen antiques and jewelry belonging to John Estabrook, retired antique dealer, of Cambridge, saying the latter had refused to pay him for his services. He testified he lived at Estabrook's home. He was accompanied here by Schwartz.

Now Lose Fat a Pound a Day on a Full Stomach

Do Just These Two Simple Things —Fat Melts Away

NO tiring exercise, no starvation. Instead, a full stomach and never a hungry moment! Yet fat melts away. You can easily lose from four to seven pounds weekly, see the coarse lines of fat replaced by the refined lines of slenderness—and feel better than you ever felt before in your life.

WHAT YOU DO

There are just two simple things you do: Clear your system and keep it clear of waste matter, toxins and depleting poisons with ordinary JAD SALTS obtainable at any drug store. Start with a teaspoonful in a full glass of water tomorrow morning—a sparkling and pleasant drink.

Then EAT YOUR FILL—as much as your appetite can stand—of meals consisting of the following foods:

At breakfast eat two oranges, or the juice of two oranges. Eat also two slices of toasted whole wheat or bran bread. Eat rolled oats (with milk, not cream.)

At luncheon eat a good size piece of lean meat, then see how much spinach, lettuce, sauerkraut, boiled cabbage, green peas, broccoli or fresh turnips you can eat. EAT ALL YOU CAN COMFORTABLY HOLD of these foods. For dessert eat any fresh fruit; cantaloupe, berries, apples, sliced oranges, pears. Substitute turnips for potatoes. Substitute lean meats—beef, chicken, veal, white fish, trout, bass, etc.—for pork or any fat meats.

At night, have another FILL-UP-FULL meal as above. Cut down on butter and sweets—eat half of what you eat now. That's easy. But with your stomach full of other foods, you'll never notice it. Drink water or not as you like.

4 TO 7 POUNDS GONE IN WEEK

At the end of a week, you'll see the scale down four to seven pounds—according to how much overweight you are—from what you weighed the day you started. Your health, too, will be better. You'll be more active, more vigorous than perhaps for years. Your friends will soon begin to notice your increasing slenderness. You'll soon avoid the embarrassment of being called fat or bulky. And you'll do it with NEVER A HUNGRY MOMENT!

If in doubt about this safe and simple way, ASK ANY DOCTOR. Show him this article. Ask him whether or not it is safe and sure. It marks the latest findings of scientific men in the field of weight reduction. For it performs two necessary and important functions.

The JAD SALTS clear the bowels and system of the excessive toxins most overweight people have. *The change in diet—the FILLING OF THE STOMACH TO ITS LIMIT—with foods that turn to energy instead of fat, decreases the weight day by day. The salts build up your health. The change in food eases off the fat.

Start today. Clip this dietary out and save it. Get big package of ordinary JAD SALTS for the cleansing part of the method at any drug store. A large bottle costs less than a dollar.

*Note particularly—the salts are urged purely as a poison-banishing agent—not as a reducing. The change in food does the work.

SPENCER BOWS TO CANTWELL IN MOUND DUEL

Paul Waner Hits Two Homers, Berger, Grantham One Each in Opener.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Our hard-to-understand Pirates had to be satisfied with an even split as they battled the Boston Braves in a bargain bill at the Oakland Orchard yesterday. The Buccos batted like real swatters to win the early fight, 9 to 3, and then did a characteristic backslide as they lost another 1-to-0 struggle.

Paul Waner

Lanky Ben Cantwell, the pallid, serious-minded young right-hander, was the thorn in the flesh of the Buccos as 8,000 loyal Pittsburgh supporters saw the home team go down to their defeat. The Freebooters had little trouble with sturdy Harry Seibold in the first clash, but the slim sharpshooter made our best hitters look like novices. Ben allowed only six hits and in a general way he was the master of all he surveyed.

Glenn Spencer was the immediate victim of the Pirates' failure to swat the ball with a little class. Spencer's pitching was almoost as clever as that of Ben. The two sterling boys shut the door in the batters' faces through six sweltering rounds. Lloyd Waner took Spencer out of a jam in the seventh with a Speaker shot to the plate, but after this run had been snuffed out and ROLAND GARROS STADIUM, PARIS, July 18.—America swept into the lead over Great Britain in the Davis Cup inter-zone final matches here today when George M. Lott and John Van Ryn defeated the English team of Fred Perry and George P. Hughes, 6-1, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3, in the doubles.

The victory gave America a score of 2 to 1, both teams having won singles matches yesterday.

Mate Champion, Owner Declares

By A. C. BOSTWICK (Owner of Mate)

CHICAGO, July 18.—(AP.)—It seems to me that the race fans, who rank horses by their performances strictly, should now be satisfied that a horse by the name of Mate is the champion 3-year-old of America and one of the greatest of all turf history.

It wasn't so much that he won the Arlington Classic and the big purse that went with it today that convinced me so much; it was the way he won it; the class of great 3-year-olds that he beat and the comparative ease with which he turned the trick.

As I sat with my binoculars trained on the track today, I was absolutely sure that my horse would win. But, when I saw him pinched badly by Sun Meadow at the three-eighths post, I turned around and thought he was beaten. But he wasn't! Instead, he came back like a true champion, took the lead when Jockey Robertson urged him to go in front and won going away in track record time.

He supplied me the greatest thrill I ever got anywhere. It was a beautiful recovery and it was the greatest race he ever ran in his life and he has galloped some fine ones.

He finished the race in excellent shape and will entrain directly for Saratoga for the Travers Stakes. We'll meet Twenty Grand again there and it should be the same story.

SPANISH PLAY SECOND IN BIG TURF SURPRISE

Bostwick Horse Cops by Four Lengths, Sets Arlington Park Track Record.

Preakness History Repeated As Kentucky Derby Victor Bows to 'Nemesis.'

CHICAGO, July 18.—Fifty thousand Frenchmen can't be wrong. You know all about that.

But, 50,000 horse players, or perhaps it was 60,000, can be as wrong as wrong can be once they get on a race track.

The big horse was a cinch. So thought most of the 50,000 horse players. But the best the big horse could get was third.

Twenty Grand

Twenty Grand went to the post a 1-to-3 favorite in the third running of the Classic stakes, the richest 3-yr.-old race in the world, at Arlington Park today, and third money was the best he could get.

Four lengths out in front of the field of seven was Mate, the 3-year-old son of Prince Pal and Killashandra that races for his owner and trainer, A. C. Bostwick, of Long Island, the 30-year-old millionaire, who lives with his own horses and often rides them in jumping races. Spanish Play nosed out Twenty Grand for the place.

Mate already had won the Preakness and the American Derby. Today's win was his third big stake of the year against two for Twenty Grand, the Kentucky

WESTERN GOLF WON BY MOE

PORTLAND, Ore., July 18.—(AP.)—Don Moe, Portland, today won the Western Amateur golf championship for the second time in the last three years, when he trounced Malcolm MacNaughton, fellow townsman, 9 and 7, in a 36-hole final match.

The new champion, who eliminated Johnny Lehman, Chicago, 1930 titlist, yesterday, played the steadiest game he had shown in the tournament. He seldom was in trouble, hitting most of his shots like they should be played. Moe was even par for the 29 holes.

Pitcher Grant Released Under Option By Bucs

George Grant, Pirate pitcher, has been released under option to Buffalo, in the International League, it was announced at Pittsburgh Baseball Club headquarters late yesterday.

Grant, who was drafted from the Rochester International League club at the finish of last season, will report to the Buffalo management today. He was a member of the first Pirate party to leave for the Paso Robles (Cal.) training camp, and has been with the Bucs since that time.

George spent several years with the Cleveland Indians.

Earlier in the day the Pirate management announced the outright release of left-hander John Vanusek, rookie pitcher, who after taking part in the spring training work was farmed to Binghamton of the N. Y.-Pa., League.

Walter Liginger, Sports Vet, Dead

MILWAUKEE, July 18.—(AP.)—Walter H. Liginger, 70, secretary of the Wisconsin State Athletic Commission and for many years a leader in sport activities in the Middlewest, died in a hospital today. He had been suffering from an internal disorder for several months.

Liginger served as a president of the Central Division of the A. A. U. for 12 years, during which time track and field sports made great strides. He served as chairman of the Olympic Games committee in 1904 and took a leading part in the conduct of that international classic held at St. Louis that year. He also was a member of the committees in charge of Olympiads held at Athens, Stockholm and Antwerp

Local Motorboat Racer Is Victor

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 18.—With a great burst of speed near the finish line, Russ Heinz, of Pittsburgh, today won the Class C event for amateur drivers in 24-horsepower boats over a five-mile course in Delaware Park Lake, one of the feature events of the third annual International regatta of the Buffalo Outboard Motor Boat Club.

WRIGHT RETAINS TITLE

WINCHESTER, Mass., July 18.—(AP.)—Fred J. Wright, jr., of Albemarle, defending champion, today retained the state amateur golf championship, defeating Eddie Lowery, of Norfolk, 3 and 2, in the 36-hole final at the Winchester Country Club. It was Wright's sixth state amateur title.

Vines Defeats Doeg For Longwood Bowl

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 18.—(AP.)—Ellsworth Vines, latest California tennis sensation, today handled Johnny Doeg's terrific service in such masterly fashion that he defeated the national champion, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, in a thrilling Longwood Bowl singles final.

This 19-year-old youngster amazed a fairly large gallery by his sudden sweeps to the net to slice off placement volleys which broke down the blond giant's delivery six times during the five-set racquet duel.

Doeg all through the match tried to wear down his lanky rival by making him bend his lean form over low-bounding strokes, but these tactics were successful only in the fourth set. Vines lost the opener by double faulting twice in the tenth and final game.

Vines also gained half of the doubles honors, for he teamed with Keith Gledhill, intercollegiate champion from Santa Barbara, Cal., in a dull 3-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3 victory over Doeg and his partner, Wilbur F. Coen, of Kansas City.

MISS ANDRUS VICTOR

Dorothy Andrus, unseeded player from Stamford, Conn., upset Sarah Palfry, Brookline, in the women's singles final, and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and Mrs. George W. Wightman, twice national doubles champions, gained the team title by defeating Sarah and Mianne Palfry, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3.

This competition, which opened last Tuesday, marked the former Helen Wills' return to the eastern tennis wars after a two-year absence, during which, it appeared, her doubles play had depreciated.

The former queen of the courts, in every match, indicated she was under-tennised and her usually

McTiernan, Belmont Go Into Seclusion

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

Interest in the Buck McTiernan-Jimmy Belmont bout scheduled at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, tomorrow night has reached such a stage that the managers of the two boxers have found it necessary to take them to the country over the week-end to get them away from the excitement of it all, it was announced last night. Like college football teams on the eve of important games, the principals have been hidden away in seclusion and will remain there until time to return to be weighed in at 3 p. m. tomorrow. Even the spots in which they will relax are being kept a secret in order to restrain misguided well-wishers from annoying them and keeping the impending battle uppermost in their minds.

Bunny Buntach

There probably never has been so much excitement about a "natural" bout in the history of boxing here, Braddock, where Belmont lives, and Swissvale, where McTiernan resides, both have been seething over the grudge battle for days and the club ordered both managers to get the boxers out of town to give

PINKS ANNEX POLO MATCH

The Pinks defeated the Blues, 9 to 2, yesterday afternoon in a hard-fought match on the new field of the Pittsburgh Polo Club, Squaw Run drive. The players of both teams are members of the Pittsburgh Hunt Club, a Polo Club requirement.

The work of Dave McCahill, Jr., and Bliss Flaccus, of the defeated team, did much to enliven the contest. Howard Adams, former Yale star, was high scorer with four goals. Gilliland made three of the Pinks' goals. The lineup:

Walker Holds Cards to Two Hits, Giants Win, 4-0

SETBACK CUTS CHAMPS' LEAD TO 4 1-2 GAMES

Ott Stars With Home Run And Single; McGraw Chased From Bench.

ST. LOUIS, July 18.—(AP.)—Bill Walker, New York Giant southpaw, had the Cardinals well tamed today and the visitors won the first game of the series, 4 to 0, to reduce the Cards' lead in the National League to four and a half games.

Walker allowed only two hits, one in the second inning and another in the sixth, and never was in serious danger of being scored upon. The Giants scored three of their runs off Burleigh Grimes and added another off Jim Lindsey, who pitched the ninth inning. Melvin Ott drove in two of the winners' runs with a home run and a single.

Manager John McGraw, of the Giants, was ordered off the bench by Umpire Clarke in the eighth inning for protesting a play. The score:

ROBINS WIN IN ELEVENTH

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP.)—The Chicago Cubs had 16 runners stranded on the bases today as the Brooklyn Robins nosed them out, 3 to 2, in 11 innings.

Dazzy Vance and John Quinn, who did his second bit of relief work in as many days, allowed the Cubs 11 hits, four more than the Robins could get off Malone and May, but they were tight in the pinches.

Quinn, who pitched the last three innings, allowed the Cubs to fill the bases with none out and score the tieing run in the last of the ninth, but they found him invincible in the extra innings. The Cubs filled the bases again in the eleventh, but could not score.

Bissonette scored the Robins' winning run when he singled in the eleventh, was helped around to third and came in on Slade's outfield fly to Cuyler. The score:

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF LAST SUNDAY: THE FAQUIR WHO CROSSED INDIA ON FOOT WEARING SPIKED SANDALS—The Spike Saints constitute a distinct branch of Hindu religious ascetics. While most of them spend their lives lying unprotected on a bed of nails, Suraptas, who is of a more athletic disposition, devised sandals, the insides of which were studded with long, wicked-looking nails. On the points of these nails Suraptas walked a distance of more than 5,000 miles, crossing India repeatedly in several directions. This feat assures Suraptas of great spiritual benefits, and of an honorable standing in the guild of Hindu faquirs. THE MOCKING BIRD IS UNJUSTLY NAMED—The mocking bird is one of the sweetest and most beautiful of the American songsters. It does not mock anything, but has extraordinary powers of imitating surrounding noises. Their native song is extraordinarily beautiful, and in reproducing the songs of other birds they even deceive the imitated birds themselves.

TOMORROW—THE INCANDESCENT LAMP TRICK.

Charleroi Drops Pair To Beaver Falls Club

CHARLEROI, Pa., July 18.—Beaver Falls won over Charleroi here tonight, 9 to 0, gaining a sweep in today's dual bill with the Governors. The visitors won the afternoon contest, 2 to 1.

Chuck Trader held the Governors to two hits in the nightcap.

The night battle was a pitchers' battle until Wicker blew up in the eighth when the Beavers scored seven runs.

John Vanusek, released outright by the Pittsburgh Pirates, twirled a fine game in the afternoon to win the decision. The scores:

COLTS SWEEP SERIES

CUMBERLAND, Md., July 18.—Cumberland made a clean sweep of its series with Charleston by winning today's game by the score of 3-2. It was the fifth consecutive win for the first-half champions of the Middle-Atlantic League. Bob Walsh, son of Big Ed Walsh, major league pitching star of bygone days, although wild at times, was tight in the pinches and scored his first victory for the locals. He was aided by two double plays. Paiment's work at second base was the fielding feature. The score:

SCOTTDALE WINS TWO

SCOTTDALE, Pa., July 18.—The Scottdale Cardinals cleaned up the three-game series with Huntington by winning today's doubleheader 24 to 0 and 4 to 3.

In the first encounter the locals established two league records by scoring two dozen runs and pilfering an even dozen bases. Bucher scored five consecutive runs in five straight innings. This also is a record.

In the twilight affair the visiting Boosters fought with a grim determination, but they were denied the victory as the locals also copped this encounter when, with one retired in the seventh, Manager Hopper connected solidly for a long home run to distant right to win the game. The scores:

80,000 Athletes In Workers' Big Olympiad Today

VIENNA, July 18.—(AP.)—Eighty thousand athletes from 21 nations will take part in the great workers' olympiad, which opens tomorrow at Vienna in a specially constructed million-dollar stadium.

The financial crisis in Germany all but prevented the arrival of 30,000 workmen from the Reich, but at the last minute intervention enabled the contingent to break the official ban forbidding traveling abroad.

YOUNGSTOWN VICTOR

WHEELING, W. Va., July 18.—Three runs in the late innings gave Youngstown a 3-to-1 victory over Wheeling here tonight and the Strippers a clean sweep of the series. Lefty Carney held the Smokes to five blows and after allowing a run in the second he kept the Stogies from third base.

Two errors proved to be a big factor in the late rallies of the visitors when an outfield error allowed Gartlan to get to third in the seventh and this was followed by three singles to register two runs. With Gartlan on second in the eighth, Tapson let in the other run with a wild throw to first on Christenson's roller. The score:

Woodward Shoot King

DAYTON, O., July 18.—(AP.)—E. F. Woodward, Houston, Tex., again leads the nation's trapshooters in registered targets, according to a list of official averages released today by John Brandt, manager of the Amateur Trapshooting Association here.

Woodward shattered 1,389 out of 1,400 targets for a percentage of .9921. In last year's final averages he had .9905 on 1,800 clays to lead the nation's amateur shooters.

P. G. Hooker, Memphis, Tenn., who broke 591 out of 600 targets, is second with an average of .9850; F. R. Earle, Starr, S. C., is third with .9835 on 800 clays, and Arnold M. Perkins, Baton Rouge, La., fourth with a mark of .9814 on 700 targets.

Miss Leonie Boutall, Houston, Tex., one of the sensations at the Grand American Handicap last August, tops her sex at the traps with 837 breaks out of 900 for .9300. Mrs. C. B. Pike, Kent, O., has .9281, while Marie Kautzky, Fort Dodge, Ia., is third with .9222.

Burke Urges Boat Races in Radio Talk

John Jay Burke, city office manager for the Allegheny County parks, in a talk over Radio Station KDKA, strongly urged a revival of sculling, rowing and motor boat races on the Allegheny River. He recalled the days when the Hulton course was the world center for water sports, when the greatest scullers and oarsmen of their time competed there.

Chicago Forces Champions to Go 11 Innings In First Clash of Dual Bill.

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—(AP.)—The Philadelphia Athletics won both ends of a doubleheader with the Chicago White Sox today. The champions won the first game, 7 to 6, after 11 innings, and copped the second, 7 to 2.

Two rallies of two runs each, in the ninth and eleventh innings, enabled the Mackmen to stave off the White Sox in the opening game. They tied the score at 5 to 5 in the ninth and after the White Sox assumed a fresh lead of a run in the eleventh, scored two more runs on two walks by relief pitcher Al Thomas that forced the winning runs over the plate.

In the second game the Athletics clubbed Pat Caraway for five runs on five hits in the first inning, one of the blows being a home run by Mule Haas. The scores:

West Penn Junior Tourney Tops Week's Golf Card

PROS GATHER AT CONNEAUT FOR BIG MEET

Regis Wolff Not to Defend Laurels in Championship At Alcoma Golf Links.

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

Another big week of golf faces district golfers, particularly those of the younger generation who will venture forth Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to battle for the undefended Western Pennsylvania junior championship of Regis Wolff at the Alcoma Country Club.

The Pennsylvania Golf Association is holding its final one-day medal play tourney, and an even larger field than any of the three previous ones is anticipated, for the beautiful Edgewood Country Club links are in splendid condition for the competition. This big event is to be staged Wednesday.

PROS AT CONNEAUT

Professionals from the remote corners of the tri-state district are gathered at the Oakland Beach Hotel links, in Conneaut Lake today practicing for the 72-hole two-day test over that course tomorrow and Tuesday, for which $350 in prizes has been put up. Fred Baroni, home professional, advises that all is in ship-shape, and that some of the finest golf of the year is anticipated.

Thirty-six holes will be played tomorrow, and another double test on Tuesday, and few faces will be missing from the lists. It will be the first time this season Ted Luther, Corry, (Pa.) professional, West Penn open champion, has tried his luck against Tri-State pros, although he has consistently won prizes in Northwestern Pennsylvania professional competition.

The Oakland Beach course, needless to say, is in superb shape at this time, and a large gallery is expected to follow the doings of the district experts.

The Nemacolin Country Club tomorrow is to be the scene of a most popular tourney—the annual women's event, which was postponed from last week. Nemacolin has made elaborate arrangements and set up splendid prizes for its guests, and a good tourney should ensue. A field of 200 is not unlikely.

THEATRICAL TOURNEY

Vincent Lewis Josack, Jim Alexander, Harry Grelle, Robert Klingensmith and Jimmy Nash make up the committee in charge of the first mammoth golf tourney for all film and theatrical interests in Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, to be held at the Highland Country Club tomorrow. Valuable prizes are being donated, and dinner will follow the golf.

Dinner also will follow the golf tourney of the Printing House Craftsmen's Club at Alcoma tomorrow afternoon. The event begins at 1 o'clock.

Dr. H. R. Decker is in charge of the Pittsburgh Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution golf tournament, which is to be staged at the Stanton Heights Golf Club on Tuesday. It is the only competition scheduled for that day, except the final at Conneaut Lake. Prospects for a fine field are bright. Play will begin at 1 o'clock and dinner will be served in the evening.

The Edgewood Country Club has gone to no end of trouble to make certain that the boys who compete in the Pennsylvania Golf Association tourney there Wednesday have as interesting a round of golf as possible. Every man in the lot, and there undoubtedly will be almost 250 competing in the all-day event, who breaks a 75 will be given a leather traveling bag—which is aside from the regular prizes for the tourney.

Entries will be accepted by Miss Lois Miller, secretary of the state association, at 1101 Farmers Bank Building, Atlantic 0519, until noon Tuesday, and all entrants must have state handicap cards. It is not too late to obtain them. Send Miss Miller your five low scores and club handicap, and she'll do the rest. The state tourney have presented some of the most interesting competition of the year.

JUNIOR TOURNEY CARDED

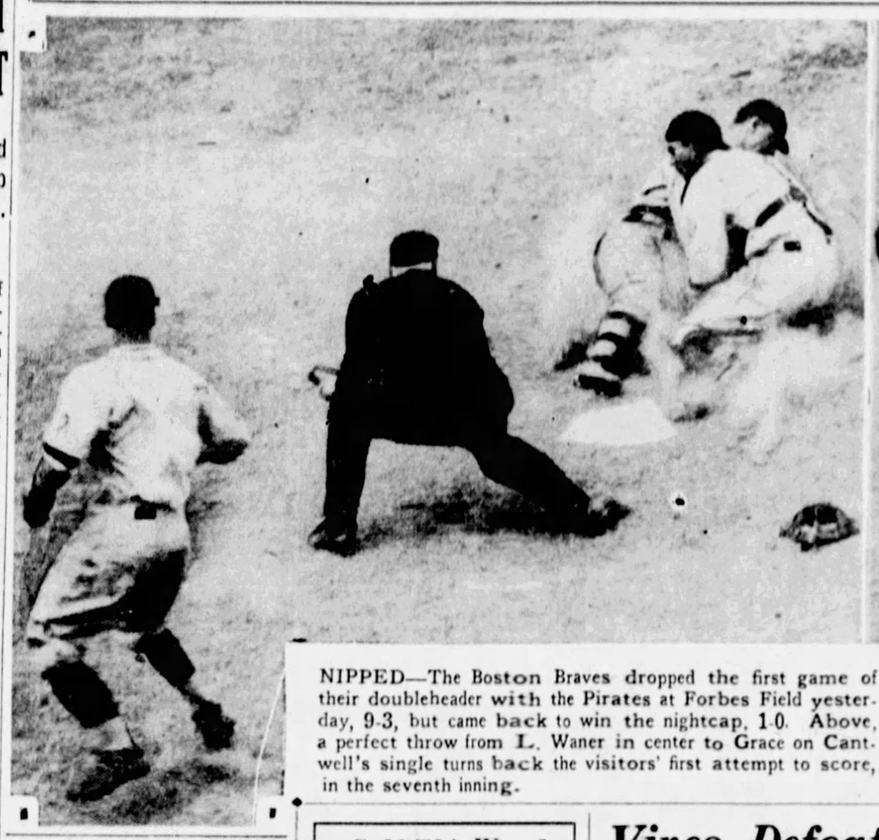
On the same day, the fight for the Western Pennsylvania junior championship opens at the Alcoma Country Club. Regis Wolff, of Highland, will not be on hand to defend his crown because he is over-age this year. The qualifying round will be at 36 holes. On Thursday two 18-hole rounds of match play will be staged, and on Friday the semi-final and final rounds will be played.

The winner will receive the Percy Preston Memorial Trophy and a gold medal.

Another mixed foursome tourney is to be held Thursday, this time at the Shannopin Country Club.

The Women's Golf Association is sponsoring a one-day tourney at the Pittsburgh Field Club on Friday. On the same day, the Field Club will celebrate Jack Redmond Day—and he will give an exhibition in the afternoon and his orchestra will play to the dancing in the evening.

HOW BRAVES WON 1-0 GAME FROM BUCS AFTER LOSING, 9-3



PHOTOS by Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

NIPPED—The Boston Braves dropped the first game of their doubleheader with the Pirates at Forbes Field yesterday, 9-3, but came back to win the nightcap, 1-0. Above, a perfect throw from L. Waner in center to Grace on Cantwell's single turns back the visitors' first attempt to score, in the seventh inning.

VICTORY—And here we have Pitcher Cantwell scoring the only run of the fracas a few moments later on Worthington's double. Cantwell allowed only six hits and made three himself, sharing honors for the day with Paul Waner, who clouted two home runs in the first game, and Meine, who blanked the Braves after a three-run opening inning.

Pirates and Braves Split Bargain Bill

with the crowd still cheering the Oklahoma jack rabbit, Red Worthington clipped out a double that scored Cantwell with the only tally.

Ben it was who made a noble effort to win the battle with a hit to center. Cantwell's catcher, Bill Cronin, moved to snap the heated deadlock as he opened the seventh with a ringing hit to center. Fred Maguire promptly advanced the runner and Cantwell, who is no bargain at the home dish, slapped a bounder over second. Little Lloyd came in fast and he made a clean pickup of the ball. Bill McKechnie gave Cronin the sign to sprint to the plate, but the beautiful pass of the centerfielder brought Bill down a dead bird.

CANTWELL SCORES

Cantwell was out in the heat on first base as Spencer worked on Maranville. The Rabbit was so troublesome he acquired a pass and of course the winning run was on second. Worthington, a dangerous gent at the plate, drove a double to left that scored Cantwell. Ben resumed his work on the firing line and although the Buccos resorted to pinch-hitters, his curve and fast ball burned an edge through our offensive.

Woodie Jensen's failure to get the ball far enough in the outfield hurt the Pirates a few minutes before the Braves made the lone tally of the game. Thevenow started the sixth with a single and Spencer sacrificed. L. Waner's hot shot through the box looked like the pay ball, but Cantwell held the hit in the infield and Thevenow had to stop at third. Jensen's fly to Berger was too short to permit of a run and Grantham flied out.

Heinie Meine, one of the National League's best and smartest pitchers, registered his tenth victory of the season in the 2 o'clock affair. Heinie was off to a poor start in the first when Wally Berger dropped his eleventh homer of the season in pretty Schenley Park. The drive netted three Boston runs, but Heinie then proceeded to dish out eight horse collars.

Paul Waner was the big batting hero of this game, although George Grantham also got in on the homerun heroics. Brother Paul hit two successive round trippers into the rightfield stands in the third and fifth rounds. Grantham's four-sacker to the same stands came with one on in the third to knot the game, and Paul untied the score a moment later.

Maranville had a rather mean greeting for Meine at the start of the opener. The Rabbit slapped a spunky hit to right and Worthington pulled one to left as Rabbit went to second. The great shortstop then put over a fast one on the Buccos, Maranville ran far off second with Berger up and when Phillips threw to that bag he made a clean steal of third. Berger then drove the ball over the fence for a three-run homer. Moore drew a pass, but Meine put on the brakes and there was no more scoring in the inning.

One was out in the home half of the first when Jensen singled to center. Grantham flied out, but Traynor hit a triple to left to score Jensen.

HOMERS FEATURE OPENER

Jensen opened the third with a walk. Grantham tied up the game when he hit a homer into the right field stands. Maguire made a leaping one-handed catch to rob Traynor, but the Pirates went ahead when P. Waner drove a homer into the right field stands.

Jensen started the fifth with a single. He was on second with two out when P. Waner hammered another homer into the right field stands. Haid then relieved Seibold.

One was out in the sixth before Thevenow beat out a bunt. Meine fanned, but L. Waner singled and the bases were filled when Jensen made an infield hit. Grantham walked, forcing in Thevenow. Sherdel relieved Haid. Traynor dropped a little hit in center to score two more runs.

The Pirates will be free to rest today, there being no game of any kind. The series with the Braves will be resumed tomorrow.

Vines Defeats Doeg, Wins Longwood Bowl

deadly service was broken twice in the opening set against the Brookline sisters.

DOEG DENIED BOWL

Later, she clashed with G. P. Perkins in the third of their one-set exhibitions, and the soft-hitting Massachusetts men's champion defeated her 6-4. Mrs. Moody, however, overcame him in yesterday's and Thursday's affairs, which served as an added attraction for the historic bowl play.

Vines' victory prevented Doeg from retiring the eighth edition of the bowl, a trophy that dates back to 1891. Johnny won legs in 1927 and 1929, and another win would have placed him in a class with such ancient tennis greats as William A. Larned, Malcolm D. Whitman, Maurice McLoughlin and Little Bill Johnston, the only players who have been strong enough to win three legs. This honor has also been denied Bill Tilden, for he won here only twice, in 1922 and 1926.

ADJOURN CHESS MATCH

THE HAGUE, July 18.—(AP.)—The fourth game of an international chess match between Jose R. Capablanca, of Havana, and Dr. Max Euwe, of Amsterdam, was begun here today and adjourned in an even position after 34 moves.

LOTT-VAN RYN DOWN BRITONS

them to net, Van Ryn and Lott took the first two sets easily.

BRITONS STAGE RALLY

The Englishmen, putting up a desperate battle to stave off defeat, won the third set with a series of hard drives and beautiful placements. Time after time in this frame they smashed back poorly-placed American lobs for points, while Lott frequently drove out of the court.

Things went better for the Americans in the fourth and final set, however. Lott and Van Ryn took the first three games running, lost the fourth, won the fifth and then dropped the next three.

By means of skillful placements and keen headwork, the Americans managed to outguess the dogged Britishers. The gallant bid the Englishmen had launched in the third set went to nought when ball after ball went into the net or out of the court.

FINAL DUELS TODAY

Victory in one of the remaining two singles matches scheduled tomorrow will send the United States into the challenge round against France for the fourth straight year. Frank Shields, who beat Perry in the singles yesterday, will oppose Henry W. Austin, who was the victor over Sydney Wood, Jr. Wood's opponent will be Perry.

The recapitulation of stroke analysis:

	Placements.	Aces.	Nets.	Outs.	Double Faults.
Lott	18	2	24	21	2
Van Ryn	13	0	15	18	0
Perry	6	0	32	19	3
Hughes	12	0	20	17	8

PERFECTED

IN

DE SOTO

A perfected form of Free Wheeling, designed and manufactured by Chrysler Motors, is now optional equipment on all De Soto cars.

The adoption of this improved engineering feature gives an even better performance, even greater economy and even greater driving ease to cars that have long been famous for these qualities.

In De Soto Free Wheeling you can shift between any and all of the forward speeds without using the clutch. When pressure on the accelerator is released, the car glides along free of all mechanical restraint, which means economy in fuel and oil and the reduction of engine wear.

There is nothing new to learn about driving with Free Wheeling. All operations are exactly the same as those you have become accustomed to. When you wish to drive in conventional gear, you merely pull a button on the dash and lock Free Wheeling out.

In addition to Free Wheeling, the entire De Soto line now is equipped with an Easy-Shift Transmission, which makes it possible to shift easily and noiselessly between second and high gears in either direction at car speeds up to 45 miles an hour even with Free Wheeling locked out.

The addition of Free Wheeling and the Easy-Shift Transmission to such distinctive De Soto features as smooth, powerful engines; all-steel bodies; low center of gravity; weatherproof internal hydraulic brakes; smart, sweeping lines and handsome upholstery and fittings marks a great achievement in value-giving.

Let us demonstrate a De Soto with Free Wheeling and Easy-Shift Transmission today. Even De Soto owners will be surprised to see how much these features add to motoring satisfaction.

Sharkey Seen as Probable Winner in Walker Fight

JAMES J. LONG Sport Comment

Jack to Be Kept Busy. No Rest for Pirates.

WEIGHT LIKELY TO MAKE GOB VICTOR

PASSING YEARS HAVE not disproved the ancient pugilistic wisecrack that a good big man is better than a good little man, and, on the strength of that, Jack Sharkey looms as a probable winner over Mickey Walker in their Brooklyn battle next Wednesday night.

That it will be a real fight, with plenty of fur flying, is not to be disputed. That Sharkey will be kept busy, for a time at least, there is hardly any doubt. But that Walker, with his 167 pounds, will be able to defeat an opponent of Sharkey's ability who is 30 pounds heavier, appears wholly unlikely.

THERE IS NO question about Mickey's Queensberry equipment. He was an unsatisfactory middleweight champion because of his persistent refusal to defend his title, but no one could ever justly deny him the ranking of one of the greatest fighters of his time.

Walker lacks nothing as a ring workman. He is superior to all the present-day battlers near his own weight, and has proved that he can beat a lot of the poorer heavies, as well. But in tackling a 200-pounder of Sharkey's caliber it looks as if he has bitten off a little more than he will be able to masticate.

IT ISN'T HARD to account for Mickey's success against the heavies of lower ranking whom he has met. They were slow, lumbering fellows who made the easiest kind of targets for the two-fisted attack of a fast, tough puncher such as Walker.

Sharkey is different, however. He is fast with feet and hands, can step around, and in and out, at a rate lively enough to keep his smaller opponent from having any edge in speed. Too, he is a boxer of rare skill and can punch, and, with all this, backed up by an advantage of 30 pounds in weight and six inches in height and reach, it is hard to see how he can lose.

UNLESS YOU STRETCH a point and count in Tony Canzoneri, Bob Fitzsimmons was the only fighter ever to accomplish the feat at which Walker, who has already held the welterweight and middleweight titles, is now aiming—that of winning the championship in three classes. Fitz, during his brilliant career, wore the middleweight, light-heavyweigth and heavyweight crowns. Canzoneri, who rose to the featherweight and lightweight heights, also claims the junior welterweight honors, but there is a question as to whether he really won that championship from Jack (Kid) Berg, inasmuch as the latter was required to come in below the class weight limit. Anyhow, it isn't much of a title, at best.

A NUMBER OF fighters besides Walker won world championships in two classes, notably Johnny Buff, flyweight and bantamweight; George Dixon and Terry McGovern, bantam and feather; Johnny Dundee, feather and junior light; Tommy Ryan, welter and middle, and Tommy Burns, light heavy and heavy.

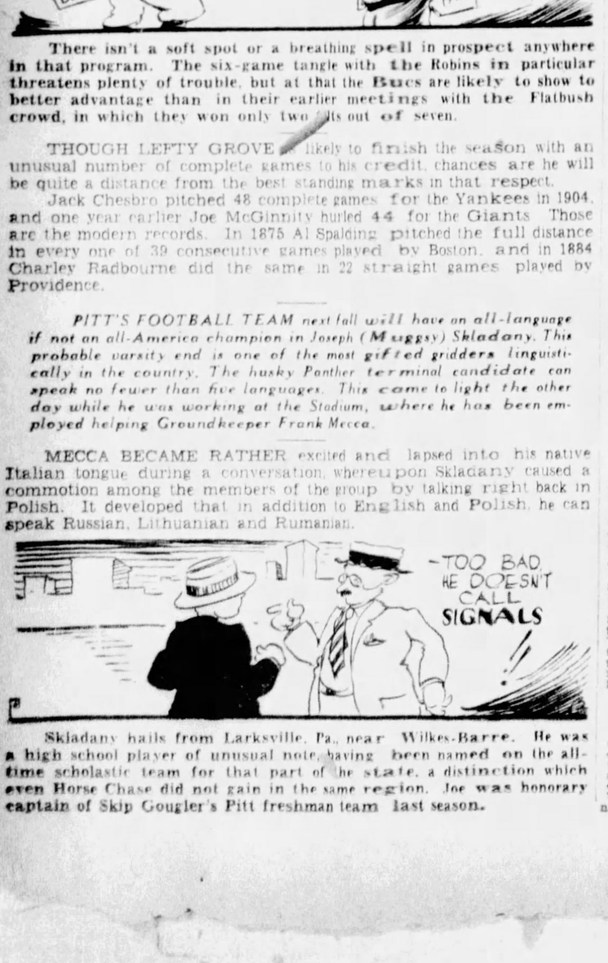
Harry Greb and Gene Tunney also won two titles, but in each case only one of the crowns was a world championship. Greb became world middleweight and Tunney world heavyweight champion, but the light-heavyweight diadem won by each was only the American title.

AN OLD BASEBALL feat not being attempted these days is the iron-man stunt of pitching two games in one afternoon. It hasn't been done in four years, or since Jack Scott broke even for the Phillies against the Reds on June 19, 1927.

The latest instance of a pitcher winning both games of a double-header dates back a year earlier. Emil Levsen, of the Indians, beat Red Sox twice on the afternoon of August 28, 1926, and held them [illegible] run in each game.

BACK IN 1903, Joe McGinnity set a mark that has never been [illegible] by pitching and winning three doubleheaders for the [illegible] in one month. On August 1, 8 and 31 he beat Boston, [illegible]klyn and Philadelphia twice each and allowed only 10 runs in [illegible] six games. Ed Walsh, in 1905 and 1908, and Grover Alexander, in 1916 and 1917, were the only other big league hurlers to win as many as two doubleheaders. Ed Ruelbach, of the Cubs, contributed a classic on September 26, 1908, by pitching a double shutout against Brooklyn. Grover Lowdermilk, of the Browns, pitched two shutouts against the Cards in a dual bill in the St. Louis city series of 1917, but the second game ended in a scoreless tie.

ANOTHER STRENUOUS WEEK confronts the Pirates. For the second week in succession, eight games are slated to be crowded into six days. Two bouts with the Braves will be followed by six with the Robins, doubleheaders being carded for Wednesday and Saturday.



There isn't a soft spot or a breathing spell in prospect anywhere in that program. The six-game tangle with the Robins in particular threatens plenty of trouble, but at that the Bucs are likely to show to better advantage than in their earlier meetings with the Flatbush crowd, in which they won only two fills out of seven.

THOUGH LEFTY GROVE is likely to finish the season with an unusual number of complete games to his credit, chances are he will be quite a distance from the best standing marks in that respect.

Jack Chesbro pitched 48 complete games for the Yankees in 1904, and one year earlier Joe McGinnity hurled 44 for the Giants. Those are the modern records. In 1875 Al Spalding pitched the full distance in every one of 39 consecutive games played by Boston, and in 1884 Charley Radbourne did the same in 22 straight games played by Providence.

PITT'S FOOTBALL TEAM next fall will have an all-language if not an all-America champion in Joseph (Muggsy) Skladany. This probable varsity end is one of the most gifted gridders linguistically in the country. The husky Panther terminal candidate can speak no fewer than five languages. This came to light the other day while he was working at the Stadium, where he has been employed helping Groundkeeper Frank Mecca.

MECCA BECAME RATHER excited and lapsed into his native Italian tongue during a conversation, whereupon Skladany caused a commotion among the members of the group by talking right back in Polish. It developed that in addition to English and Polish, he can speak Russian, Lithuanian and Rumanian.

Skladany hails from Larksville, Pa., near Wilkes-Barre. He was a high school player of unusual note, having been named on the all-time scholastic team for that part of the state, a distinction which even Horse Chase did not gain in the same region. Joe was honorary captain of Skip Gougler's Pitt freshman team last season.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Despite early morning downpour that threatened to quench all thought of week-end racquet hostilities, Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League netmen battled through a full session of milling yesterday to effect radical variations in the complexion of the bi-divisional title chases. Both upper and lower divisions were affected by startling sweeps and upsets as P. A. A. in the top sector and College Avenue and Rockwood in the bottom stepped forward to lend ever-increasing torridity to the races for the crowns.

The Winged Head array, invading Stanton Heights, romped off with 8-1 verdict over the Stantonians, the O'Loughlin trio corraling three singles wins and a brace of dual victories among 'em for the Red and Gray. George Henderson, husky Heights wanderer just returned, was close to triumph over Billy O'Loughlin with 5-4 lead in each of two sets of a 4-6, 7-5, 7-5 tussle, but the diminutive East Ender pulled through gallantly and Hendy was forced to be content in pairing with Karl Wolfe to land doubles verdict over Lauler and Glaser for the lone Stanton win of the occasion.

EDGEWOOD VICTOR

Meanwhile at Edgewood, the loop-leading Suburbanites annexed 7-2 victory over College Hill, and in so doing dropped a notch toward the P. A. A. contingent, one lone match now separating the pace-setters as the milling swings into the later stretches. Edgewood, with Capt. Frank Smith back in the lineup, mopped up in singles, but dropped a pair of doubles tilts to the never-say-die Beaverites.

As Edgewood and P. A. A. fought for initial berth, Mt. Lebanon and University Club delegations skirmished on the latter's rectangles for third position, the Lebanonian array grabbing off 6-3 success largely due to the excellent performances of Ed Alcorn and the redoubtable John Brown, both of whom registered in singles and doubles. Dick Cable, Varsity slasher, pulled the unexpected by nosing our E. A. Knoche, giant Mountain, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3. Out at Westinghouse, an embattled Electric host copped first four singles jousts and number three doubles to eke out 5-4 margin over South Hills and thereby to pass into sixth post in the standing as Stanton Heights slid downward.

MOORE BACK IN ACTION

Section II saw Austin Famariss head an inspired College avenue crew to whitewashing of Westinghouse Seconds, 1930 titleholders, on the College-and-Walnut courts. Capt. Howard Moore, of the Collegians, donned spangles after lengthy lay-off to aid his followers to achievement that places them now within two matches of the high-flying Bellevue combine, the North Boroughs stars having encountered genuine difficulty in downing Sam Keller's Duquesne Librarians, 5-4, in the Library ballwick. Bill Servick proved here of the afternoon for Duquesne, his trusty bat carrying him handsomely through extra-set imbroglios in both singles and doubles. Bud Leyda, junior contender, who will seek laurels in the Pittsburgh Center milling at the P. A. A. this week, performed similar feat for Bellevue.

Rockwood, breezing fast on the heels of trimming Washington Heights the previous Saturday, visited West Penn Power and galloped in with the honors of an 8-1 fracas. Sturm, West Penn lead-off satellite, bagged 6-0, 4-6, 6-2 debate with Saperstein, Bridgeville luminary, and the rest was all Rockwood. Washington Heights rallied from its defeat by the Rock-racqueters by swamping South Hills Seconds, 8-1, in a neighborhood melee on Mt. Washington. Capt. Dick Creighton edged out Jack Ferrick, Heights boss, 4-6, 6-3, 9-7, for the Hillsmen's only spot of consolation.

RICH CLASSIC WON BY MATE

Derby winner, and, in the three times they have met, Mate has won twice.

And, so the Classic, which was to have stamped Twenty Grand as the 3-year-old champion of the year, was no coronation at all, at least not for the Greentree Stable colt, which had been hailed as the greatest horse since Man O' War, if not even a greater one.

Mate, second choice in the betting, closed at 7 to 1 and paid $12.80 to win.

The place price on Mate was $5.96, and $2.68 to show. Spanish Play, a long shot, paid $10.12 to place and $2.64 to show. Twenty Grand paid $2.22 to show. Twenty Grand, with his stable mate, St. Brideaux, was the 1-to-3 favorite.

This was the order of finish of the seven starters battling for the richest turf prize for 3-year-olds: Mate, Spanish Play, Twenty Grand, Sir Ashley, Sun Meadow, Joey Bibb, and St. Brideaux.

Mate earned $73,650 as first prize for his proud owner, A. C. Bostwick, young Philadelphia millionaire. The sum of $7,000 went to Spanish Play as second money, and Twenty Grand, instead of getting the 73 grand, got three grand.

They will meet again, probably, in the fall at Belmont in the Realization Stakes or in the Latonia Championship in Kentucky. But, until then, Mate is the champion, not a better horse perhaps, but a champion.

SETS TRACK RECORD

The third running of the Classic today had a gross value of $86,200 and that kind of money has not been in circulation since the first and last running of Tom Bourke's Derby. Mate gathered in a sum of $73,650 for young Mr. Bostwick.

Mate ran the mile and a quarter in his Classic victory in 2:02 2-5. That is one and one-fifth seconds faster than the old track record set by the Handicap horse, Chicago, four years ago, and one and two-fifths seconds faster than the Classic record set last year by Gallant Fox.

The mutuel payoff was $12.80, $5.96 and $2.68 on Mate, Spanish Play paid $10.12 to place and $2.64 to show. Twenty Grand, which was coupled with his stablemate, St. Brideaux, as the Greentree entry, paid $2.22 to show.

SMITH ANNEXES METROPOLITAN OPEN TOURNEY

Mac Wins Golf Laurels With 285 Total; Sarazen Is Second and Farrell Third.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., July 18.—(AP.)—MacDonald Smith, New York veteran, hit a streak of unbeatable golf today to win the Metropolitan open championship for the third time.

After setting a new course record of 66 in this morning's round, he played through a driving rain this afternoon with another par-breaking round of 71 for a 72-hole total of 285 and a lead of five strokes over his nearest rival, stocky Gene Sarazen, of Lakeville.

Smith's 66, shaving six strokes off par for the Crestmont course, equaled his lowest score in the 1914 tournament, which he won at the age of 22, and also his best round in the 1926 championship, which he captured after a playoff with Sarazen.

SMITH SCORES 76

Smith had taken a 76 on the first round to finish six strokes out of the lead, but his par 72 yesterday put him up with the elect.

Sarazen scored two 37's today for a 74. His previous rounds were 73, 70 and 73.

A stroke behind Sarazen finished Johnny Farrell, of Quaker Ridge, 1927 champion, who had rounds of 71, 73, 73 and 74 for 291.

Finishing in a tie for fourth place with 293 were Willie MacFarlane, of Oak Ridge, the 1930 winner, and Ed Dudley, of Wilmington, Del., winner of the recently played Western Open.

Others who figured in the prize money division were Clarence Clark, of Forest Hills, and Mortie Dutra, of Long Beach, Cal., who had 296; Willy Cox, North and South champion, and Paul Runyan, 297, and young Mike Turnesa, of Fairview, 299.

290 FOR SARAZEN

Gene Sarazen finally came in with a 74 for a total of 290 five shots behind Smith and assuring him of second place.

Monte Dutro, Long Beach, Cal., carded a 74 for 296.

Tied with MacFarlane at 293 was Ed Dudley, western open champion, who shot two 73s today. Clarence Clark, of Forest Hills, carded a brace of 75s to finish with 296.

Willy Cox, North and South open titleholder, shot a par 72 on the last round to finish in a tie at 297 with Paul Runyan, of the Metropolis Club, who had rounds of 76 and 77. Runyan led the field after the first round with a 70.

Mike Turnesa, of Fairview, brother of the better known Joe, finished with 299, with rounds of 71 and 77 today.

Mary Browne Wins Ohio Golf Laurels

CLEVELAND, July 18.—(AP.)—Miss Mary K. Browne, Cleveland, former national tennis champion, today won the state women's golf championship by defeating Mrs. Curtis Sohl, Columbus, 7 up and 5 to play.

The Cleveland player flashed a consistent brand of golf on the two-times champion from Columbus, not allowing Mrs. Sohl to win a single hole in the match which terminated on the thirteenth green.

BOBBY JONES' Lessons in Golf

Active Left Hand. Essential to Success. In Game of Golf.

COCKING OF WRIST GIVES STROKE SNAP

By BOBBY JONES

American Amateur Champion and Former United States and British Open and British Amateur Titleholder.

I have written so much about the importance of an active left hand in the golf stroke that I feel some little hesitancy about continuing the subject, but I come in contact with all classes and kinds of golfers and if I am safe in assuming, as I think I am, that those which I meet are an average cross-section of the players of the game, there is still ample room to lay stress on this left hand.

Whenever someone wants to know why he is hooking or why he is slicing, he recognizes immediately any illustration of his probable method of hitting which is done with the right hand, but in every case the worried individual has difficulty understanding why, in order to correct a right hand full, he should begin to work with the left.

I am told that there is a young instructor in Buffalo who has had a considerable success in teaching the use of the right hand in golf, working on the theory that the average right-handed person can better control his swing in that way. The only trouble with this from my point of view is that the right hand is working in space without any limitation other than what may be imposed by the left. In other words, the right arm is bent when the club leaves the ball coming back and it never straightens out until after the ball has been struck. Leave it alone then and it may go anywhere, depending upon how much the elbow may bend. For this reason I think that the path of the right hand would be very difficult to control.

Bobby Jones

But taking the thing the other way, the proper anchor point of the swing is the head. Now if the shoulders turn about the head as an axis the arc of the swing is limited by the length of the left arm, and if the left arm is kept perfectly straight the path of the hands and the clubhead will be made as definite as it is possible to make them. Where the average player gets into trouble in this direction is in keeping his left arm straight without setting up some tension or rigidity in his left wrist.

It is actually a very difficult ideal to accomplish to restrain every bit of flexibility in the elbow joint without causing the left hand to squeeze the club and the left wrist to solidify. It is certainly as plain as day that the left wrist must be active in order for the left arm and side to be of any use. If the left wrist should not be "cocked" at the top of the swing, it will have no snap or whipping power when it comes time to hit the ball and immediately the player realizes this he cannot help trying to supply the deficiency by the use of his right hand. As I have said many times, this "cocking" of the left wrist is a thing which I always have to think about.

There is one thing in the grip which makes it a lot easier to secure this wrist cock at the top of the swing and that is holding the club in the fingers of the left hand. If you will try the thing yourself you will find that if the club is allowed to lie across the palm of the left hand, merely holding on to it tightens the muscles in the hand and wrist, but if it is held in the fingers, and mainly with the upper three fingers of that hand, the tightness in the wrist will be considerably diminished.

Another thing which this assists is the feel of the clubhead

McTiernan, Belmont Go Into Seclusion Before Bout

RIVALS SEEK REFUGE FROM EXCITED FANS

The situation has got so far out of hand that a few nights ago some unidentified person called Frank Klaus, former middleweight champion of the world, and manager of Belmont, on the telephone, and, representing himself to be McTiernan, subjected the old warrior to a flow of abuse and wound up by threatening to come up to Klaus' place and punch him in the nose in retaliation for some "ribbing" Klaus was alleged to have done. Klaus was burning up and sought out McTiernan, only to learn that he had been the victim of a hoax.

RECALLS OTHER FEUDS

Not since the days of the Johnny Ray-Johnny Kirk and Jack Zivic-Cuddy DeMarco feuds has there been anything approaching this battle for "heat." Kirk, managed by James (Red) Mason, former manager of Ray, met the latter in the old Exposition Building at the Point and the fight wound up in a free-for-all with the ring full of partisan fighting men and boys. When police finally jumped in and cleared the space, Kirk was found lying on the floor, kicked in the body and unable to continue. Ever since then the question, "Who kicked Johnny Kirk?" has been a legend among the fight fans of the district.

The Zivic-DeMarco battle also was well steamed up and culminated in a bout for the benefit of the Milk and Ice Fund at Forbes Field, with DeMarco, then considered on the decline and a likely easy victim for the hard-hitting and younger Zivic, upsetting the dope to win. In a later meeting, he again was returned the victor, and, the sting of their hatred removed, the two became good friends.

RIVALRY DEEP-ROOTED

The Belmont-McTiernan rivalry is deep-rooted. The pair met twice as amateurs, with honors even. Their first clash was in McTiernan's initial appearance as an amateur. Buck was a green youngster, boxing in tennis shoes, and Belmont was fighting under his real name of George Tilichy. Klaus was the referee. After a couple of rounds of boxing, McTiernan scored a knockdown and, with the overanxiety of inexperience, swung another punch with Belmont on the floor, and Klaus intervened and declared Belmont the winner on a foul. The battle was staged in Braddock.

Several weeks later, in McTiernan's fourth bout, they met again. Meanwhile McTiernan had made a connection with the Swissvale A. C. This time Belmont was roughed over the ropes in some heated battling and claimed he injured his back. At the end of the third round, an extra round was ordered, and, during it, Belmont told Referee Jack Henderson he was unable to continue because of injuries and the latter halted hostilities with McTiernan the winner by a technical knockout.

MATCH LONG-AWAITED

Later Belmont and then McTiernan turned professional. McTiernan's rise was rapid and he soon became an outstanding welterweight and then light-middleweight performer. Belmont's progress was slower and harder, but friends of Jimmy from the first urged another meeting between the pair, confident Belmont could beat his flashier rival. In his early days as a pro, Belmont was managed by P. J. (Bunny) Buntach, but a rift developed between them and Buntach took over McTiernan. Efforts to get the boxers together were fruitless until they were matched recently.

Then another hitch developed. McTiernan, who had not been going well in recent bouts, lost a decision to young Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, at Hickey Park, Millvale, 10 days ago, and the Bowl management thought he had impaired his prestige to such an extent as to justify it in asking his manager to accept a cut in his percentage. This Buntach refused to do and the Bowl wanted to cancel the match. Dr. W. D. McClelland, the new boxing commissioner, held two hearings in the case and finally ordered the club to go through with the bout under the existing contract. All of this commotion helped to feed the flame, with the result that the fans became even more worked up and the hatred between the principals grew even more deep-seated. McTiernan and Belmont almost came to blows when they met while doing roadwork. With the fans taking sides in greater numbers daily, it is no wonder action was taken to send the fighters into seclusion during the last 48 hours before ringtime.

TO AVOID CONFUSION

Under ordinary conditions, this meeting between McTiernan and Belmont would be just another match, but the involved factors have given it so much natural ballyhoo and charged the air with so much electricity that it would not be surprising to see the Bowl jammed to capacity tomorrow night, despite the fact that no show held there so far this season has more than half-filled the large arena. In order to avoid as much last-minute confusion as possible, it was announced last night that the Bowl office would be open all day today to receive reservations and a plea was made that the fans enter the arena as soon as possible upon their arrival tomorrow night to prevent a repetition of the crush that marked the overflow attendance for the Tom Heeney-George Panka clash there last year, when the gates were rushed in the frantic effort of the many late arrivals to get inside.

M'TIERNAN — Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, smiles a confident smile as he contemplates his long-in-the-making "natural" clash with Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, in the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, tomorrow night. Buck hasn't been winning lately, but says Jimmy is one bird he can beat.

BELMONT — Jimmy Belmont (right) with his manager, Frank Klaus, of Braddock, former middleweight champion of the world, demonstrating how Jimmy will parry McTiernan's best leads and punch hard to the body to weaken the Swissvale pride and then wade in for a knockout. Belmont and McTiernan met twice as amateurs, several years ago, winding up with honors even in the melees.

CONNIE MACK On Baseball

By CONNIE MACK

Manager of World Champion Philadelphia Athletics and Winner of Five World Series.

When the three leading American League teams played their seventy-seventh game, which marked the end of the first half of the season, their percentages were as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Athletics	54	23	.701
Washington	48	29	623
New York	45	32	.584

This gave the Athletics what looks to be a measurable margin in first place, but by no means assures us the pennant, which is going to be decided in the second half of the race, when anything may happen.

The Athletics successfully met their two most severe tests of the season in recent days. The schedule called on them to play three games with the Senators in Washington and two with the same team at Shibe Park.

These games were bitterly fought, Washington putting forth its best efforts in an endeavor to tighten the race, only to be disappointed.

In Washington, the Senators won the first game, 4 to 2, and then the two teams battled to a scoreless tie in the second game, which was stopped in the eighth inning by rain.

Connie Mack

That tie necessitated an extra game in Washington. After failing to win with Earnshaw and Walberg in the first two games, the world champions came back strong and won the third and fourth games to capture the honors of the series.

Earnshaw, who lost a heartbreaker Sunday, came back with only one day's rest on Tuesday and, before a brilliant crowd, headed by President Hoover, Mrs. Hoover and government dignitaries, the big pitcher beat the Senators, 7 to 3.

I had decided to pitch Mahaffey in that game, but when Earnshaw heard that the President of the United States was going to attend, he came to me and said:

"I'll pitch today, if you want me."

Naturally, I thought it was asking too much of a pitcher to come back after only one day's rest from a hard game, but when Earnshaw was insistent that he was in good shape and would not overtax his strength, I consented.

Earnshaw's judgment was correct. He pitched one of the greatest games of his career and, besides that, batted in our first run with a double. That victory was the turning point of the series.

We also won the final game of the series at the capital with Grove pitching, and left Washington boasting of two victories out of three decisive games.

Last Monday, Washington visited Philadelphia for a doubleheader when we played to the biggest crowd in Philadelphia history, even beating all world series gatherings by many thousands.

We won the first game when Dib Williams performed the highest achievement possible for a pinch hitter. He hit a clean home run with the bases full to beat Washington. The Senators took the second game, but their visit had failed to reduce our lead.

The two series showed that the Senators had missed their chance to tighten the race, for we won three games and lost two, not counting the tie.

Recently the Yankees have come back strong and are winning steadily. Their pitchers are improving, and the team as a whole is clicking better.

DAVIES BOXES THOMAS AGAIN

The Jimmy Belmont-Buck McTiernan grudge battle in the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, tomorrow night is not the only "natural" of the week for the local boxing fans.

Willie Davies

The Hickey Park areno in Millvale has one of its own scheduled for Thursday night, featuring Willie Davies, of Charleroi, and Jimmy Thomas, Negro bantam-weight, of the Hill, in a return engagement.

Davies and Thomas first met at Hickey Park on May 21, with Thomas receiving the referee's decision after the judges had disagreed. The crowd booed the decision, figuring Davies had outscored his opponent sufficiently after suffering a knockdown in the second round to merit the honors. Since then Davies has boxed in Canada and Ohio, while Thomas put up a courageous, though losing, battle with the clever Archie Bell, of New York, in the Millvale ring.

The rematch has been arranged at 118 pounds., Davies, with his long experience as a leading contender for the world flyweight title, is the cleverer boxer, but Thomas, a youngster, himself is a good boxer and much the harder hitter.

Between Rounds

The following bouts have been arranged for the amateur show to be held in the Hickey Park arena Tuesday night of next week, for the benefit of the Steamfitters and Helpers Union: Dave Mullins vs. Steve Stefek, Mickey O'Brien vs. Steve Nickeleach, Matt Callagher vs. Paul Monar, Anson Greeves vs. Joe Ubrin, George Martso vs. L. LaDonne, John Durso vs. Steve Smith, Tony Shurra vs. Burke Veley, Frank Deal vs. Don Bufalino, Pat Leavey vs. Frank Hato, Eddie Shenk vs. Johnny Fitzgerman, Tom Hansen vs. Nick Malov, Henry Klena vs. Charley Crovatta, Sam Asto vs. Otto Tarquin and W. M. Bradley vs. Andy Kosel.

The fans still are buzzing about the technical knockout defeat of Benny Bass, whereby Kid Chocolate won the world junior-lightweight championship in Philadelphia several nights ago. Rumors are afloat that all was not well with the shinds, reports having gone out in advance that it was in the bag for Chocolate to win and odds of 2 to 1 having been posted to this effect on the day of the fight. The show did not draw up to expectations and it is doubtful if the promoters made any money. An investigation may result.

Not long ago the New York Athletic Commission notified Leon See, manager of Primo Carnera, not to make any more matches in the state without first getting its consent to the bouts. The purpose was to prevent further setups for the gigantic Italian. Now the board okays a match for Primo with Knute Hansen, the Melancholy Dane, at Rochester, tomorrow night. If there is a more washed-up heavyweight in the land today than Hansen, local fans who saw him put up a miserable fight with George Panka at Hickey Park last summer would like to be tipped off to his identity.

A wrestling bout between Andy Sapp, of Irwin, and Joe O'Donnell, of the Pittsburgh Lyceum, will serve as the opening preliminary of the amateur boxing show at the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C. Tuesday night.

Amateur bouts under the auspices of the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C. are scheduled in its outdoor arena on the North Side Tuesday night. Incidentally Jack McNally, former president and matchmaker of that organization, wishes it to be known that he has resigned from these positions, although he retains a membership and interest in the club, due to the fact that he is a candidate for alderman in the ward and wishes to devote most of his time to his campaign. Eddie McEntee is the new matchmaker and Norb Sexton the new president.

A card of seven four-round bouts will be offered at the Castle Bowl, New Castle, tomorrow night.

Bruno Sala and Billy Flanagan box the windup of a show at the Point Stadium, Johnstown, Tuesday night. Joe Walters and K. O. Kelly are the topliners at Franklin, Pa., Thursday night.

The Jack Sharkey-Mickey Walker heavyweight elimination 15-round battle for the benefit of Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's New York Milk Fund, at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, Wednesday night, is the "attic feature of a busy week. Young Jack Thompson, the world welterweight champion, meets Lou Brouillard, tough Boston southpaw, in a non-title bout in Boston on Thursday and Battling Battalino defends his world featherweight crown against Freddie Miller, another southpaw, in Cincinnati and Earl Martin meets Vidal Gregoria in Detroit the same night.

Maxie Strub, of Erie, boxes Herman Perlick, at Erie Friday night. Ignacio Ara, the Spaniard who blighted Buck McTiernan's life with a knockout in Madison Square Garden, New York, some weeks ago, makes his first appearance since that encounter when he faces Ben Jeby in a 10-rounder at the Queensboro Stadium, New York, Tuesday night. —HARRY KECK.

Fulton Wins King's Prize

BISLEY CAMP, England, July 18.—(AP.)—Sergt. A. G. Fulton, formerly of the King's Westminster Rifles, today won the King's prize, England's premier rifle shooting event, with a score of 285 out of a possible 300.

It was Sergt. Fulton's third victory in the classic rifle shooting contest, having previously won in 1912 and 1926. His father also won the event in 1882.

Miss Marjorie E. Foster, winner last year and the only woman ever to capture the event, finished well down on the list of 100, who competed in the final rounds of shooting today. She scored 269, 11 points below her winning score of 280 last year.

Bobby Jones' Golf Lesson

at the top of the swing. I find that it helps materially to open the left hand a tiny bit at the top in order to get just a little sense of the weight of the club at that point. It is running a grave risk to do this if the club is held in the palm of the hand, for then it is apt to change its position, but if it is held firmly in the fingers, the fingers may open without actually relaxing their grip upon the club and the little tug which the clubhead gives aids just that much in causing the left wrist to bend.

Now when the swing with the wrist bent at the top if the club is started down without straightening the wrists, then when the hitting area is reached there is plenty of wrist action saved up to whip the club through the ball and to close the face in plenty of time. I do not say that it is only the stiff-wristed player who has trouble with his right hand, but certainly he has more than the man whose wrists work freely.

You'll FEEL the difference
You'll ENJOY the difference

Drive a CHRYSLER

CHRYSLERS are joyously different from other cars.

Different in design. Smarter. More up-to-date. That's a difference you can see.

Different in performance. More life. More spirit. More snap in pick-up. More security at high speeds. More ease and safety of control. That's a difference you can feel. And a difference you'll thoroughly enjoy.

Look around. Examine one car after another. Drive one car after another. Comparisons will certainly convince you that only Chrysler engineering is able to give Chrysler results.

There is a Chrysler for practically every purse and purpose. Simply drive a Chrysler and learn the difference.

CHRYSLER SIX $885 to $935 — CHRYSLER "70" $1245 to $1295 — CHRYSLER EIGHT DE LUXE $1525 to $1585

Upsets Mark Second Half Sandlot League Frays

ACES RECEIVE TWO SETBACKS IN FIRST WEEK

Close Battles for Championships Promised Independent Fans of District.

By TOM BIRKS

Plenty of thrills marked the playing of the first week's games in the second half championship sandlot battles. Many upsets were recorded and practically all of the first half champions found the going tough.

Fans following the fortunes of the West Penn League certainly got a kick out of the games played, which finished with the Martin club, of Garfield, leading the parade, and St. Joachims, Swissvale Community and the Marty Griffin club following in the order named.

ACES LOSE TWO

Jack Fertig and his Homestead Aces had a tough week. On Wednesday the Steelers lost to the Marty Griffin Club, Zigoletti defeating the Aces by a 1-to-0 score.

On Thursday, Swissvale crossed the bridge. Manager Eddie Walsh started a fine lefthander named Haller and against the Aces found getting base hits a tough problem. As a result, the Aces for the first time in two seasons are sitting at the bottom of the heap.

Things went the same way in the City League. Art Rooney probably got disgusted with the North Side Civics in the first half. He did not get many new players, but probably instilled a little spirit, and the Civics copped two games, and in the two wins whitewashed Dormont, the first half champion.

CLOSE RACES

Fans now can sit back and look for some hectic battles in the various loops during the second half. George Miller and his Reliance boys found the going tough in the West Penn. The Insurance boys won the first half championship, but the best they could do in the West Penn was tie in both games played. The Marty Griffin club battled them to a 2-2 tie on Thursday at the playgrounds, and then on Friday played another tie with the Martin club, at Garfield. The Garfielders had a three-run lead, but the Insurance boys fought back to tie the ball game. The score was 3-3.

Reliance has been getting good pitching, but last week the hitters went into a bad slump, and opposing pitchers found the heavy Reliance arullery a little easy.

INTEREST SOARS

Greater interest seems to be marking the playing of sandlot baseball at the present time than ever before. Large crowds are attending the games, but the slow work of some of the pitchers gets the crowds on edge.

Westmoreland County, Washington County and the Monongahela Valley loops are off to a great start, and as in the first half races, it appears that the final week will roll around before a champion can be named.

Four new clubs came into the Steel City League in the second half. They are the Oliver Cubs, Speer Club, O'Malleys and Penn Club. O'Malleys get their baptism in league warfare this afternoon, meeting the Snee Dairy nine at Carrick. Fans will have two big games to watch this afternoon. Linwood and Martin club meet at Garfield Park in the West Penn, and the Whitaker club meets the Carrick Eagles at the Carrick Volunteer Park.

Outstanding stars during the past week:

Stauffer's one-hit game for Derry against Segar. Soapy Heyl's home run over the fence at Homewood. Batsa's pitching for Latrobe Cardinals, fanning 13 and allowing two hits against Bradenville. Haller's pitching against the Aces for Swissvale. Zigolotti, Griffins' classy twirler, who turned in the best feat of the season, beating the Aces on two hits, and tieing Reliance the folowing night with three hits. Stan Freizel's scoring, after being caught off third base, against Reliance.

Babe Ruth's Baseball Lessons

For College, School and Sandlot Players

By BABE RUTH,

BASEBALL'S HIGHEST SALARIED PLAYER.

WAITING OUT THE PITCHER

When a player takes his place in the batter's box he is not there merely to swing at anything he thinks he can hit. The good batter is the one who uses his head as well as his bat and engages in a battle of wits with the pitcher who is trying to fool him.

Make him pitch the ball over the plate. He has trouble enough out there trying to get it over and at the same time trying to place the ball where you do not want it. Make his work just as difficult as you possibly can.

How can you do that? Well, in several ways. One is to go the limit with a pitcher when he is wild. Say, for instance, that he has walked two men ahead of you, or even walked the batter ahead of you with four straight pitches. That is enough to prove that he is having trouble with his control. Under such conditions never walk up and take a swing at the first ball he pitches to you, even if it does look good. Let a strike go by if necessary. He has to pitch two more, anyway, to strike you out.

If a pitcher is having a wild spell and a batter walks up and swings at the first pitch, it may result in an out. Thus you are making his work easier and helping to pull him out of the hole when you should be forcing him to do that if he can. Perhaps he can't without your help.

Take the case of a batter when the pitcher has pitched two or three balls in succession with no strikes. It always is a good play, with two and nothing, or three and nothing, to let the next one go by, no matter how good it looks. But when you are going to "take one," as they say, do not stand there with your bat hanging in one hand, as batters sometimes do. Make the pitcher guess whether you are going to take a swing at the ball or let it go by. Act just the same at the plate as if you were waiting to swing at it.

If the pitcher gets you in a hole by getting two strikes on you quickly, then you have to be on the alert. It is a good idea, under such conditions, to shorten your grip on the bat. By that I mean to move your hands a little farther from the end of the handle and be set to take a shorter swing at the ball. You know the longer the swing the more likely you are to miss the ball. This explains why so many of the long-distance hitters are so high in strikeouts and fellows with the shorter swing are so much more difficult to strike out.

Don't be too anxious and swing at anything after the pitcher gets you in a hole, because a smart pitcher is going to pitch wide or high to you then in the hope that you will swing at a bad ball. But, as I said before, you must be on the alert to take that swing if he should stick one over.

Give the pitcher to understand that he has to pitch to you. Wait him out when you can, take as many as you can, but always stand as if you were about to have your swing.

This advice on waiting out a pitcher when he is wild, or when you have him in a hole, applies to most every hitter in the batting order, even the fellows batting third, fourth or fifth. But, like all rules, it has an exception or two. For instance, we have the case of a good-hitting catcher coming up to bat. Two are out and the game is close. It would not be good baseball for him to work the pitcher to the limit in order to get a base on balls, if this would bring up a weak-hitting pitcher. Under these conditions, it should be the play of the catcher to step in and take his swings at anything that he might have a good chance to hit. When a weak hitter follows a good one, it sometimes is a good idea to forget about making a pitcher pitch.

But ordinarily make him pitch. If he is wild, help him grow wilder. Remember that you don't have to hit the ball to be a valuable member of your team. Many a game has been won by runs which started from passes, and remember that a pitcher who walks you is going to have more to worry about after you get on base.

Yale-Harvard Trackmen Beat Oxford-Cambridge

LONDON, July 18.—(AP.)—By capturing the last two events, the Yale-Harvard track and field team today defeated the combined Oxford-Cambridge forces at Stamford Bridge. With first places alone counting, the final score was 7½ to 4½.

Two international meet records were broken and a third equaled by the victorious Yale-Harvard performers.

Penrose Hallowell, of Harvard, the eastern intercollegiate mile champion, turned in a spectacular mile victory in the record time of 4 minutes 19 seconds, despite drizzling, cold weather and a heavy track. His time displaced the 10-year-old meet record of 4:20 3-5 made by H. B. Stallard, of Cambridge.

John M. Kilcullen, of Yale, turned in a record shotput mark of 47 feet 4¾ inches.

Gerard Devoe, Yale, equaled the meet record of 15 1-0 seconds in winning the 120-yard high hurdles handily. Kilcullen's shotput mark surpassed by nearly three feet the former record of 44 feet 5 inches made by Pratt, of Harvard, in 1927.

The only double winner was Eugene Goodwillie, of Chicago, the former Cornell University star, running for Oxford. He captured the 100 and 220-yard hurdles.

Yale's athletes captured four first places. Harvard and Oxford won three outright and divided honors in another, the high jump. Cambridge's only victor was Denison, in the three-mile run. The summary:

TRACK EVENTS.

100-yard dash—Won by Goodwillie, Oxford; second, Watkins, Harvard; third, Fiske, Yale. Time, 10 1-5 seconds.

220-yard dash—Won by Goodwillie, Oxford; second, Wade, Cambridge; third, Ingraham, Yale. Time, 22 4-5 seconds.

120-yard high hurdles—Won by Devoe, Yale; second, Tisdall, Oxford; third, Record, Harvard. Time, 15 1-10 seconds.

Half-mile run—Won by Cobb, Harvard; second, Townsend, Oxford; third, Fobes, Harvard. Time, 1 minute, 55 2-5 seconds.

One-mile run—Won by Hallowell, Harvard; second, Pelle, Cambridge; third, Cornes, Oxford. Time, 4 minutes, 19 seconds.

220-yard low hurdles—Won by Record, Harvard; second, Tisdall, Oxford; third, Fiske, Yale. Time, 25 1-10 seconds.

Three-mile run—Won by Denison, Cambridge; second, Foote, Harvard; third, Fox, Harvard. Time, 14 minutes 11½ seconds.

440-yard run—Won by Warner, Yale; second, Dodge, Harvard; third, Tisdall, Cambridge. Time, 50 1-5.

FIELD EVENTS.

Shot put—Won by Kilcullen, Yale, 47 feet, 4¾ inches; second, Crowley, Yale, 45 feet, 5½ inches; third, Tisdall, Oxford, 41 feet, 11 inches.

High jump—Tie between Kuehn, Harvard, and York, Oxford, 6 feet; third, Whiteside, Yale, 5 feet, 10 inches.

Broad jump—Won by Lang, Oxford, 22 feet, 9¾ inches; second, Munro, Cambridge, 22 feet 2½ inches; third, Morse, Harvard, 21 feet.

Pole vault—Won by Williamson, Yale, 12 feet 7 inches; Sutermeister, Harvard, and Ogilvie, Cambridge, tied for second, 12 feet.

Sun-Tele Junior Golf Banquet Carded Tuesday

Prize winners and officials in the fourth annual Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph junior golf tourney for the William Randolph Hearst Trophy will gather at the festive board on Tuesday night at 7 o'clock in Webster Hall, Fifth avenue and Dithridge street, for the purpose of presenting the victors their awards.

John Jay Burke, honorary director of the tourney, will be the [illegible] and Vern Swartsfager, golf tournament editor, master of ceremonies.

Winners of all individual prizes and club caddie awards will be given their rewards following the dinner. Jimmy Conrad will provide the entertainment.

The prize winners are Walter Simpson of Washington, Pa., who receives the William Randolph Hearst Trophy, a set of five steel-shafted matched irons and a gold medal; Aleck Roni, of Castle Shannon, who gets a steel-shafted driver and a gold medal; Frank Podmilsak, of Moon Run, [illegible] an iron club and a silver medal, and Dave Wilson, Stanton Heights caddie, a bronze medal.

The Castle Shannon Golf Club, through its president, will be presented the club caddie team championship plaque, and the four members of its team, Roni, John Pecovich, August Buckey and John Kletch, will be presented individual gold medals.

Beaver Valley's runner-up caddie team, Sam Nalepnik, Winston Wertz, Arthur Zubrawski and Al Nesbitt, will receive silver medals.

Carl F. Kauffmann, former national public links champ, and Joe Curto, Joe Stevenson and Anthony Myers, former Hearst champs, will be honor guests.

Other guests will include the following officials who assisted in conducting the tourney:

S. Walter Phillips, J. W. Platt, Bob Graham, Andy Petrella, Frank Petrella, Tom O'Keefe, Eddi Kandil, Tom McDonough, Esmund Onoretta, Charley Zappa, Dave Clarke, Clarence Shakespeare, Paul E. Kraft, Jimmy Conrad, Mrs. Ann Cunfer, Mrs. Margaret Curry, Mrs. Blair, the city champion; Mrs. Josephson, Mrs. Walton, [illegible] Bruce, Joe Connors, Jimmy Carroll, Bill Stocker, Julius Platt, Walter Johnstone, Bob Gambeel, Jimmy Bruno, Joe Fazelli, C. H. Klingensmith, G. S. Nyman and several others.

Chairman of the green committee, J. S. Pollock, of the Washington County Golf and Country Club which soon is to honor its team for its work in the Hearst tourney, and Clarence Shakespeare, professional, will accompany Simpson to the banquet.

Eddie Jacobs, Hall Lose Colorado Final

DENVER, Col., July 18.—(AP.)—Berkeley Bell, New York, and Bruce Barnes, Austin, Tex., tournament favorites, today won the men's doubles championship of the Colorado open tennis tournament, defeating Eddie Jacobs, Pittsburgh, and J. Gilbert Hall, Orange, N. J.

The favorites won two sets, dropped the third, then clinched the title in the fourth, winning the match, 7-5, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

Amateurs to Play With Johnny and Gene at Summit

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 18.—The scheduled competition in which two former National open champions, Johnny Farrell and Gene Sarazen, are to compete at the Summit Golf Club here, August 8 instead of July 25, as originally announced, will be one of the most unusual matches ever held in Western Pennsylvania.

Two amateur golfers, instead of professionals, are to team up with Sarazen and Farrell. The Summit club will hold a qualifying round on Saturday, August 1, to permit all amateurs in Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia and Maryland, to play for the chance to be partners of the stars. The two men presenting the low scores on August 1 will be paired August 8 with Farrell and Sarazen.

On the morning of August 8, the former champions will play a nine-hole exhibition match, however, in company of two professionals.

Center Net Stage Set

The annual Pittsburgh Center junior and boys' net championships, scheduled to get under way on the Pittsburgh Athletic Association courts here Wednesday morning, monopolize the district tournament racquet card for the current week. Jack Lauler, P. A. A. luminary, who is again serving as chairman of the youths' contesting, has announced that interest in the event is high and that the capacity of the restricted entry list will be taxed.

Victors in the respective divisions of the impending tourney will be sent by the Pittsburgh Tennis Association to represent the Steel City area in the national junior and boys' championships at Culver Military Academy, Culver, Ind., the week of August 10.

Morgantown Wins In Legion Series

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., July 18.—(AP.)—Morgantown's American Legion junior baseball team evened the series with Wheeling in an inter-district game today, the locals winning a 10-inning fray, 9 to 8. Wheeling won the first game of the three-contest series earlier in the week. The score by innings:

										R.	H.	E.
Morgantown	0	0	3	0	1	0	2	0	2	1—9	9	6

Batteries—Soushok and Dimitro; Utt, Swank and Miller.

Washington County Golf Record Broken

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 18.—August Dietz, of Canonsburg, defeated Elwood Penn, of Washington, 1 up, in their sensational second-round match in the President Club golf tourney today.

They played 36 holes yesterday and another 18 today. The match was decided on the final green, and was the longest ever played in Washington County.

Old Aiken Poloists Win Over Argentina

LAKE FOREST, Ill., July 18.—(AP.)—James Cooley, Old Aiken substitute, swept in a last-minute goal to give his mallet mates a 12-to-11 victory today over the Santa Paula four from Argentina in the final game of the international series at Onwentsia.

Old Aiken won the series, two to one.

Mid-Atlantic Tennis Title Won by Hines

CHARLOTTE, N. C., July 18.—(AP.)—Wilmer Hines, Columbia, S. C., today won the Mid-Atlantic tennis championship in men's singles for the third consecutive time, defeating (Lefty) Bryan, Chattanooga, Tenn., in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

DE SOTO NINE IN TIE

The DeSoto nine, of Homestead, and the Champion Coal team, battled to a 4-to-4 deadlock last evening at Library. The score by innings:

	R.	H.	E.
Champion Coal	4	9	2

Batteries—Williams and Gaston; Brandis and Mathias.

George Connally Sold to Cleveland

CLEVELAND, July 18.—(AP.)—George Connally, former Chicago White Sox pitcher, was purchased tonight by the Cleveland Indians from Toledo of the American Association.

General Manager Billy Evans said he paid $20,000 for Connally and agreed to send a Cleveland hurler to Toledo on option for the rest of the season.

Connally is the leading pitcher of the Association with 12 victories and four defeats despite the fact he is playing with a last place team. He will report to the Indians at Philadelphia, Tuesday.

Haseltine Loses In Tennis Final

WILMINGTON, Del., July 18.—(AP.)—Samuel G. Gilpin, of the Merion Cricket Club, Haverford, Pa., today won the men's clay court tennis championship of Delaware. He defeated in the final round William Haseltine, of Idle Hour, Philadelphia, 6-1, 6-0, 6-0.

Anglers Pleased With Opening of Fishing Season

FINE CATCHES FOR SPORTSMEN AT PINE LAKE

Streams in Ohio Well Stocked, Rod and Reel Enthusiasts Report.

By GIB MARSH

A review of the first two weeks of the current fishing season in Pennsylvania shows that fair results have been experienced by the anglers. While very few anglers have caught their limit of game fish, such as bass, salmon, muskallounge, blue gills, perch, etc., nevertheless they have been getting some fish and enjoying their sport. In all of the lakes and streams throughout the state the experiences of the anglers are similar, landing some fish and getting a reasonable number of strikes.

Gib Marsh

At Conneaut Lake, Sugar Lake, Lake Erie, French Creek, the sportsmen have been enjoying liberal catches of perch and blue gills, and have been taking quite a number of salmon by trolling at night, but since the hot weather set in the catches of bass have been small. Really, the best catches of bass by local anglers have been made at Pine Lake, Ohio. Joseph Swoger and Bernard Smith, both of Cedar avenue, North Side, last Sunday caught five nice bass, weighing from 3 pounds to 4½ pounds, and a most attractive looking string of blue gills. And there cannot be any dispute about that catch, for the writer saw the fish and enjoyed eating some of them.

PINE LAKE POPULAR

For a lake of its limits, Pine Lake produces superior results, more so than any like in Pennsylvania. The writer has received a number of inquiries in refernce to the legal requirements of non-resident sportsmen to fish in Ohio. If the angler uses just a line, rod and hook the laws of Ohio exact no license fee. Last week the Ohio state solons in charge of the lakes, streams and fishing pastime opened up Beaver Lake, which is just a short distance from Pine Lake. This lake had been closed for five years for propagation purposes and last Sunday quite a number of local anglers tried out that body of water. Some bass were caught in the early morning and in the evening, but the best fishing hours at sundown are denied to the anglers in Ohio. Night fishing is not permitted in that state.

However, had the weather been cooler, Beaver Lake might have produced better results, and when the anglers become familiar with the "spots" the bass, salmon and other game fish prefer in Beaver Lake, real catches should be experienced. The North Side anglers, Swoger and Smith, caught the major portion of their liberal string of bass and blue gills, between 4 and 7 p. m. And they made their catches with plugs and worms.

UNFAVORABLE CONDITIONS

While a few muskallounge have been caught at Conneaut Lake, the conditions have not been favorable, according to the sportsmen who are patrons of the "muskie" fishing sport. At daylight and at sundown the lake for the past two weeks has been too smooth and the temperature decidedly too warm. Success is seldom experienced when the surface of the water is smooth. There must be sufficient wind to churn up the surface of the water in order to anticipate any success.

The bass which have been caught at Conneaut Lake were landed by the old method known as "dabbling." The angler pushes the boat well into the reeds along the shores and with about three feet of line, a small plug for a lure, a long pole for an outfit, drops the lure among the small open places about him. And they have been catching the bass in about two feet of water.

While the present warm weather will not likely inspire any thoughts about the hunting season next November, nevertheless it will be interesting to learn that the surveys recently made by the Game Commission indicate the fields and woods likely will include a supply of small game for the hunters when the season opens in November. Young rabbits seem plentiful, and there will be a liberal supply of ringneck pheasants and quail about when the gunners take to the fields on the opening days of the season.

The breeding season included favorable weather for the ground nesting game birds, and certainly for rabbits. And unless some disease makes its appearance, or unfavorable weather prevails during the maturing period for game birds and rabbits, there will be plenty of game birds and rabbits for the hunters to shoot at. The reports in reference to grouse, while not extensive, show that many covies have been observed. However, the weather was favorable during the nesting season for grouse, and likely many covies were hatched.

The Game Commission planted small game in generous quantities last spring. Thousands of rabbits were purchased and liberated and thousands of ringneck pheasant eggs were distributed among farmers and sportsmen for hatching purposes. Furthermore, there were large quantities of weasles and foxes killed during the past trapping season, which reduced that army of game destroyers, making conditions more favorable for young rabbits and birds to survive until the hunting season rolls around.

MISS MADISON RETAINS TITLE

Miss Madison splashed to an easy victory in the 880-yard free style, last event of the swimming program, defeating Lenore Kight, of Homestead, Pa., her nearest competitor, by 25 yards. During the four days of the meet she successfully defended her free style titles at 100 meters, one mile and 440 yards.

Miss Rawls had a struggle to win the 220-yard breast stroke from Margaret Hoffman, of Scranton, Pa., the defending champion, but she did it by five or six yards, and swam the distance in three minutes, 13 3-5 seconds, the fasest any American girl has ever traveled in that event. Last night she defeated Eleanor Holm in the 300 meters medley and set a new world standard of 4:45 4-5.

Just 14, she has established herself as a district Olympic threat in an event which has long been dominated by mid-European girls. She still is more than three seconds shy of the world record set in 1928 by Lottie Muhe, of Germany, at 3:11 2-5, but she has over a year to grow and gain strength.

Although the swimming part of the program has ended, one diving event is yet to be held. Georgia Coleman of the Los Angeles A. C., will defend this title tomorrow night.

The 1931 National A. A. U. outdoor swimming champions:

100 meters free style—Helene Madison, Washington, A. C., Seattle.*
One-mile free style—Miss Madison, W. A. C.*
440-yard free style—Miss Madison.*
300 meters medley (breast stroke, back stroke, free style, 100 meters each)—Miss Katherine Rawls, Hollywood, Fla.
880-yard relay—Los Angeles A. C. (Marjorie Lowe, Jennie Cramer, Norene Forbes, Josephine McKim.)*
880-yard free style—Miss Madison.*
220-yard back stroke—Miss Rawls.
High platform diving—Georgia Coleman, Los Angeles A. C.*
Springboard diving—To be decided.

*Denotes retained championship.

NAVY NETMEN WIN

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—The Navy's tennis team today retained the Leech Cup by defeating the Army's representatives 4 to 3. Coming from behind the Navy doubles team of Lieut. Commander D. H. Godfrey, of Annapolis, and Lieut. Morgan Watt, New York, clinched the match by defeating Maj. L. S. Hobbs, Washington, and Maj. J. H. Hills, acting captain, 5-7, 6-4, 6-0.

Charleroi Return To M.-A. Loop Seen

Business Men to Take Over League Franchise, Daily Intimates After Parley

CHARLEROI, Pa., July 18.—The Middle Atlantic League franchise which the Charleroi volunteer fire department relinquished to the league last Thursday is likely to be returned to Charleroi in the immediate future, it was indicated at a conference which Elmer Daily, league president, held with sports leaders, business men and city officials here today.

The franchise, previously operated by the fire department, was turned back to the league because of financial difficulties. President Daily said that during his stay here today he was informed that local business men had volunteered to subscribe approximately $1,000 toward a Middle Atlantic League baseball revival in Charleroi.

BUSINESSMEN TO AID

The businessmens action prompts the belief that their assistance will be accepted, that they will be permitted to determine the policies to be followed in bringing back and maintaining the franchise here, and that they will name a single executive to carry out these policies.

Heretofore, differences of opinion regarding the manner in which the club's affairs should be conducted have been possible, and it is thought that the "single executive" plan will make for greater harmony.

Honorable John K. Tener, long a national sports figure, is understood to be one of the men expressing willingness to assist in putting the club back on a sound financial base.

DAILY OPTIMISTIC

"The trouble here really is not very serious. Difficulties in Charleroi are not as bad as those in other cities that had trouble in the operation of a franchise, and I think that the matter can be straightened out. I have talked with many people here today, and find they want the franchise retained locally. It should not take very long to adjust prevailing differences."

Grays Top Crawfords

The Homestead Grays scored their second victory of the season over the Crawford Giants at Forbes Field, yesterday, 3 to 1.

Willie Foster, Grays' giant southpaw, and Sam Streeter, left-hand pitching ace of the Crawfords, engaged in a beautiful mound duel with the Grays twirler getting the edge through his ability to keep the Crawfords' five hits scattered out over eight innings. Their lone tally came in the ninth inning when Moe Harris tripled to right and came across while Evans and Charleston were retiring H. Williams at first.

Streeter, like his mound rival, held the Grays to five safeties. The victors' first score was delivered in the fourth inning. Evans was safe on a fielder's choice, took second while V. Harris was being run down between second and third and scored on Jones' single.

Two walks and Scales' two-bagger gave the Grays two scores in the fifth round. The score:

PARKS ENTRIES TO CLOSE SOON

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

With four days left before official closing of the entry lists, aspirants to laurels of the second annual Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph-Pittsburgh Public Parks tennis championships last evening numbered just one short of the three-score mark. Sixteen prospective performers filed names with the public parks tournament editor in the course of yesterday, several of the newcomers boasting excellent chance not only of attaining individual park honors, but even of coming through to land distinction in the inter-park series for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph challenge cups and the right to represent the Steel City as Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph guests at the national public parks championships in Detroit the week of August 17.

Promising contenders in the masculine division aligned among the latest group include Paul Elliott, former Pittsburgh center boys' titleholder; Nick Maczkov, hard-hitting lad, who gave Jack Lauler, P. A. A. star, fancy battle in the recent West Penn tourney, and Albert Lazar, accomplished East End youth. Elliott and Maczkov will compete on the Frick lot with 1930 Champion Frank Broida constituting their chief opposition. Lazar is slated for Highland and will make it warm for the best of 'em on the Stanton avenue rectangles.

MISS KLAGES ENTERED

Mildred Klages, clever North Side racquetress, headed the array of feminine hopefuls joining up on Saturday. Miss Klages, an accurate exponent of the chop-stroke, captured the West Park women's premiership last year and in so doing displayed sound tennis sense, as well as considerable mechanical ability. She aims to repeat next week—and it will require strong rival play to prevent her from achieving her objective.

Seekers after the municipal crowns are reminded that, before being permitted to join battle, they must exhibit to the committeemen in charge at their respective parks duly issued certificates entitling them to cavort upon the public courts of the city. This rule will be stringently enforced, as will the regulation barring netmen who enjoy access to club and privately owned tennis facilities.

ENTRIES CLOSE WEDNESDAY

Entries for both men's and women's singles will be closed at midnight on Wednesday. Names must be submitted in writing on the special blanks provided for such purpose and printed each day in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph sports page. Mail or bring blanks to the Public Parks Tennis Tournament Editor, in care of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Championship hostilities will be begun on the net lots of Schenley, Highland, Frick, Olympia, Riverview and West Parks a week from tomorrow, with the Inter-Park Elimination Series booked for the Frick enclosure Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 6, 7 and 8. The list of new entries:

Linwood A. C. Plans Boxing, Grid Teams

The Linwood A. C., of Lincoln avenue, is going in for athletics on a large scale. Already represented in baseball with a team in the West Penn League, it plans to have a large string of amateur boxers in competition shortly, with Tom Bowler acting as trainer and coach. A first-class football team also will be organized for the fall with a former Pitt star acting as coach.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

WILLYS MAKES NEW RECORD IN 500-MILE RUN

Engine of Fully-Equipped Stock Car Never Stopped During Terrific Speed Test.

Speeding around a surveyed five-mile course on Muroc Dry Lake, a strictly stock Willys Six roadster, driven by Ed Hughes, has added 10 new Class "C" American stock car records to its already impressive group of records. They range from 10 to 500 miles, and were created under American Automobile Association supervision and timing.

OFFICIAL FIGURES.

The A. A. A. time sheet showed that:

The 500 miles were covered in 7 hours 6 minutes and 45 seconds, an average speed of 70.2988 miles per hour, establishing a new speed mark for that distance and lowering the former record for cars selling under $1,400 by 6.21 miles per hour.

Ten miles in 8 minutes 38.84 seconds; 50 miles in 42 minutes 43.43 seconds; 100 miles in 85 minutes 12.65 seconds; 200 miles in 171 minutes 6.13 seconds; 250 miles in 3 hours 34 minutes 35.97 seconds; 300 miles in 4 hours 16 minutes 39.38 seconds; 70.30 miles in 1 hour; 209.11 miles in three hours; 419.89 miles in 6 hours.

These records are for American stock cars from 183 to 305 cubic inches of piston displacement. The Willys Six piston displacement is 193 cubic inches.

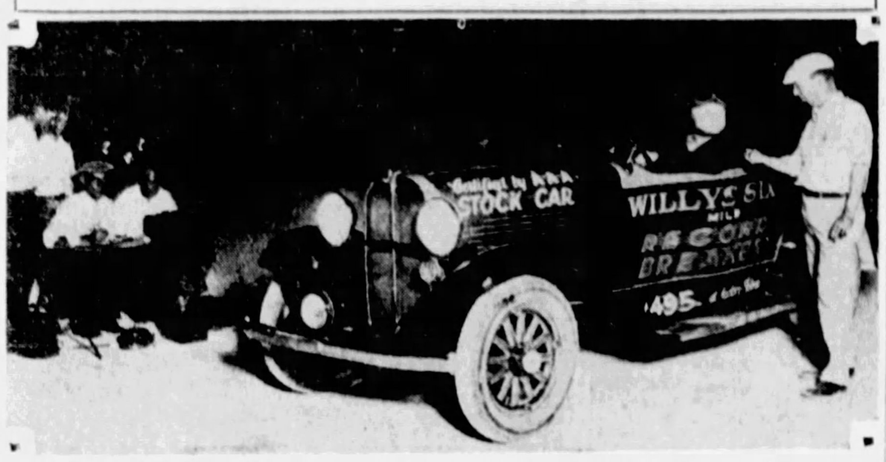
Full factory equipment, such as bumpers and spare tire, was carried and the gear ratio of 4.3 to 1 was used.

PERFECT PERFORMANCE

Hughes reported the Willys gave 100 per cent perfect performance, as the engine was never stopped during the 500 miles. Not one adjustment was made. It was not necessary to add any water to the radiator, although the heat was intense.

Because of the intense heat during the daytime on Muroc Dry Lake in the Mojav Desert at this time in the year, the run was made at night.

WILLYS CREATES NEW STOCK MARKS



FOR SPEED—Ed Hughes at the wheel of a stock Willys Six at Muroc Dry Lake, Cal., ready for the start of a series of speed tests which resulted in the creation of 10 new Class "C" stock car speed records from 10 to 500 miles. The performance, electrically timed and supervised by officials of the A. A. A., was made at night.

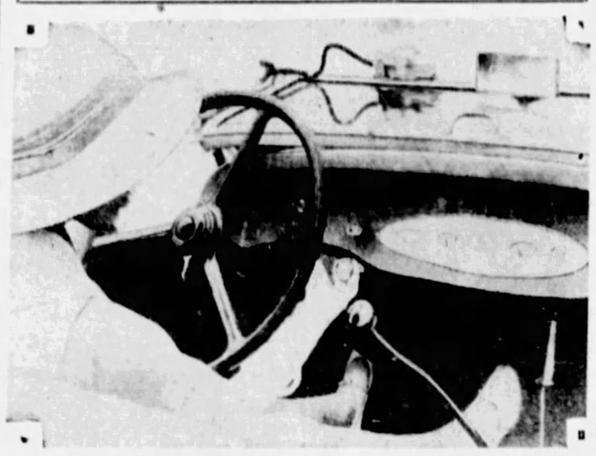
AUBURN SHOWS BIGGEST GAIN

NEW YORK, July 18.—Of the 33 makes of automobiles built by 23 manufacturers only three showed gains in registrations in the first five months of 1931 over the same period of last year, according to registration figures recently released for the 48 states and the District of Columbia.

Auburn Automobile Company held the unique position of being the only manufacturer to show a gain in its complete line, combined Auburn and Cord registrations being 122 per cent greater for the first five months of 1931 than during the same period of 1930. Buyers of Auburn and Cord cars registered 16,516 cars in the first five months of 1931, as against 6,541 for the same period last year. Auburn registrations alone were 145.6 per cent greater.

These compiled registration figures show that Cadillac increased its registrations for the five months' period 25.4 per cent over the first five months of 1931 and the Willys car registrations were 6.5 per cent greater.

DE SOTO FREE WHEELS



BUTTON OPERATED—The free wheeling unit offered as optional equipment on De Soto sixes and eights is of a perfected type developed by Chrysler Motors' engineers. It free wheels in all forward speeds. The control is located below the dash, at the immediate right of the steering column. When the button is pushed in, the car is free wheeling and when it is pulled out the car is in conventional gear.

SAUPP COMPANY BUYS STOCK OF KILROY MOTORS

Firm Enlarges Activities in Used Car Field in Taking Over Extensive Business.

E. W. Ennis, secretary of Frank D. Saupp, Inc., has announced the purchase of the entire stock of Kilroy Motors, Inc. Mr. Ennis said:

"This purchase is a great forward step in the colorful history of Frank D. Saupp, Inc., and further emphasizes its right to the position as one of Pittsburgh's largest automobile dealers."

Frank D. Saupp, Inc., was founded in 1904 and has been selling motor cars continuously since that time, having served more than 75,000 customers. Mr. Ennis stated that the reason for the purchase of Kilroy Motors was to further enlarge its used car activities.

Kilroy Motors, Inc., was formed several years ago to handle the De Soto car, which franchise was relinquished a year ago, since which time Kilroy Motors have sold a better class of used cars. Kilroy Motors has built up quite an enviable reputation which Saupp officials feel will be of great benefit to them, and they are making special effort to welcome Kilroy Motors' many customers at their service station, 5803-17 Center avenue, and at their salesroom, 5928 Penn avenue.

Saupp officers also state the used car business is very good and the addition of this enormous purchase offers buyers an unusually large selection from which to choose.

CHOOSES PLYMOUTH

Frederick W. Agnew Mrs. Agnew Howard Samson

CONTEST WINNER—Frederick W. Agnew, 2419 Saranac avenue, Dormont, winner of a cigar radio contest, chose a Plymouth sedan as his prize. Commenting on his new car, Mr. Agnew said he was impressed by its smoothness of operation, contributed to by these new features: Floating power, free wheeling, easy-shift transmission and hydraulic brakes. Mr. Agnew also said the all-steel one-piece body of the Plymouth influenced his choice. It was delivered by Howard Samson, vice president of the Samson Motor Company, Baum boulevard.

ROYSTON MARKS 20 YEAR WITH RARE CAR SHOW

Celebrating its second anniversary as Cadillac-LaSalle distributor, the Royston-Cadillac-LaSalle Company is presenting the most colorful display of motor cars ever brought to Pittsburgh.

Working in co-operation with the art and color section of the General Motors Corporation, Cadillac has brought through its factories this large group of cars in what are undoubtedly the most unusual color combinations ever conceived.

Included in the display are LaSalle V-8's, Cadillac V-8's, Cadillac V-12's and Cadillac V-16's. Many of them will startle the average motorist. A phaeton, for instance, is shown in a solid tone of red—even including the leather upholstering. Another is a soft pastel blue; while another matches the green of its wheels with green leather seats and cushions. A veritable riot of contrasting colors is also shown in wheels, fenders and bodies.

These cars have been presented only in the Cadillac salons in Detroit and New York, and the exhibit in its entirety has been moved to Pittsburgh as a special compliment to the Royston-Cadillac-LaSalle Company.

This special display will continue in Pittsburgh until July 31

HUGE DISPLAY BY CHRYSLER

ATLANTIC CITY, July 18.—Not only is Chrysler Corporation the only automotive manufacturer to be represented at the second annual "American Fair," which opened here today in the world's largest exhibit hall, the Auditorium, but it has the largest and most extensive exhibit ever put on display.

The four major divisions of Chrysler Corporation — Chrysler, Dodge, De Soto and Plymouth—are utilizing approximately 20,000 square feet of floor space displaying their various lines of motor cars.

More than 100 exhibitors, including the United States and Porto Rican governments, are found in the Auditorium. The various Chrysler displays are the only automotive displays that the exhibit has ever had.

It is estimated that more than two million people will attend the exhibit from July 16 to August 26.

Traffic Officer's Life Perilous One

The traffic officer lives a precarious life at the hands of the wavy driver who is likely at any time to give him a side swipe. To ease the minds of the officers, bright bits of clothing have been devised by some communities, but should be more widely adopted, says the Albert Russel Erskine Bureau for Street Traffic Research of Harvard University.

White caps, white shirts, white belts, white gloves and slickers help protect the officer. These are especially necessary for night work or on rainy days when visibility is low.

83 Per Cent Auto Sales Replacement

More than 83 per cent of all automobiles manufactured in the United States last year were used as replacements, the statistical department of the Pittsburgh Motor Club reports. The balance of the total output was sold to those who did not own motor vehicles at the time of purchase, or as additions to the number of automobiles owned by individuals or organizations. During last year 2,900,000 new vehicles replaced used cars.

Auto Industry's Sales Exceed All Others

The automobile manufacturing industry led all other individual products in value last year. New cars were valued at $3,717,996,000. Other products in the order of their value were slaughtering and meat packing, steel works and rolling mill products, foundry and machine shop products, petroleum refining, electrical machinery, printing and publishing and women's clothing.

Motorists Warned To Watch Children

When schools are closed motorists must be particularly careful to watch children who play in the street.

SCHWAB BUYS STOCK IN STUTZ

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 18.—Charles M. Schwab, who was for many years the largest stockholder and director of the Stutz Motor Car Company of America, Inc., and who sold his interests when he resigned from the directorate, recently purchased a large interest in the Stutz company. He is again the largest Stutz stockholder, he and his associates controlling approximately 70 per cent of the common stock of the company.

Last week Mr. Schwab visited the factory of the Stutz company to inspect the plant and confer with the management. He followed his usual practice of chatting with various workmen during his inspection of the factory, and exchanging with them opinions on the company's policies and management. Speaking to a meeting of foremen and department heads, he congratulated them on the wonderful spirit and tenacity they exhibited during the period of the reorganization of the company, and pointed out to them how their teamwork and loyalty had produced results.

Free Roller Device Price Reduced Here

A reduction in price, effective immediately, has just been announced by Wilcox Brothers, automotive distributor for the Scotch Free Roller, a free wheeling device for Chevrolet and Ford cars. The new low price constitutes a savings of 20 per cent, which Mr. Wilcox states was made possible because of the increase in sales volume.

Accidents at Peak In Evening Rush

During 1930 most automobile accidents in New York State occurred between 5 and 6 p. m. It is a time of the day when the motorist must be unusually alert, comments the Silvertown Safety League.

All Air Intake Sounds Stilled In New Nash Car

The whirlpool action of water draining from a bath tub, led to the development of the famous Maxim silencer and shell ejector as applied to firearms and giant ordnance, states George Gray, president, Nash Pittsburgh Motors.

A similar principle stills all air intake sounds in the new downdraft carburetion system of the recently introduced Nash straight-eight 970 motor car engine.

This interesting "silence engineering" detail is accomplished by the use of baffle plates installed inside of the new air cleaner, which prevents the entrance of dirt and abrasives into the carburetor, cylinder walls and pistons. The plates muffle all sound as the air enters the intake and eliminate the whistling noises common in some types of automobile carburetion.

FREE WHEELING FOR USED CARS

Modernized used cars, equipped with the latest free-wheeling drive, are made available to the public through the Graham company's decision to supply dealers everywhere with Graham improved free wheeling units for installation in older models.

E. S. Carpenter, Graham representative here, declares that this advanced step by the factory will immediately stimulate the demand for Graham cars in the used car market. He said:

"The Graham improved free wheeling, introduced last month, has met with a great welcome everywhere. Now that earlier models can be equipped with the same free wheeling unit, many owners will wish to enjoy the advantages of the new drive. It can now be installed in most previous models exactly as in the current models."

DODGE OFFERS NEW FEATURES

Frank D. Saupp, Inc., announces that among the distinctive features recently added to the new Dodge line is free wheeling, combined with the silent-shift, constant-mesh type of transmission. One or the other of these outstanding engineering developments is in use on several of the leading makes of cars, but the new Dodge is unique in that it combines both of them for a small additional charge. The well-known economy, smoothness and dependability of the new Dodge Brothers Six and Eight are further increased by the addition of free wheeling and this constant-mesh type of silent-shift transmission.

James Kilroy, president of the company, says these developments on the new Dodge are the result of some considerable amount of study, and that they were not used on the Dodge earlier this year because of the fact that they were being thoroughly tested before they were incorporated in production.

Dodge free wheeling is positive in all forward speeds and requires the use of the clutch only when starting or when in reverse. Control of free wheeling is by a button located on the dash. When the button is in, the car is in free wheeling. When it is out, conventional shifting is employed with the use of the clutch.

'Back-Seat' Driving Praised by Harvard

Back-seat driving ought to be welcomed rather than condemned as bitterly as it is, says the Erskine Traffic Bureau of Harvard. It would be welcomed, according to the bureau's director, Dr. Miller McClintock, if it were intelligently exercised. A timely warning from the back seat has averted many accidents. The result of ideal back-seat driving would be to supply four eyes instead of two, and two attentions instead of one—an increase keenly needed in the current speeding up of traffic generally.

Engineer Outlines Road Safety Points

Highway safety consists of three elements, like a three-legged stool, on each of which rests a part of the burden and without one of them the whole topples over, declares Charles Upham, engineer director of the American Road Builders' Association, in a radio address. The formula for highway safety as given by Mr. Upham is: Safe drivers plus safe vehicles plus safe roads equals safety. Carelessness can be overcome by "courtesy and caution," he says.

Standard Announces 10-Cent Gasoline

The Standard Oil Company of Pennsylvania last week announced a third grade of gasoline which will sell at 10 cents a gallon, plus three cents tax. The company at the same time announced a cut of one cent a gallon on first and second grade gasoline.

NEW DE SOTO AGENTS NAMED

Richard Hevessey, sales manager for the B. F. Stout Company, Pittsburgh distributor for DeSoto and Plymouth motor cars, has announced the appointment of several new dealers.

They are: Brasecker Motor Company, 210 West Ohio street, North Side; Fisher Motor Company, of New Kensington, and C. E. Stoner, of Oakmont.

All of the new dealers are well established in their respective communities with complete equipment for sales and service. Each has arranged for a special opening display of DeSoto and Plymouth cars.

Holmes Heads Reo Firm's Truck Sales

Milton A. Holmes, for many years one of the outstanding figures in the motor truck industry, has been appointed sales manager of the Reo Motor Car Company truck division, it is announced by Elijah G. Poxson, general sales manager of the company. Just prior to his appointment Mr. Holmes was Reo's regional representative on the West Coast.

U. S. Rubber Sales Show Big Increase

The tire business of the United States Rubber Company for the first five months of this year showed a large increase over the business of the same period a year ago, according to L. M. Simpson, general sales manager of the tire department. This increase includes both dealer sales and sales to car manufacturers, Mr. Simpson stated.

Two Billion Spent On Roads Annually

Two billion dollars annually is spent on the construction and maintenance of roads and streets in the United States.

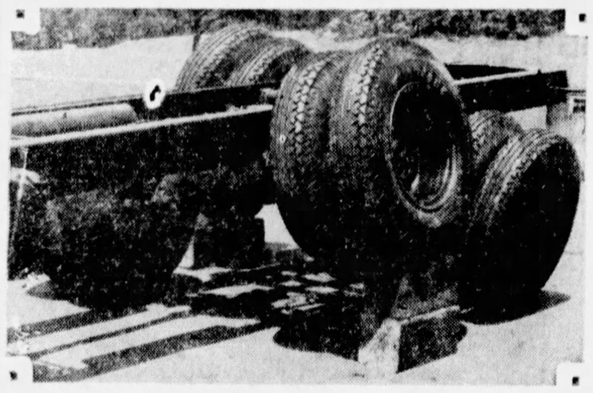
FRAME STAYS LEVEL



NO SPRINGS—The newest wrinkle in heavy duty truck construction, as perfected by O. F. Quartullo, president of the Mercer-Pittsburgh Truck Company. A cantilever carrying beam gives the vehicle extreme flexibility without disturbing the load level and, at the same time, eliminates rear springs, shackles, radius rods. The picture was made here.

OLDSMOBILE'S NEW quiet SECOND GEAR GIVES A new KIND OF ACCELERATION

Four-Door Sedan

SWIFT · SMOOTH · QUIET

You can't appreciate how much a really quiet second gear adds to driving enjoyment until you take the wheel and try the new Oldsmobile ++ For this feature, one of many important new ones now offered in Oldsmobile, gives a new kind of acceleration. It is unusually swift, to give you the lead in traffic. It is remarkably smooth, to give added zest to fast getaway. And it is almost unbelievably noise-free—actually rivaling high-gear performance in quietness ++ These unusual advantages of Oldsmobile's new Quiet Second Gear are given the highest possible degree of utility by the famous Syncro-Mesh transmission. This feature enables you to shift smoothly and easily through all gears without clashing. And this applies not only to the shifts from low into second and from second to high, but also to the change from high back to second. This shift . . . so difficult with the ordinary transmission, and so useful for a quick burst of speed in traffic . . . can be made easily and silently, without reducing car speed ++ The new Oldsmobile is a great car to drive for many reasons. And not the least of these is its new Quiet Second Gear—transforming Oldsmobile's smooth, increased power into keen, fast, quiet acceleration . . . and contributing new pleasure—new satisfaction—to driving.

KILROY MOTORS, INC.

Pittsburgh's Largest Used Car Dealer

253 USED CARS

Every one of these cars has been reconditioned and is guaranteed by the oldest, most reliable dealer in Pittsburgh. The selection—from a total of 253 automobiles—is highly unusual this year, particularly. Nowhere else in the city can you find such a choice of makes and models.

Come Today and See!

Easy terms can be arranged. We'll be glad to take your present car in trade, and make you a generous allowance.

THIS gigantic purchase enables us to offer the Pittsburgh public the most extraordinary bargains ever advertised for sale in this city. We bought at our own prices—we are able to sell at amazingly low figures. If you have thought about a car this summer or fall—see this tremendous stock of good used cars RIGHT NOW.

MOTORCYCLE BARGAINS

You fellows who have been looking for motorcycle bargains, here's your opportunity. Many have just equipped the City of Pittsburgh Police Dept. with new Harley-Davidson motorcycles and have taken in trade 79 Harley-Davidsons, Indian Chiefs and Scouts. These machines are late models with front-wheel brakes, balloon tires and all the modern improvements. Quite a few have side cars. And the price is less than the prices of 3 or 4 years ago. If anyone should ever tell you that you can get a late model machine and side car like these for $70.00 and up, you would have thought him crazy. Take a trip-drop in at once while the selection is large and a small deposit will hold your choice for future delivery.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Local Securities

LOCAL STOCKS FLUCTUATE IN NARROW RANGE

Volume Reflects Small Public Participation; Markets on Firm Base.

The volume of business transacted on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during the week would make just an ordinarily fair day's turnover in times of so-called normal markets. Less than 14,000 shares of stock changed hands in the six sessions ending with Saturday's half day. It was one of the smallest weekly turnovers this year, although it exceeded by about 4,000 the previous week's trading, when the actual sales were 9,878 shares.

Prices remained in an extremely narrow range throughout the week. Such trading interest as was evident centered in Lone Star Gas and Western Public Service, the two fuel leaders, while Hachmeister-Lind enjoyed the largest turnover in the specialty department with a little over 1,200 shares.

MARKETS STABILIZING

Markets such as have been experienced since the "Moratorium Advance" came to a halt around the first of this month are significant chiefly from the fact that the stagnation may reasonably be interpreted as indicating a fairly satisfactory technical condition. Stocks, apparently, are in strong hands and, until the financial situation undergoes a radical change, may be expected to remain there. The narrow up and down movements of the past 10 days are exactly the kind of market needed to strengthen the foundation of the stock structure. It may be some time before the benefits of the stabilization become apparent, but there is no doubt the list is in a position to respond quickly to good news or meet an adverse development calmly.

AWAIT STEEL MEETING

With the foreign debt situation blowing hot and cold almost hourly there is a disposition to remain on the sidelines and await definite information. From the domestic standpoint the next big (scheduled) news will come from the U. S. Steel Corporation meeting July 28. The dividend question will be decided then and second quarter earnings will be announced. It is also possible some statement on the Corporation's wage policy may be forthcoming. It is quite likely that no matter what develops at the meeting the stock market will receive the action with a demonstration one way or the other.

Texas Bill Would Fix Price on Petroleum

AUSTIN, Tex., July 18.—Under the provisions of a bill introduced in the Legislature Friday by Senator Gainor, the State Oil and Gas Commission, which the measure seeks to create, would be required to fix the minimum posted prices for oil and gas. The proposed commission is to consist of three members, one to be appointed by the Governor, one by the Senate and one by the House.

Certificates of public convenience and necessity would have to be granted for drilling of all wells in proven territory. Ratable takings by pipe lines are required and wells of 40 barrels daily production and under shall be exempt from proration.

National Dairy Net Holding Up Well

NEW YORK, July 18.—Net profit of National Dairy Products Corporation for the first half of 1931 was around $1.80 a share on 6,202,177 shares of common now outstanding, compared with net of $12,947,211, or $2.16 a share on the 5,971,036 common shares in the first half of 1930.

Earnings are holding up comparatively well in view of the generally low rate of business prevailing. Normally, National Dairy earns its largest part of the annual profits in the last six months.

National Dairy continues in strong cash position with more than $19,000,000 cash on hand as against $19,886,012 as of December 31, 1930.

Denver-Rio Accepts Purchase Terms

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—The Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad today filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission acceptance of the conditions laid down by that body in authorizing it to purchase the Denver and Salt Lake Railroad.

The conditions fixed by the Commission were that the so-called Dotseric cut-off be constructed and that the road purchase any outstanding stock offered at not more than $155 a share. Detailed copies of the agreement were filed with the agreement.

German Company Pays Off Creditors

NEW YORK, July 18.—Dillon, Read & Co., bankers for Siemens and Halske and Siemens Schuckertwerke, German manufacturers of electrical products, announce they have been advised by these companies that they have voluntarily paid off short-term credits outstanding with New York banks, anticipating their maturities by several months. This action was taken to avoid any possible service difficulties in view of the exchange restrictions imposed in Germany.

PRICE INDEX HOLDS STEADY

AUBURNDALE, Mass., July 18.—(AP.)—Commodity prices in general during the week showed an erratic trend with indices of six individual groups showing increases, five decreases and three remaining unchanged, says the McGill Commodity Service. The international financial crisis has not been favorable to an increase in prices. As it appears now, the situation is favorable for granting of an international credit to Germany which would definitely iron out the difficulties.

The most important price changes for the week follow:

	This Week	Prev. Week	Year Ago
	July	July	July
All commodities	58.8	59.3	76.3
Industrial	60.5	60.4	77.4
Agricultural	55.8	55.4	70.1
Hides and leather	84.2	86.7	102.9
Livestock	57.2	60.3	81.5
Paint materials	67.1	71.7	86.7

SEARS MERGER REPORT DENIED

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—(INS.)—Flat denial today greeted reports of the proposed consolidation of Sears-Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co., both huge mail orders firms.

Lessing Rosenwald, Jr., vice president of Sears-Roebuck, said:

"I do not know there is any merger in prospect. There have been many reports concerning a merger with the Montgomery Ward firm, but in the past they have been merely newspaper reports. I presume the same is true now."

The younger Rosenwald is director of the Philadelphia branch of his company.

Dry Goods Market.

WHEAT MARKET CLOSES JUMPY

CHICAGO, July 18.—Struggling against heavy arrivals of newly harvested wheat, and faced by prospects of an augmented influx on Monday, wheat prices went lower today. Uncertainties that surrounded financial parleys abroad, with wheat export business at a halt, tended to throttle bullish action. The corn market averaged higher, influenced by continued drought and by temperatures still threatening crop damage.

Wheat closed unsettled, ⅜@¾ cents lower, corn ⅛ down to ⅞ advanced, oats ⅛ off to ¼ up, and provisions varying from 12 cents decline to 7 cents gain.

Cottonseed Oil Market.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Bleachable cottonseed oil was extremely dull and featureless. Trade was at a complete standstill, owing to the wide disparity between the respective views of buyers and sellers. The steadiness of cotton restricted offerings, but the demand was checked by the unsettlement in lard, grains and hogs. There were no sales.

Prime crude nominal; bleachable spot and July closed $7.25; September, $8.91; December, $8.40; and January, $8.50. Prime summer yellow contracts were also neglected with closing prices as follows: Spot, $7.00; July, $7.05; September, $8.75; October, $8.45; December, $8.35; January, $6.45.

COTTON CLOSES STEADY, HIGHER

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP.)—A slight opening advance in cotton was followed by reactions today, but prices steadied up again in the later trading.

October contracts, after selling off from 9.46 to 9.31, rallied to 9.47 and closed at 9.45. The final tone of the market was steady at a net decline of 1 point on July, but generally 1 to 4 points net higher.

The amount of cotton on shipboard at the end of the week awaiting clearance was estimated at 48,000 bales against 50,000 last year.

STOCK TRADING DULL, CHANGES UNIMPORTANT

Volume of Sales Lowest Of Any Saturday Since Last August—Rails Hold.

By BROADANWALL
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Total trading on the stock exchange today aggregated less than 400,000 shares, representing the lowest Saturday volume since last August. Price fluctuations were virtually as dull and unimportant as the volume.

An early dip in prices was followed by recovery almost sufficient to offset the initial decline and on the whole the market closed with hardly any net change, with perhaps a very slight tendency toward the downward side.

The uncertainty surrounding outcome of the German situation discussions over the week-end was responsible for the lack of interest, although would-be bears were hardly disposed to renew aggressive activities in the fear that some cheer may develop from these meetings.

CIGARETS SPURT

A spurt in the cigaret stocks was the feature of the short session. Lorillard was the outstanding performer, attaining a new high price for the year.

The sponsorship for Lorillard contends that the recent advance in cigaret prices helps Lorillard relatively more than any other prominent cigaret producing company.

Railroad shares held virtually unchanged as did also the public utilities. Anaconda was moderately higher.

The claim is made that the curtailment program among copper producers, as exemplified the past week by Cerro de Pasco's announcement, marks the final phase of readjustment.

Commercial Solvents moved up to a new high for the current movement.

AWAIT DEVELOPMENTS

In most stocks, however, it was apparent that the disposition is to await further developments, not only in the domestic situation, but also from abroad.

Steel common was quoted at 1-16th premium for lending after the market closed, but it was not accepted as indisputable evidence of an unusually large short interest in the stock. There is considerable difference of opinion as to the size of the short interest in the entire market, but the minor influences on prices indicate that nothing more than a normal short interest exists.

As a matter of fact there has been evidence that large bears have been cautioned against undue pressure against the market.

Panama Canal June Shipments Decline

BALBOA, Canal Zone, July 18.—(AP.)—Cargo tonnage through the Panama Canal during June was the lowest this year and showed a sharp decrease from June, 1930.

Shipments both west to east and east to west totaled 1,758,976 tons, as compared with 2,147,181 tons in June, 1930, and 1,925,452 in May.

Heavy decreases occurred in shipments from Atlantic to Pacific showing a curtailment in movement of almost all commodities routed in this direction. From Pacific to Atlantic several important gains were made, mostly in food products, but the increases were all absorbed by decreases in mineral oils and ores.

Rail Reciprocity Hearing Date Set

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Hearings will be held at Philadelphia July 29 by the Interstate Commerce Commission on reciprocity privileges of the Pennsylvania and Reading railroads on purchase and shipments of railroad supplies.

The Philadelphia hearings will be part of a general investigation ordered some months ago by the commission into the extent of agreements between railroads and manufacturers whereby allowances are allegedly made on rates to shippers in exchange for reduced prices for rails and other supplies.

Commercial Plane Production Drops

NEW YORK, July 18.—Production of commercial airplanes, from the standpoint of value, declined 47 per cent this year as compared with the first five months of 1930, a report by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce shows. Commercial aircraft engine production was off 45 per cent. Purchases of equipment by the Army and Navy, on the other hand, showed a decided increase. Deliveries of military planes in the first five months this year reached 332, as compared with 291 in the corresponding period of 1930.

New York City Bank Market Firms Up

NEW YORK, July 18.—The New York City Bank stock market during the past week was slightly firmer as compared with the previous week, as indicated by the dollar index figures compiled by Holt, Rose & Troster. Based upon July 18 prices, 16 leading bank and trust company shares were quoted at 18.9 times known earnings against 18.2 times at the close of the previous week. The yield now stands at 4.559 per cent against 4.518 per cent a week ago.

CLIMBING ROSES OFFER VARIED BLOOMS, COLORS

Dr. Van Fleet and Paul's Scarlet Still Held Best; Other Brands Described.

By EDWARD C. VICK
Sun-Telegraph Garden Editor.

Dr. Van Fleet and Paul's scarlet climber are two climbing roses that are still unequalled in their class. Chaplin's pink climber is a good rose, but it does not measure up to the other two completely.

Mr. Vick

The new dawn, the everblooming climbing Dr. Van Fleet, I have not tested, but I am promised a plant in the autumn. Spring orders exceeded the supply.

Dr. Van Fleet with me flowers somewhat, a few flowers now and then through the season.

Another new climber which certainly looks good is Thelma, similar in habit of growth to Paul's scarlet climber. The fragrant flowers are borne in clusters, lasting for a considerable time. The color is coral pink, suffused with carmine.

FLOWERS IN CLUSTERS

Sander's white is a climber with glistening white flowers of double rosette form, borne in clusters. The flowers are unusually heavily perfumed. The plants flower later than most of the climbers, and on that account and for its other desirable characteristics it should be better known. Sometimes the plants will flower twice in the same season.

Max Graf is a rose that makes a splendid ground cover, for embankments, rock gardens and similar situations. The glossy foliage remains dark green and beautiful until late in the autumn. The single flowers of shining pink seem always to be in bloom.

Evergreen Gem originated by our beloved W. A. Manda is another rose particularly adapted for embankment plantings or for trailing over walls and fences. It is also suitable for training over an arch or pillar. The buds are yellow and the small flowers are double white, borne in clusters on the very vigorous plants. It is the foliage in particular for which this rose is valuable.

Roses are fastidious plants. Some do well in certain places and under certain conditions and not otherwise, so in recommending them it is necessary to be cautious. Also in condemning a variety, it should be stated under what conditions it was grown.

U. S. to Abandon Airport in Camden

CAMDEN, N. J., July 18.—(INS.) — Central Airport, this city's noted air base, is to be abandoned by the United States government as an air mail field, according to word received here from Washington. Mustin Field at the Philadelphia Navy Yard will be used instead by the various government mail and passenger planes.

This decision, effective at once, was reached by Postmaster General Brown at Washington, who ascribed the reason for the change to "interference" of officials of the airport with the air mail and passenger service.

WOMAN GOLFER GETS DIVORCE

RENO, Nev., July 18.—(INS.)—Four years ago Mrs. Mary Halloran Soules Sacre forfeited a championship golf match at Ogden, Utah, to marry Guy Ewing Sacre, San Francisco clubman, but today she had a divorce suit on file against him on the grounds of non-support.

Sacre, a bond investment broker, filed a petition in bankruptcy July 6.

Minden, Nev., appeared as a rival for Reno's divorce records when two prominent society people got decrees there.

Mrs. Lorna Mackey Haines, daughter of the mayor of Philadelphia, was given a Minden decree from Dr. Charles John Haines for mental cruelty. Custody of two children was arranged for privately.

Mrs. Dorothy Elliott Morril, of New York, was divorced from Amos Morril, whom she married in Brooklyn in 1916.

Garden Topics

Annual pinks like sandy soil.

Asters like plenty of drink and rich feed.

Charcoal pulverized is excellent for giving sweetness and porosity to soil.

Oriental poppies with their splendid firey blossoms are easily grown even on poor, dry land. The flowers if cut before they fully open will last for several days in good condition.

Poinsettias, heliotropes and other winter flowering plants in pots should now be growing well. Pinch them back as needed to improve.

Remove all suckers from lilacs and wisterias.

Lilacs will well repay a mulching of manure.

LANG AWARDS SIDEWALK JOBS

Award of the 1931 sidewalk construction contract to Romeo Dinardo & Co. was announced yesterday by Public Works Director Edward G. Lang. The contract aggregated $16,600.

Awarded on a basis of a bid for 10,400 yards of concrete and pavement construction, Director Lang said the work would be done throughout the remaining months of the year. The basis of award was $1.50 per square yard. There were seven bidders.

All jobs done by the Dinardo company will be tested by the city's Bureau of Tests to insure sidewalks laid will come up to departmental specifications.

In past years many complaints were made by property owners that walks were below par and the complaints were substantiated with borings made by the Bureau of Tests. Lang immediately ordered all sidewalks relaid under threat of the contractor forfeiting his bond.

The Ross Township Board of Trade has set September 10 for its annual banquet, to be held at the Pines. J. Walter Holmes is general chairman.

IMAGE STILL DRAWS CROWD

CHICAGO, July 18.—(AP.)—The image of a woman and child which appeared on the side of an apartment building on South Ashland avenue, attracting the attention of thousands of persons early this week, was back again last night.

The police explanation was that the image was a reflection from a window in the home of Sam Genna, who once was the leader of a liquor gang. Approximately 2,000 men, women and children, apparently not satisfied with the police solution of the appearance of the figure, remained until midnight. The Genna home is across the street from the building on which the image has appeared.

Rego Ciorlieri, 17, was stabbed, perhaps fatally, by a Negro, when he stepped on the Negro's toes while attempting to edge his way out of the crowd.

Cuttings Thrive In Moist Cotton

Cuttings of many plants can be rooted in an ordinary glass tumbler about half full of wet absorbent cotton. Simply insert the end of the cutting in the cotton. Geraniums, coleus, fuchias, begonias and other cuttings also will root readily. Set the tumbler in a north window. The cotton will remain moist for a long time once it is soaked, but it should not be permitted to become dry.

Naturalist Buys Tiny Island as Bird Sanctuary

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, July 18. — (AP.)—The lonely island of St. Kilda, a little dot of land about seven miles in circumference off the outer Hebrides, has been sold by Sir Reginald MacLeon to a widely known ornithologist who desires to remain anonymous.

The purchaser intends to keep the island in its natural state so that it may remain an ocean sanctuary for the sea birds which flock there in great numbers.

Clivias Decorative Plants for Homes

Clivias are handsome, lily-like house plants. The flowers are borne in dense clusters often as many as 20 individual flowers on tall strong stems. The strap-shaped leaves of deep green are 18 inches long and make the plants useful for decorative purposes when not in bloom. Several in good sized pots make a fine show.

Clivias are not particular as to soil, but revel in fibrous loam with a little leaf mold, sand to insure good drainage and a little lime in the form of plaster from an old wall, crushed finely.

FILIPINOS TOLD FREEDOM WAITS

MANILA, July 18.—(AP.)—Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, speaking as a guest before the Philippine Senate today, advised the people of the islands to be patient in their campaign for independence.

Senator Pittman said if they did this he was confident "the time will come soon when you will realize those great ambitions which you have the right to hope for."

Senator Harry B. Hawes, of Missouri, also was a guest of the Senate, but did not speak. Both Hawes and Pittman are independence advocates.

The Story of Farmer John

EVER MEET a crook who would admit he was guilty of a crime? I never have. He was either framed, or beaten into a confession, or a victim of circumstances, or anything you might care to mention. But guilty of the charge? Never. If you can go through a prison and find one man who will tell you he deserves to be where he is, you have had a very rare experience.

Farmer John was that very rare type. The first day he walked into the prison, he told the boys he thought his punishment was very light for the thing he had done. The moment they set eyes on him, the other inmates had decided that he was a queer bird. When he spoke to them for the first time they were ecertain of it.

If ever a man talked and acted like a comedy hick, John was that guy. Remember the days when Mack Sennett employed Gloria Swanson as a bathing beauty and the comedy farmers were chased into the ocean by the Keystone cops? Well, John was one of those farmers without the chin whiskers. And the only reason he didn't wear the whiskers is because he didn't need them.

It's hard to believe that one man could be as dumb as John when he stepped into that prison. He spoke with such a twang that I'm going to find it mighty tough to put it on paper. His mind was in high gear when he had the thoughts of an 8-year-old child. He didn't know the World War was over for the simple reason that he never knew it had begun. In other words, he was everything that was dumb—and just a little bit more.

His story was as simple as his ideas. He had left maw and paw back home and was a-goin' to make his way in the good old city of New York. He had been in town but a few hours when he thought it might be very nice to find out just how many speakeasies he could discover in one day.

Along about the third one, a customer thought it would be a good idea to have some fun with this silly-looking rube. The bartender thought so, too. After they had spilled water all over him, put lighted matches in his shoes and placed cheese and pretzels inside his shirt, John came to the conclusion he was being kidded.

He was very good-natured about it.

"Say," he observed, "are you fellers kiddin' me?"

The customer spilled another glass of water over him.

"No," chirped the latter gentleman, "we're just having a little fun with the dizziest rube that ever stepped into this joint."

John looked around and didn't see anyone else in the place except the bartender.

"You mean me?" he asked incredulously.

A few minutes later, John let go a few rights and three or four lefts. When the bartender and the customer had both been stretched out, he went to work on the place. The ambulance and the police arrived a few minutes apart. The ambulance was for the two men and the police were for John.

A kindly judge listened to the evidence and asked John if he had anything to say. The sap shook his head and stated that, aside from the fact that he deserved a long jail sentence for what he had done, he had nothing to say. So he wound up with a year in jail on a charge of assault.

"He sure was a mighty fine judge," was the first thing John told the boys. "I guess maybe he liked me a lot 'cause he only gave me a year. I felt like tellin' him he ought to have give me five years, but I thought I better not say nothin' on account he might get into trouble with the bigger judges."

Can you imagine the expression on the faces of those mugs as they listened to that man? . . .

Well, my friends, what happened to Farmer John in that jail was little short of murder. The Farmer nickname, of course, was pinned on him immediately. With nothing but time on their hands, the boys would spend hours digging up things to do to Farmer. How he ever lived through that year is one of those mysteries that nobody can explain.

But he did it. And as he went through his experiences, he was learning. He still wasn't certain that B followed A, but he was gaining wisdom in other directions. You wouldn't call it wisdom, I suppose, but the other inmates did. The morning that Farmer John referred to a girl as a "skirt" goes down in history as the greatest of all prison laughs.

The day of his release John made a speech.

"I just wanna tell you fellers," he asserted, "that you sure have been great to me. If it wuzn't for the way you took to me, I sure don't know what I woulda done.

"If I ever said anythin' to you fellers that you didn't like, I'm apologizin' right here an' now. I know I kid aroun' a lot, but that's the way I am. I hope I didn't hurt nobody by my kiddin' an' I wanna let you all know that I sure am gonna miss the company of such a great bunch of fellers.

"But I ain't gonna see none of you no more 'cause I'm goin' right home to my maw and paw. I ain't never been in one of these places before and I sure ain't goin' to ever be in one of 'em again. So long, fellers."

As he left them, an old convict shook his head sadly.

"I've been in nine out of ten jails in this country," he murmured, "and I've met some prize hicks and boobs. But that silly baboon wins the contest by 40,000,000 miles. They could put his brain on the head of a pin and still have room for plenty of dust.

"But I want to tell you something else. For some reason or other, I like the guy. And I'm here to tell you I'm gonna miss him."

If John had kept his word and gone home, he'd be much better off today. On the other hand, however, I wouldn't have had any story for this spot. So that makes everything just about even.

How it happened I don't know. But John fell in with a mob that wasn't out to pick daisies. Perhaps they only included him for laughs, but the fact remains that they included him. This little mob went in for robbery, blackmail and an occasional hijacking job on the side. And you may rest assured that, when anything particularly dangerous had to be done, it was Farmer John to whom the work was given.

The man had no idea what fear meant. He did whatever the boys told him to do, and never failed to get whatever he went after. Only one thing was necessary—there had to be someone nearby who would do his thinking for him. He was once sent out to tackle a burglary by himself, but he came back empty-handed because he couldn't find the address. After that, he always had company—even though the company waited outside.

During these highly successful months, the Farmer was introduced to night life. You can imagine how he went for it. With the money rolling in, John went for the bubbles and the girls in a big way. He began to get wise to the big names. He talked of Texas Guinan and Jack Dempsey and Harry Richman. He saw Hilda Ferguson and Evan Burrows Fontaine in a night club one evening and talked of nothing else for several weeks. In other words, he was having the time of his life.

His maw and his paw and the farm in the mountains had been forgotten with the first successful hijacking job. Now it was Gracie or Mabel or Helen who occupied most of his thoughts. And how those little girls put him on a merry-go-round was a beautiful thing to behold.

There was one cafe girl, for instance, who told John she was 17 years of age. She liked John the moment she met him, she said, because she, too, had just come from a farm.

"You're such a big, strong man," was the hooey she gave him, "and I'm so alone in the world. You're so nice and so kind and so gentle. Just before I go to sleep I always think of you. And sometimes I even say a little prayer that you will come into the club the next night and sit with me for a little while.

"You're such a wonderful fellow. And it makes me happy to think that a little girl of 17 can be safe in your company. Waiter, bring another bottle of wine."

John went around with that damsel for two weeks with his head in a whirl. He wanted to ask her to marry him, but he was afraid she'd think he was too fresh. He finally arrived at the club very early one night and met a boy of 10 leaving the spot. The kid talked to him—and he learned that this was the son of the 17-year-old child that he loved.

The farmer didn't get angry. But he was extremely puzzled. He called up one of the mob and explained the situation. The other gangster was very patient.

"Maybe she was only kidding you because she loved you, John," he explained. "Maybe she loved you so much she just didn't want you to think she was over 17."

John was still puzzled.

"Then you think she is over 17?" he asked.

The other man said he guessed she was. And John gave her up right then and there . . .

With the night clubs getting such a terrific play from most of them, the mob was forced to go into action just a little too often. All good things must come to an end—and so it was with this outfit.

As you might suspect, however, John was the only one who was nabbed. It happened over in Brooklyn on a particularly dangerous job. The Farmer was going through his paces in fine style when a policeman chanced along. The Farmer tried to fight his way out, but he was soon surrounded by 20 or 30 Brooklynites. They were all witnesses later—but one would have been enough.

A quick trial—and a judge ordered John back to the same prison for a pleasing stretch of years. Over in the jail, of course, the boys knew all about it. It had only been eight or nine months since his release, and most of his old pals were still in the jug. And you can readily understand that they awaited his return with real relish.

When he finally reached the yard he found himself something of a hero. The boys crowded around, slapped him on the back, played a few of their old gags upon him and asked him for news.

The moment John opened his mouth they realized that this was the same old sap, with variations. He still had the twang. He still was the hick. He still was the dope. But there was this difference. He thought he was a pretty smart fellow.

"I wanna tell you somethin', fellers," he cried, "I got a pretty rough deal. Yes, siree. That judge was an awful tough man."

He sighed.

"But the time I got to do don't frighten me none," he went on. "What worries me is what the mob is thinkin' of me bein' nabbed over in Brooklyn by a hick cop!" . . .

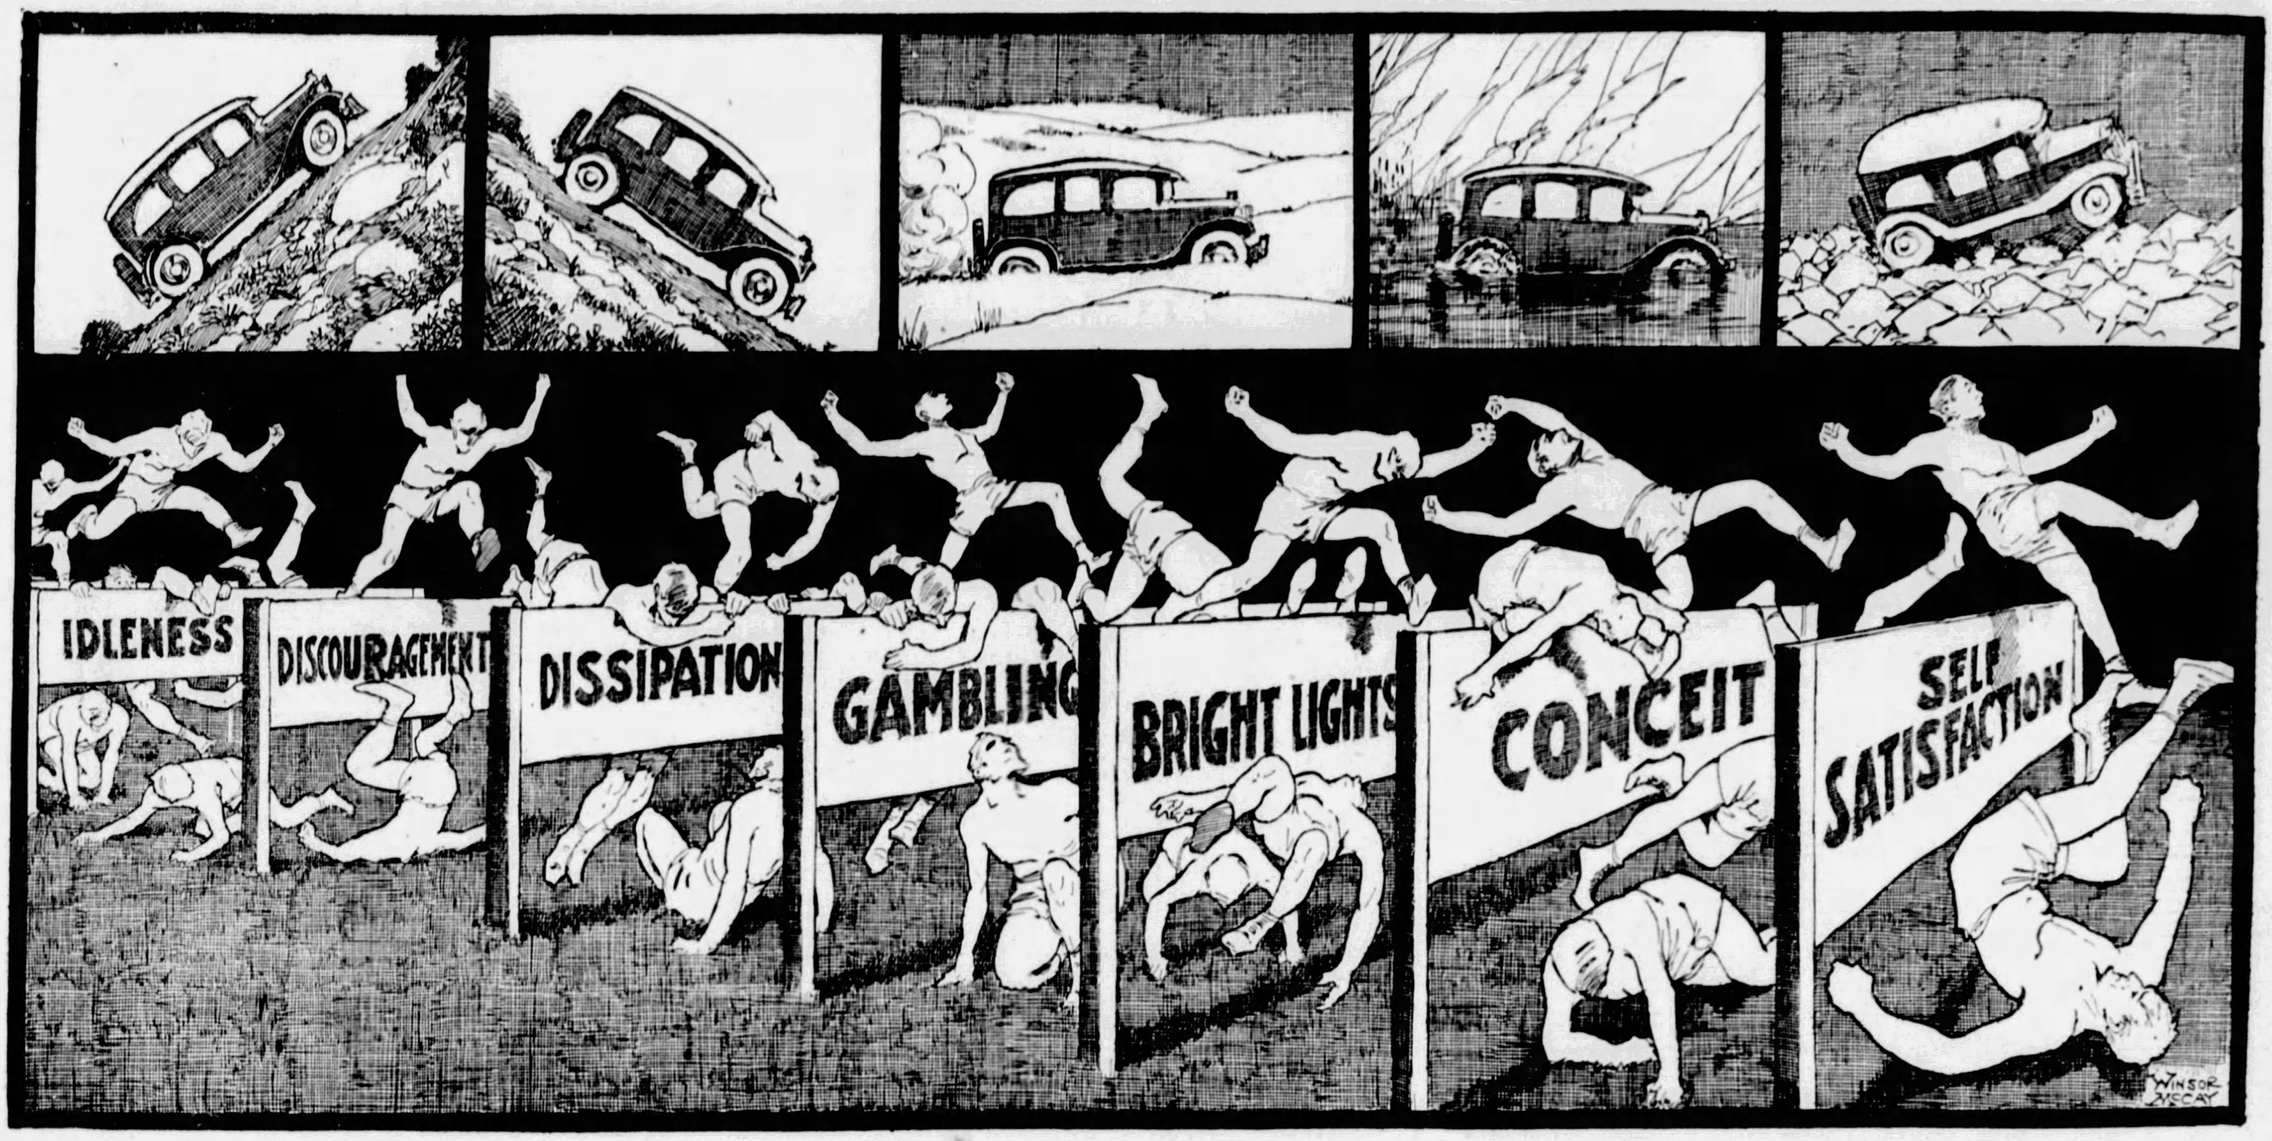
WANTED, A HUMAN PROVING GROUND

Copyright, 1931, by N. Y. American, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved.



The upper part of this picture shows Winsor McCay's conception of the General Motors Proving Ground, just outside the city of Detroit.

On this Proving Ground, automobiles made by the General Motors Company are subjected to every possible test, with the object of bringing out any hidden weakness. It is the Proving Ground that enables engineers to correct their own mistakes, to make strong that which is weak, to build up where building is needed.

The lower half of the picture shows what the human race needs, but, unfortunately, hasn't got, A PROVING GROUND FOR HUMAN BEINGS. We need an imitation of General Motors Proving Ground, that would enable the man starting out in life to find what is the matter with him, and how to go about correcting it.

You may say that life, itself, is a Proving Ground. And that is true. But unfortunately, it takes us so long to learn the truth, that when we have learned, we die.

Paul wrote to the Thessalonians:

"PROVE ALL THINGS, HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

THE General Motors Company, headed by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., one of the greatest industrial organizations in the world, takes Paul's advice literally.

It has established, and long maintained, just outside of Detroit, an enormous PROVING GROUND, which makes it impossible for any automobile "put to the proof" to conceal defects, their character, or what causes them.

This Proving Ground compresses into a few miles of roadway all the difficulties, obstructions, damaging road features that General Motors engineers could think of. Whatever the motorist dreads and avoids, you find in the General Motors Proving Ground.

There are hills so steep that no automobile would have attempted to climb them a few years ago, and "chuck holes" that shake wheels, springs, engine and chassis. There are sections of road covered with deep sand and gravel, and with rough stone, to test the steering qualities of the car and the effects of stress and skidding.

There is a water hole, through which the automobiles plunge half buried in water.

The writer of this editorial, who went over the Proving Ground in company with William S. Knudsen, president of the Chevrolet Company, can testify that an automobile, tested and "educated" on that Proving Ground, cannot withhold any secret from the engineers that made it.

Cars thus tested are not merely sent over the Proving Ground once or twice. They run up the hills, down the steep grades, through the water, over rough ground, jolting stones, skidding on sand and gravel, hour after hour, day after day, for thousands of miles.

When it is over, every nut and bar, every wheel spoke, EVERYTHING, down to the last molecule and atom, has been subjected to as great a strain as engineering ingenuity can devise.

Innumerable electric devices record the speed, on all grades and all sorts of roads, and record also the power of acceleration, efficiency of brakes and the effects of continuous strain.

The Proving Ground equipment includes an engineers' museum, which might be called "the last resting place of harshly treated cars."

In this museum of mutilation you may see not only General Motors cars, but automobiles of every American and foreign make, all rigidly tested.

After the proving process ends, the cars are dissected. Parts that have broken down, or ceased to function correctly, are exposed for the information of General Motors engineers, whose business it is to make all parts wearproof.

Everybody knows of the marvelous improvement in automobiles within the few brief years of their practical use. Everybody knows how much good they have done, taking millions into the open air and forcing improvement of roads all over the United States.

Twenty-six years ago two automobiles raced from New York to the Pacific Ocean. The winner finished in forty-four days. Today any one of a dozen automobiles will make the same trip in four days, FORTY DAYS LESS.

It is TESTING, PROVING AND, ABOVE ALL, IMPROVING that have yielded such wonderful engineering results.

You remember, perhaps, in early motoring days, when you would see one automobile, with a man lying flat on his back under it, for two automobiles in motion. Nobody crawls under an automobile now.

You remember when changing tires was a large part of an automobile owner's occupation. Rarely do you see an automobile tire being changed now.

Tire makers used to guarantee five thousand miles. Guarantees are not much thought of now, many tires run more than twenty thousand miles.

TESTING, PROVING and IMPROVING, the work that is done to a superlative degree on the General Motors Proving Ground, a work that occupies the mind of all able mechanical engineers, accounts for the extraordinary improvement in automobiles, as in other machinery.

Mr. McCay's Human Proving Ground is well thought out. Hurdles, that men must jump, stand in almost every path, from IDLENESS, which means lack of ambition, and keeps millions from starting, to SELF-SATISFACTION, the foolish self-approval that destroys the effects of effort, just before real success comes.

If only human beings were like machines, automobiles, submarines, airplanes, how simple it would be. Engineers, checking results of the automobile Proving Ground, do not let the same thing happen twice. If a spring breaks when a car hits a bump, a stronger spring takes its place. If an engine that should go to the top of the hill "in high" gasps, pauses and stops, THAT ENGINE WON'T DO and its design is changed.

But with unfortunate human beings, forever tested, always traveling through life's Proving Grounds, the same mistakes are made, over and over, millions of times, by millions of individuals, through hundreds of generations.

And, worst of all, though each of us may learn from the falls and bumps of life, and correct himself before it is quite too late, our experiences, as a rule, do not help our children.

If one make of automobile develops a certain weakness, the next make, which is, in a way, the child of the older automobile, is free from that weakness.

The 1931 car learns from the car of 1930, and the car of 1932 will learn from the car of 1931.

But the son continues making the mistakes his father, grandfather and great-grandfather made for a thousand years back.

You can change the spring, the carburetor, the chassis, the body, ignition, the whole power plant of an automobile.

Only time, and the experience of centuries, can change the slowly developing human brain.

The automobile has its makers, engineer, metallurgist, salesmen, driver, always on the spot, inspecting, correcting, remaking.

Man works and develops through the ages on his own account, a SPIRITUAL MACHINE, DEPENDING ON ITSELF FOR ITS IMPROVEMENT. Here we are, put on the earth, which is a Proving Ground for mind and body. And here we must struggle, strive and improve ourselves, learning in the only school, which is EXPERIENCE.

Emerson says: "Only so much do I know as I have lived."

We must LIVE before we know. We must gain by EXPERIENCE as we lose, proportionately, in ILLUSION.

Words of the old and the wise, knowledge in books cannot teach us. Years and experience alone can do that.

Our Proving Ground is TIME, and we have so little of it.

And at the end, with the great majority of us, it all seems hardly worthwhile. We have fallen and risen, tried, tried and tried again, and at the end our story is that of a thousand million other human beings, MUCH failure, a LITTLE success, hope and discouragement about even, but, after all, SOMETHING DONE, however little, and that must be our consolation.

The wise young men, and the older men that refuse to be conquered by years of disappointments, might well devote a few moments to thinking about this picture.

It is a fact that we must go on as we are. No outside engineer is at hand to help us. We must stand or fall, in accordance with our own strength or weakness. On the other hand, think how marvelously the automobile has been improved, and its total life, so far as practical use goes, is only that of a man of thirty. Thirty years ago the automobile was nothing, today it is EVERYTHING.

Many men, engineers, financiers, metallurgists, mechanics, body builders, electricians, refiners of gasoline, makers of oil and others have done wonders for the great transportation machine. Why shouldn't man DO SOMETHING WITH HIMSELF?

Why cannot a man be his own engineer and critic, testing himself, criticizing himself, PROVING HIMSELF and remedying weaknesses?

The life of an average automobile is three to five years.

The life of man, with average health and common sense, is "three score and ten," SEVENTY YEARS.

And if we struggle, learn from experience, gain resolution and not discouragement from failure, the last ten years of our seventy may be the best.

Read what Mr. McCay writes, in a letter accompanying this picture. Each reader knows which of these hurdles in life's Proving Ground is most important to him, and each one will be interested in Mr. McCay's brief comment, as follows:

"I think the beginning of our difficulties is idleness, lack of energy, lack of ambition. And the dangerous end of much effort is conceit and self-satisfaction.

"Thousands that might succeed are tripped by their own conceit. Thousands that might go on indefinitely toward greater success become victims of their self-approval, and fall over the hurdle that I have labeled 'self-satisfaction.' We ought to be interested in the human failures, because the Lord makes so many of them, as Abraham Lincoln said of the common people.

"The difficulty that the great majority meet is idleness, which means that you never get really started.

"Next comes EASY DISCOURAGEMENT. If that attacks you, it puts the finishing touch on idleness. Millions that really never tried began lazy and ended discouraged, their last words being: "I never had a chance.' They should change these words to: 'I never really tried to make a start.'

"Dissipation destroys many, especially in these bootleg days. Curiously enough, millions drink whiskey, now that it is largely poisonous, that did not drink it when it was, at least, free from the poisons put into it now by bootleggers, the Government and wood alcohol manufacturers.

"Gambling is a dangerous hurdle, perhaps most dangerous of all, for it makes real effort seem hardly worthwhile. If a man can win a hundred dollars in five minutes with a pack of cards, or on a race horse, it seems to him rather foolish to work hard for twenty-five dollars a week.

"He overlooks the fact that hard work for twenty-five dollars a week is what leads to easier work for one thousand dollars a week, and more.

"The next hurdle is labeled 'bright lights.' It isn't necessary to say very much about that. You don't think much of an insect that insists on knocking out its brains, if any, against an electric light bulb, or a moth that burns its wings on a candle flame, and you don't think much of a poor fool that burns up his energy, strength and money in night clubs and other bright light dives, especially prepared for the human insect tribe.

"Of course, nothing you can say about such a picture as I have made means much in itself.

"But I hope that some young men that have success in them will look at this picture, and find in it the thought and incentive that will give them strength for life's Proving Grounds."

So much for Mr. McCay. He writes wisely.

The question is, what can we learn from experience, what can we build on it, what can we avoid, or acquire, thanks to its teaching?

We add to Mr. McCay's comment two quotations, one from a man of long ago, one from another almost of our own time.

Plato, the great philosopher, wrote:

"There are many arts among men, the knowledge of which is acquired bit by bit by experience. For it is experience that causeth our life to move forward by the skill we acquire, while want of experience subjects us to the effects of chance."

And Benjamin Franklin, our neighbor in time, puts the same thought in homelier words:

"Experience keeps a dear school, but fools will learn in no other, and scarcely in that; for it is true, we may give advice, but we cannot give conduct. Remember this: they that will not be counseled cannot be helped. If you do not hear reason, she will rap you over your knuckles."

LONG-TERM CREDITS NEEDED BY GERMANY TO RE-INFORCE HOOVER PLAN, SAYS BERNHARD

Withdrawal of Short-Term Loans Endangers Reich and Its Creditors Equally, Says Economist

By GEORGE BERNHARD

Noted German Economist and Ex-Cabinet Minister.

(By Special Cable.)

IN THE ACCOMPANYING article, which was written in Berlin last Sunday shortly before the closing of the Danat Bank and the ensuing financial upheaval in Germany, Dr. Bernhard presents a timely and interesting analysis of the economic situation there from the German viewpoint.

BERLIN, July 12.

THE GERMAN PEOPLE were very happy to receive President Hoover's gift.

The postponement of this year's reparations payments means a relief to the German budget of 1,800,000,000 marks. Strictly speaking, it is only 1,140,000,000 marks, since 660,000,000 marks are contributed annually to the reparations burden by the railway company of the Reich, but since the railway company is also in a bad state, having no means at its disposl to place orders with German industry, this breathing space signifies relief to it as well.

But the effect of the Hoover plan upon Germany's finances is comparatively subordinate. It is subordinate also in the sense of President Hoover's intentions.

Germany's newspapers have hailed the President of the United States as a benefactor to Germany, but, in spite of the many benefits of the Hoover plan for Germany, it is a known fact that the President did not act for Germany's sake alone.

He is the American President and, therefore, must guard the interests of the American people. He cannot make presents to another country with money taken from the pockets of American taxpayers. He conceived the Hoover plan for the sake of America as well.

Reparations
Economic Laws Govern Abstruse Problem

For a long time the American people believed that reparations were a purely European affair. Even today they maintain—in a formal sense—the thoroughly correct standpoint that the payment of interests on war debts incurred by the former allied European powers associated with the American nation is in no way connected with the European reparations question.

But in reality there exists between these two questions connections which no parliament in the world, not even the mighty House of Representatives of the United States, can brush away by any amount of discussion.

It is not a question of politics, which can be influenced by persons, but a question of economical causes and effects, which are dependent upon definite, everlastingly effective laws.

More than 20 years before the World War a Czarist Russian state counsellor wrote a bulky book in which he explained in detail that wars were no longer possible because after a few months of warfare there would no longer be sufficient money available to pay for its continuance.

This pacifistic Russian state counsellor made a bad mistake. He underestimated the elasticity of the mechanism of capitalism. He overlooked the fact that money can be printed and that people thoughtlessly accept these printed money promises in payment throughout many years simply because they do not know that this unlimited multiplication of money makes it valueless.

But, in spite of his mistake, the Russian pacifist was actually right. Only the effects of war do not become evident right away, as he feared they would, thereby making wars impossible, but afterwards.

The politicians who drew up the peace treaty which ended the World War also believed that economics could be subjected to force by simply laying down paragraphs.

They simply decreed that Germany must pay the costs of the World War, and American politicians took the consequences by demanding the continuous payment of interests from European nations for the American war loans. On paper everything looks grand, but when the economic effects of such paragraphs begin to show themselves unpleasant consequences are the result.

The economic results regardless of whether a juridical connection between reparations payments and inter-Allied debts exists or not—can be summarized as follows:

Germany pays France, Belgium, England and Italy and also a small part directly to America.

France, England and Italy pay the United States.

Versailles Error
Peace Treaty Fails to Note Economic Forces

The last recipient of a large part of the total payments is therefore the United States.

Among the politicians responsible for the treaties there were without a doubt a few who thought they knew something about economics. They probably derived their knowledge of economics from their own businesses or from those of their fathers or brothers.

They said:

"Mr. Smith is continuously paid money by his debtors. He will become richer and richer from year to year. Why, therefore, should Smith worry about the payments or experience difficulties as a result of receiving them as long as his debtors remain solvent?"

DR. HANS LUTHER—Director of the German Reichsbank and outstanding figure in Germany's economic crisis.

But the payments resulting from the peace treaties are not private deals between business men, but payments made by one country to another. The difficulty of such payments is already sufficiently well known to national economic science.

Such payments have to be made in gold. But the world does not possess sufficient gold to enable one country to pay hundreds of millions to another. A substitute for gold is therefore necessary and this is the check in foreign money values and foreign currency.

But in order to receive foreign currency the debtor nations must sell their products. America, as the ultimate recipient of the money, is, therefore, faced with the problem of whether she is willing to buy these products herself or whether she will agree to face the sharp competition of her debtors throughout the world market in their endeavor to raise the necessary amount of foreign currency equivalent to the gold which they need.

Output Speeded
Capital Sought Through Sales Abroad

America, however, was not disposed to alter her tariff system in order to let in the products of her debtors. But, on the other hand, she could not prevent the sharp competition which sprang up in the world market.

This finally led to the production of more and more products by her debtors with a corresponding increase of the world's stores. In the meantime, America's gold possession increased more and more, turning the country into the world's central depot of the gold of her debtors.

With a part of this gold America created her prosperity. Another part of it was loaned to Europe.

Every national economist could have predicted that this tremendous wealth within a country would not only raise the standard of living of a whole people, but, beyond this, would create a delirium of speculation ultimately leading to a catastrophic crash.

But when the general world crisis set in America's foreign loans too were endangered. On the other hand, since they were partly short term loans, they could be judicially withdrawn at any moment.

Here again it is proved that what may be permissable juridically is not always in accordance with economics. If America, pointing to her juridical right, had demanded repayment of her loaned money from Germany and other European countries, Europe would have been plunged into chaos.

Exhausted
Germany Needs Financial Breathing Spell

For this reason alone President Hoover deserves the praise that has been accorded him because he put an end to the steady flow of capital from the whole world to America, at least for one year.

President Hoover's debt holiday must be a year of consolidation for America. But America can only consolidate if she helps consolidate Europe, for the fate of America's money loaned European nations is dependent upon a regeneration of Europe's economic strength.

In Germany it has unfortunately already become evident that an effect upon the general economic situation is not yet felt, despite the relief the Hoover plan signifies for the state's finances.

After a short rejoicing that lasted only one day, Germany's mood has again become depressed and gloomy. It became evident that the demand for foreign currency, which brought the Reichbank on the brink of the minimum necessary for coverage of her money, had not stopped.

This does not mean that the flight from the German mark has again set in, as many at first supposed, but is a symptom of much more far-reaching significance.

The clever people all over the world now want to take advantage of the breathing space offered by the Hoover plan by withdrawing their money from Germany in the meanwhile.

Is that the meaning and success of Hoover's action? The German man in the street thought that from now on Germany would be overflowed by foreign credits. What a mistake! Those acquainted with the facts realized that the Hoover plan could be regarded from two different angles.

Two Angles
Hoover Plan Misunderstood by Many

It certainly represents relief for Germany, but, at the same time, it signifies a signal alarm. Germany has clung to her obligations up to the last moment. She wanted to continue to pay. President Hoover prevented a continuance of payments through a message which in reality speaks of Germany as being on the point of exhaustion bordering insolvency.

When such a thing is said about a bank the psychological effect is generally a run on that bank.

What we have experienced in Germany during the past several weeks is nothing more than a run on Germany, a run which could easily have produced the same results as a run on a bank.

President Hoover is right in believing Germany so exhausted that she needs a breathing space. But those are wrong who believe they must save their money by withdrawing it, fearing the possible insolvency of Germany. Such a fear isn't even justified towards the finances of the Reich.

Germany's economic structure is strong. It does not only consist of a few large trusts and stock companies about which all kinds of rumors could be made public.

The German economic structure consists mainly of many thousands of small industrial enterprises whose owners are carried upward by a high power productivity, strong solidarity, vivid ability, invention and persevering energy.

Germany possesses business enterprises with a healthy capitalistic constitution and an excellent technical form of organization. Germany is a nation of 65,000,000 human beings who work untiringly and millions of whom are thrifty. This was shown by the ever increasing bank deposits in spite of the existing crisis.

But this many shaped and finely built machine which calls itself the German economic structure still needs foreign capital in order to run without friction.

Longer Terms
Future Must Be Taken Into Consideration

If the foreign capital loaned Germany up to now has not guaranteed the consolidation of German economics, then it was due in part to the form in which this money was loaned. Short term loans do not offer a basis upon which industrial and commercial enterprises can be financed.

If the short term loans, which are necessary for the financing of a country's means of production, as is the case in Germany, are withdrawn, then debtor and creditor are equally endangered.

From all this it is evident that, if the Hoover plan is to help both Germany and the United States—the big debtor and his powerful creditor—it will be necessary for the American banker to convert his loans to Germany.

If American bankers take the future into consideration, instead of the immediate present, by remembering that loans should not only be repayable every day juridically, but also repayable from an economic viewpoint, then a part of the loans made Germany must slowly be converted into long term ones. Not until then will the Hoover debt holiday be a year of rest, easier breathing and consolidation.

Hoover Moratorium Must Not Become Debt Cancellation, Says Senator Schall

Clever Foreign Propaganda Abuses U. S. Generosity, Lawmaker Charges

By THOMAS D. SCHALL

United States Senator from Minnesota.

U. S. Senator Thomas D. Schall, of Minnesota, who extols the generosity of America's war debt policy and assails its foreign critics.

I AM NOT OPPOSED to the suspension for a year of the small rate of interest we are securing from our former Allies on the so-called war debts. I am not so sure that it would be of any great service in straightening out the world depression. However, I am willing to go along with the President if he will assure the American people, in a message to Congress, that this is not a definite move for the cancellation of the war debts owing this country.

Some are inclined to believe that the President was working on the inspiration of the international bankers to the end that the government debts be canceled so Europe would pay its private loans to the international bankers. I hope this is not true. Reflecting upon the President's promise to the people on this war debt proposition in 1928, it doesn't seem to me he could have any other proposition in view than that of economic rehabilitation of Europe.

Cancellation would be, in fact, the transfer of the burden of war from the taxpayers of Europe to the taxpayers of this country.

While such a move might be of great benefit to the capitalists of this country, to whom are owing the private debts of Europe, the chief function of the government of the United States, in all its branches, is to protect the taxpayers of this country. Therefore, while I am in favor of alleviating the world of any opening wedge for depression, I am not in favor cancellation of war debts in any form.

Our former Allies have been striving for sometime to put over the propaganda to the Germans that it is because of our demand upon the Allies that they are forced to re-demand of Germany. It is only fair that our people, and for that matter the people of our Allies, should know what the actual settlement is and was.

America asked not one penny of reparations nor one foot of territory. The Allies divided the available world among themselves, while we were contented with prohibition, and got the hatred of the whole world thrown in for good measure, as the sole result of our entrance into the war. The war will have done one good if we have learned to keep out of European affairs.

One of the most potent hallucinations that has been prevalent in our country is that Germany was responsible for the war. Out of this bias and its bearings and ramifications may be traced a thread that leads to that still more marvelous delusion, that the United States is duty bound to shoulder all the expenses of that international mess.

Machinations
Allies Seek to Entangle Us in League

Today, even the dullest of those who have had access to the truth, as it has oozed into sight through the intervening years, have been driven to admit that Germany was not the only malefactor, perhaps not the chief.

The trouble is that the ordinary people do not get untampered evidence, and their mass psychology has been very cleverly and very completely built. They are not even allowed to hear the sneers against us, save when a chance one overshoots the mark and gets into our news columns, like the outrageously unfair appellations "Uncle Shylock" and "Uncle Sham." That gets under the skin of every one of us who has a spark of Americanism and love of justice in him.

It is against this appellation and what it implies, against the purpose for which it was coined, that, out of sheer self-respect, we must throw on the searchlight of fact, so the world may see what we did or failed to do—whether we are "Sham" or "Shylock."

Our men and our money saved the Allies from defeat. These Allies are bent now on cancellation of debts, and intriguing us into the League of Nations by means of the League's Court so that we may continue to furnish men and money to fight their future wars. Nothing but misunderstanding has been our reward so far for the aid we voluntarily and self-sacrificingly gave.

Shame upon the so-called American critics, who are vituperating, bewailing, caviling and back-biting their own country.

Asking nothing, 14 years ago we went into the World War on the side of the Allies. We built them ships, we sent them men, we loaned them money. Our government didn't have the money to lend, and went to the American people. They dug into their pockets for the $12,000,000,000 we loaned to 12 different nationalities.

Ingratitude
Nations We Helped Now Misrepresent Us

When Uncle Sam took this money from the people he promised them he would pay 3, 3½, 4, 4½ and 5 per cent interest, together with the principal, in 25 years.

To England we loaned $4,715,000,000.
To Belgium $483,000,000.
To Italy $2,150,000,000.
To France $4,400,000,000.

Now we have accepted a settlement which surely is the most generous the world has ever seen.

Instead of asking England to pay back the principal of the money she owes us, we have accepted, over a period of 62 years, an interest of 3.7 per cent. Nothing of the principal, just pay an interest of 3.7 per cent for 62 years, and everything will be canceled. We are paying to our people on this money an average of not less than 4 per cent and must return the principal in 25 years.

We ask Belgium to pay us 2.1 per cent interest over a period of 62 years and we will forget the principal.

We settled with Italy for 1.1 per cent interest over a period of 62 years and their debt will be canceled.

We settled with France for 2.17 per cent interest on the amount she owes us for a period of 62 years, at the end of that time the principal and all obligations to be canceled.

Italian View
Misunderstanding Perils America's Interests

Yet the leaders of these people are today blaming us for unfairness and are misrepresenting the real settlement we have given them. Why don't the Allies blame Spain, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Switzerland or South America? Those countries didn't help them.

We owed them nothing and were under no obligations, and our going into the war was true altruism. One would think that some sign of gratitude would be demonstrated.

I talked recently to a member of the American Embassy in Italy. The Italian people, because of the attitude of their leaders, think they have done us a wonderful favor by agreeing to any settlement at all, and are highly enraged that we should have the impudence to put a tariff on the things of commerce they produce and wish to send into our country. There is little there of understanding of the United States, little to sit down with around a conference table in hopes of just agreement.

A few weeks ago a member of the American Embassy in Germany told me that after the war the German people had a wholesome understanding of us and looked upon us as friends. In fact, it was the German government that insisted, for her own protection, upon our armies remaining in Germany. He said that gradually, through French and other propaganda, the German people are becoming distrustful that we are the real cause of the reparations insisted upon by the Allies; that the Shylock methods of Uncle Sam are back of all their trouble.

Then, to add to German thoughts of the United States, came on the first of July, 1929, the enforcement of the National Origins Act as to immigration. This act cuts German immigration into this country from about 50,000 to 25,000 per year.

Propagandists of former Allies are asserting in Germany that we have deliberately done so because we do not want any more of them here than we can help. This is untrue, for no nationality makes better American citizens than the German.

Generosity
America's Unprecedented Acts Unthanked

Isn't this a fine array of romances for fair-dealing, honest old Uncle Sam to sit down with around a table and expect any measure of justice?

A loan for Germany was floated in this country for money with which Germany was to pay indemnity to the Allies. Therefore, in a short time it will be a fact in the opinion of the Germans (created by our former Allies' propaganda) that it is the United States to whom Germany is paying reparations and this constant agitation for the cancellation of debts only adds to the fuel and gives color to Allied prevarication.

Constant propaganda charging us with injustice and usury is without any foundation and is the height of dishonesty.

The generosity of the United States is nowhere duplicated in history. European treatment of us for this generosity should be a warning that will prevent its repetition. If the real pacifists of this country wish to accomplish world peace, their field is Europe. They should be the first to resist our being weakened, as our strength is the greatest barrier on which they can rely until understanding shall have come to European peoples.

If the international bankers are bound to have us in the League Court they should spend their money propagandizing, not for our willingness to enter the Court, but for a pacifistic education of Europe.

U. S. ARMED FORCES REDUCED, NOT INCREASED AS MACDONALD CLAIMS, SAYS GENERAL REILLY

Fighting Power, Not Cost of Armies, Only True Measure Of National Defense, Declares Expert

By BRIG. GEN. HENRY J. REILLY, O. R. C.

Noted Authority on National Defense and Expert on Military Affairs.

"A RECENT STATEMENT by Prime Minister MacDonald regarding the Army and Navy expenditures of the United States has created the mistaken impression that the United States is increasing the strength as well as the cost of its Army and Navy. This is not correct, although I am certain that Mr. MacDonald would not consciously give out a misleading statement."

Brig. Gen. H. J. Reilly

These words of Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate, in a press interview a few days ago, serve to bring out the inevitably incorrect conclusion arrived at when money expenditures are used as a measure for armaments.

Stripped of euphemisms, the fact is that nations maintain armed forces because there are certain things so fundamental to their national security and welfare that they will fight rather than give them up.

Thus, the relative measure of their armed strength is the military power they will have available when the choice is presented them of fighting or yielding. It is not the relative cost of that military power.

The British King, who determined to have all gentlemen-combatants in London on an equal basis when they fought each other, did not insist that their swords should cost the same amounts. He did insist, however, that their sword blades should be the same length. Thus, he stationed at the city gates not scriveners to demand from gentlemen coming in from the country receipts from sword makers showing costs, but sword-smiths who measured the length of sword blades, and cut off those longer than the prescribed limit.

What is the military power of a nation?

Of course, the basis first is the men in the armed forces and the material they use on land, on and under the sea, and in the air.

Active Factors
Versailles Treaty Notes 'Relative' Issues

But it is much more than that, as anyone will see who will take the trouble to read the reports and minutes of the preparatory commission for the disarmament conference to be held next February at Geneva.

Without going into all of the details with which this committee has so voluminously wrestled, it can be said that two additional facts of primary importance in determining the military power of a nation are:

1—Where the armed forces of a nation can and cannot be used.

2—What other nations will throw in their armed forces for or against?

This is recognized by the famous Arcticle 8 of the Versailles Treaty, so much quoted by both the advocates of disarmament, who want limitations based on actual world conditions, and those who insist disarmament is the road to peace, regardless of anything else.

Its second paragraph says: "The Council (of the League) taking account of the geographical situation and circumstances of each state shall formulate plans . . ."

Lord Balfour, in his opening speech at the Washington Arms Conference in 1921, stressed the special navy needs of Britain due to her geographical situation and overseas trade circumstances. France, when land armament is concerned, stresses her need of a large army if her geographical position on the crossroads of Europe is to be maintained.

Nothing better illustrates how money comparisons are bound to create erroneous views than to determine what it costs the taxpayers of different countries for the same thing.

The first great factor in this variation is the difference in the standards of living of different countries.

Another is whether the service is by voluntary enlistment, or is universal and compulsory for all male citizens or subjects.

A fact generally overlooked, but making a great difference to the average taxpayer, is how much of the cost of their defense is borne by colonies or overseas possessions and how much by the homeland.

The uniforms worn, the food eaten, the sanitary arrangements, the amount of fuel for cooking and heating, lighting, type of housing and stables, equipment — from leather belts to include motor cars, arms—from pistols and rifles to include 16-inch guns, warships — from destroyers and submarines to battleships and airplane carriers; and lighter and heavier-than-air craft, all have wages as the largest factor in their cost of production.

Our Asiatic exclusion laws are due to the ability of the Oriental to live and prosper on wages which would barely keep an American alive. Various distinguished European visitors have recently taken occasion to call attention to our "inordinately high wages," with the result that by this time even the American who has never been abroad must thoroughly understand that wages are higher in this country than in any European one.

Technical Skill
Savings Effected Through Greater Efficiency

The only cases where the higher wages which have to be paid in this country do not work to the American taxpayer's disadvantage in supplying and equipping our armed forces are those in which greater technical skill enables us despite higher wages to turn out the same article for no more or even less than is done abroad.

The many large castings used in battleship construction is one example. Our highly efficient motor industry furnishes another.

In addition the American higher standard of living also results in a better and, therefore, more costly, method of life of our Army and Navy.

The food supplied the American soldier or sailor is better. His clothing is better. The sanitary arrangements are far better. Our kitchens are better, more numerous and their equipment greatly superior. The medical care includes dentistry, something few services other than our own provide. The kinds of recreation, and the means for each are more numerous and expensive.

With few exceptions, in Europe and Asia, troops are housed in large barracks a number of stories high (without elevators), built around city squares or court yards. Each of these large barracks contain from 1,000 ta 2,000 or more men.

In this country, with the exception of a few battalion or regimental barracks, recently built, designed to hold from three to four hundred to 1,000 men in one building, our troops are housed in separate buildings. These hold from less than 100 to 200 men each.

It is still not uncommon in Europe to find cavalrymen and artillerymen living above the stables in which their horses are kept.

In this country the animals are not only in separate buildings but also each troop or battery has its separate stable.

In other countries, as a rule, the higher ranking non-commissioned officers, who generally are married, and the officers are not provided by the government with houses in which to live. At the most, they get a small rental allowance, which seldom pays for their rented apartments.

Live in Cottages
Quarters Provided Officers By Government

In this country, the higher ranking non-commissioned officers and the officers have excellent apartments or separate houses owned by the government, and built near the barracks, in which they live, free of rent.

As most European barracks are in cities, they are hooked on to the city lighting and sewer systems, and have the use of city streets.

As most of our army posts are some distance from cities this economical method cannot be used. Instead the Army has to pay out of its appropriations to construct and maintain water, sewer and lighting systems, roads and supply depots.

Any comparison of costs will show how much more we have to pay as a rule for the

WHAT FIGURES SHOW

U. S. Senator David A. Reed, Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, in a recent statement, said:

"The facts are that a very severe reduction, both in strength and money expenditures, has been made in both the Army and Navy of the United States throughout the past decade.

"In 1921 our Army appropriation was $494,000,000 and our Army consisted of 225,745 officers and men . . . In the same year our Navy appropriation was $443,000,000 and the Navy's strength in officers and men was 136,950.

"In 1930 our Army appropriations was $331,000,000 and the total strength of our Regular Army had been reduced to 130,750. Today our naval appropriation has come down to $390,000,000 and the strength in officers and men has come down to 88,785.

"In 1921, when our Regular Army had 228,746 officers and men, the British regular army (excluding Dominion forces and the Royal Air Force) had 312,000 officers and men. Today ours has 130,750 and the British 201,428."

GUGLIELMO FERRERO:

Woman's Beauty and Liberty A Dominant Note in U. S. Today

Yet Puritanism of Generation Ago Still Flourishes, Historian Finds

RECENTLY DR. FERRERO, distinguished European historian, revisited the United States for the first time in 22 years. He traversed it from coast to coast, studying, dissecting, analyzing its people, its institutions, its trend of life and thought. In a series of articles, of which the accompanying is the third, Dr. Ferrero records frankly his impressions of America, especially as compared with those he gathered here in 1909.

By GUGLIELMO FERRERO

The Foremost Historian of Europe.

GENEVA, July, 1931.

THAT WHICH AT FIRST STRIKES the stranger who knew the United States before the war, is the progress made in esthetics. One can discuss whether the America of today is more or less wise and more or less moral than 22 years ago; but it is indisputable that she is much more beautiful.

Guglielmo Ferrero

Beauty triumphs in every form — Women's elegance, the sumptuousness with which rooms are furnished, public and private luxury, the passion for all the arts, and the multiplication of aesthetic teaching. A considerable part of the riches which were accumulated after 1914 has been transformed into beauty.

Study Beauty Culture
Schools and Industry Everywhere at Service of Women

The value of the efforts made to embellish the United States is by no means equal. There are discordant notes, exaggerations and extravagances. Americans are more free with regard to aesthetic problems than Europeans, because they are less bound than Europeans by tradition.

This sometimes leads them to rather risky and audacious experiment. But the effort taken as a whole is a great one and the results are remarkable. They are specially striking with regard to houses and women.

In the rich American homes 20 years ago there were many beautiful things, but they were nearly always heaped together, like in a museum or exhibition.

Today the United States has been taught how to adapt the objects of luxury which are supplied by the whole universe, or manufactured in their own country, to the special needs of American interiors so as to make a harmonious whole, often original and splendid.

Neither is it doubtful that the American women have nothing left to envy among the superb elegance of Europe. Women's beauty and how to enhance its value by dress and culture, how to preserve it and make it admired by men and women, has become one of the most absorbing national pre-occupations.

What a number of beauty shops I saw in my travels through that great continent! Schools and industry, commerce and art, science and the state are equally at the service of woman and her beauty.

A Social Novelty
Discretion of Individuals Now Trusted in Love Affairs

American woman conquered the royalty of elegance and beauty at the same time she conquered her complete liberty. Twenty-two years ago the confusion of sex had already begun in the United States. That was one of the differences between the Old World and the New which most struck the European.

In 1931 that confusion of the sexes has become universal, and that great social movement has reached its final conclusion. All those obligations and restraints which formerly limited women's liberty, and, which still partly limits it in Europe, have disappeared.

Society has beaten down all those barriers which it had erected between men and women to make virtue and the fight against temptations more easy for them. At the same time society has given to women all the means of perfecting, preserving and doing full justice to their beauty.

Society no longer distrusts love as it did. It seems to have complete confidence in the discretion of men and women!

This is a formidable novelty in the history of humanity. It proceeds from a conception of life which does not lack audacity, greatness or charm. Can one better employ immense riches like those which the United States possesses than by making the world more beautiful and by giving it more liberty?

Beauty and liberty are among the most precious possessions of life. But, as everywhere else in the United States, Puritanism distrusts beauty and liberty of manners, because it sees in the worship of beauty and in the aspiration toward liberty of manners, two manifestations of the desire to enjoy and consequently of its enemy, Sybaritism.

Must we then conclude that the United States is no longer a Puritanical society as it was 22 years ago? For Sybaritism is so dazzlingly triumphant! But it is not so. The United States is still a Puritanical society as it was 22 years ago. A European feels it immediately in the indescribable something that is not to be found elsewhere in Europe, excepting at Geneva, where I am writing these articles.

I would even go further and say that the United States in some ways is more Puritanical today than it was 22 years ago.

Likeness to Ancient Rome
'Audacities of Sybaritism' Cause Reaction of Puritanism

The United States has placed the whole riches of America, swelled out of all proportion by the war, at the disposal of her women, so that they make themselves beautiful. It has given complete liberty to men and women. But at the same time it has retrenched from the number of permitted pleasures all intoxicating liquors, even the wine which the poets and artists of our civilization had always celebrated as a God-given gift. It is as formidable a novelty in the history of humanity on the one side, as the confusion of sexes is on the other.

Prohibition was the result of different and converging forces. But there is no doubt that in its essence it is above all a triumph of the Puritan spirit. Obliged as it was to hold itself on the defensive, or retire on other points before the attacks of the invading Sybartism, Puritanism concentrated its forces on this point and carried off a brilliant revenge.

A Puritanical society which, without denying Puritanism, admits the total confusion of the sexes and devotes itself entirely to the worship of beauty! The richest people in the world who, while able to procure for themselves all the joys of life, forbid themselves all intoxicating drink as if it were a crime! In this over-excitement of contemporary Puritanism and Sybaritism lies, it seems to me, the new originality of America. In any case, that is what struck me most.

Twenty-two years ago that contradiction already existed in America, but then it was only in the germ, and in proportions which had historical precedents; in Rome, for example.

Unique Phenomenon
Formidable World Consequences May Result From Conflict

The war developed the contradiction until it reached the point where it is at present, for it is the too rapid, almost violent enrichment of the war on the one side which over-excited the new audacities of Sybaritism, and on the other the reaction of Puritanism.

But in its present proportions the contradiction is a unique phenomenon in the history of the world, which seems to me destined to have formidable consequences for America and the whole world.

It is for that reason that I studied the question of prohibition with the liveliest attention, for it is one of the most important events of the period which followed the World War. I shall try later to put forward, as rapidly as possible, the conclusions I have reached.

Another article by Dr. Ferrero, continuing his impressions of America, will appear in an early issue—probably next Sunday.

Group to Record Wild Life Noises

DURBAN, South Africa, July, 1931.

A CAGEFUL OF human beings is soon to be dumped in the middle of the African jungle, and the wild beasts are expected to be the spectators.

A special cage has been constructed with strong iron bars, and it is to be transported over 1,000 miles of African swamp, right into the heart of the jungle, where the animals hitherto have been free from human depredations.

This "human zoo" is really a sound film outfit. Under the leadership of the famous German-African explorer, Hans Schomburgk, and his wife, it will try to capture the close-ups of the animals.

The expedition consists of six white men and a woman. They travel in motor cages, operating from behind the bars.

They carry a miniature gramaphone record factory and photographic laboratory, so that the sound discs can be manufactured on the spot and the films can be treated as soon as they are exposed.

As soon as the records have been taken of the mysterious jungle voices, 50 copies will be made on the spot.

The sounds will be synchronized to the moving pictures, which will be taken with special long-distance cameras, enabling "close-up" shots to be taken from a distance of 3,000 feet.

BULLETIN: New York Men Give Up Tea Drinking. Depression Result, O. O.

'The Russians May Be Cuckoo, But You Can't Laugh 'Em Off,' Says Rogers

Yarns of 'Ole Debble Sea'

By O. O. McINTYRE

THEY WERE SPINNING YARNS in the ship's smoker. A quiet New Englander was saying that he was always skittish about new found friends aboard ship. Several years ago he was crossing from Vancouver to Yokohama.

He fell in with a gentleman at the bar and they walked the deck and had adjoining deck chairs. One sundown his friend arose from his deck chair, murmured "So long!" and vaulted lightly over the rail into the sea. The ship circled about for him at the cry, "Man overboard," but he was never found.

Edna Ferber told of an experience off Newfoundland. One morning in open sea her ship sighted far off on the horizon two men in an open boat. They were picked up, both famished, sun blistered and almost delirious. They were attached to a fishing smack and with others had set forth in smaller boats. A fog. And they drifted out to sea.

For six days, with only a small cask of water and eating uncooked fish, they had floated about looking for help. A collection of $500 each was made for them and they were taken to New York and then sent back to Newfoundland.

A man from Denver told of a ship staff captain who died at sea. He was wrapped in a British flag and, with appropriate services, dropped gently from the stern of the boat. There was a sudden gush of red from the sea. The propeller had chopped into the body and many spectators fainted.

A ship's officer told of a disaster in the Mediterranean. The vessel had sent out an "SOS" and was awaiting aid. It seemed that nothing could save them. What impressed him was the sudden calm that came when the last hope had gone. "Strangely enough," he said, "there was not one frightened person."

Then help came and the hysterical fear that they could not be saved gripped everybody again. "When convinced they were actually facing death," he said, "there was no fright, whatever."

A mild mannered little man from Kansas City related the tale of a sea gull that followed a ship from Southampton and was seen in mid sea, still on the wing. That is an omen of bad luck among mariners. Yet the ship beat a previous fast record, three babies were successfully born in the steerage and the captain received a wireless he was the father of a new daughter. "That sea gull," he said, "must have been a stork."

And, as he says himself, he has no trouble looking so.

There is very little talk of Russia and its five-year plan abroad. You hear much more about it in America. The European viewpoint is that, without machinery, Russia cannot do the thing it set out to do and even if it acquires the machinery it cannot use it, for the Russian, mechanically, is always at sea.

Europe admits, however, that agriculturally Russia will make the grade. Yet it seems to me that everything about Russia is speculation. Few anywhere know just exactly what is going on. Everybody is guessing and one guess is as good as another. The best plan is not to form an opinion about Russia.

Post and Gatty Did Great Job

By WILL ROGERS

WELL ALL I KNOW is just what I read in the papers. And this hot weather the last few weeks, every paragraph in the paper is prostration. Then come along the Fourth a couple of weeks ago, and that with its firecrackers, Drownings and Auto accidents just about got what the heat had left. But if things dont pick up it dont make much difference anyhow.

Well its kinder lonesome around the Rogers Ranch (not really a ranch, but we call it that; it sounds big, and dont really do any harm) Mrs. Rogers and Mary, that's the Daughter that just become a young Lady right while I was looking at her, she turned eighteen and I swear it dont seem ten.

I was playing in a Vaudeville Theater in Houston, Texas. It was the opening Matinee, and I got the telegram of her arrival. She was with her Mother and her Mother was at her old home at Rogers, Ark. A beautiful little town in the edge of the Ozarks, on that wonderful White River, great summer resort all around there. We dident have any home, we was just living in Theater Dressing rooms, and raised in trunks. That was before I knew there was such a thing as a Ziegfeld Follies.

The Act then was mostly roping, and a good deal of jokes, in fact the same ones I am still using. Roosevelt was my best bet in those days. He was the best known public man that ever lived, and they kept up with everything that he did, so when you started in talking about something that he had just said or done, you dident have to stop to tell what it was before going ahead with your comment.

Our Public men nowadays havent got near as much color as the ones then had. People are not interested enough in the ones nowadays to read what they are doing, which generally they aint. But they are pretty able I guess at that.

BUT WHAT I STARTED out to say was that Mary and her Mother have gone on a little trip over to Honolulu. Mary had heard that the dance Orchestras over there were especially good so she wanted to make sure. I was working on a Movie and couldent get away.

I would like to go to that Honolulu some time. I just come by there one time many years ago, on my way from Australia. But I do hate that boat trip. If I could fly over I would go tomorrow, if I could get this Gatty and Post to take me over. Those boys did a great Job, dident they?

I wish I could have gone to Okla. when they welcomed them there. They asked me to come. I would like to meet them, and the old fellow that backed the trip. It will be a long time before that record is beat. You wont get another combination like that.

Such a Navigator, and such a Flyer, and they cant get any better ship. Just think! clear around the World with one Motor. Then you find people that are afraid to go up for an hour with three motors.

How in the deuce did they do about all that loss of sleep? Lord, if I mist two hours sleep I am dopy for the next day or so. I would have gone to sleep right in some Russian Reception Committees whiskers and when it would have come time to get up and take off again. I would have left the record remain with Jules Verne in eighty days, and even that was imagination. Poor old Jules, he must have had a relapse when he heard them flying over his grave.

WE HEAR A LOT about the World becoming little, but I tell you its plenty big yet. It will be a long time before we know much more about each other than we do now. And I guess it will be just as well we dont.

Just think of those Boys flying away up in Siberia. Thats where we used to see the pictures of these Wolves jumping up at those sleighs, and the Horses had something like a high yoke up over his neck. Well, these old boys got enough altitude that no old wolf couldent jump at them.

You know, too, those Russians were mighty nice to these Boys, when you consider that we dont give them much the best of it. We think they are running their Country cockeyed, and I guess its mutual, at least it should be.

Now dont get the idea that a Plane is new in Russia, for they have a fine aviation system. I made a little part of this trip that these Boys made. That was, I flew from London to Berlin, then to Moscow in 1926. They made practically the same jump, and when I landed in the afternoon in Moscow in a Commercial Plane, single motor, I was the only passenger, and the air was full of planes training, and we had to circle the field several times before we got the signal to land.

Now that was five years ago. I bet these Boys saw many a Plane in Russia. They have Aviation Societys over there that are maintained by the members, not the Government. They all throw in a small sum each and that goes to buy planes and fields and training fliers. Its a patriotic thing like we donate to our Red Cross or some other Charity.

YOU KNOW THOSE RASCALS, along with all their Cuckoo stuff, have got some mighty good ideas. If just part of em work they are going to be hard to get along with. Just think of everybody in a Country going to work. I dont mean just the ones that want to work, but I mean everybody.

What they mean by work is to produce something, to be of some benefit to the whole Community. Just look at the millions of us here that tonight we havent done a thing today, that helps the country, or that helps anybody. We have just gone along and lived off of it, and we are just "lousy" with satisfaction of ourselves. Just think what we could do over here if we ALL worked.

Dont get scared, I am not putting this in as a Plan. But we must admit that other things being equal the Nation that works and saves and dont let the profits go into the hands of a few thousand or million men. They are going to be dangerous competitors. We cant just laugh it off.

We prospered for years on nothing but our natural resources. Well they have got twice as much of anything as we ever had before we used it up. Its a terrible way to live, and do, but you cant beat hard world, sacrifice, and unlimited resources. Its liable, if it does just even half way work out, to have us winging on our foreign trade. But thats for Mr Hoover and Pat Hurley to worry about.

I am sleepy, goodnight.

Mr. Suggs—"Oh, I'm not worrying about that. I'm afraid he has run over somebody else—and I forgot to take out indemnity insurance on the new sedan."

"What make of car is that queer, awkward, old-fashioned looking bus with the swelled-up chauffeur?"

"Why, my dear, that's Mrs. Swank's new $20,000 imported custom-made town car."

"Indeed? Well, now that I look at it again it does have that indefinable something we call 'class.'"

ENTIRE NATION MUST RELY ON TEN STATES TO CONSERVE OIL RESOURCES, SAYS WILBUR

They Should Exercise Police Power to Protect Against Reckless Exhaustion, Warns Secretary

THIS IS THE SECOND of two articles by Secretary Wilbur on the problems confronting the oil industry in the United States. In the first, Secretary Wilbur outlined the overproduction that has prevailed and the agreements for unit production that have been consummated between operators to limit the output and conserve the supply in specific fields. In the accompanying article he continues his analysis of the problem.*

By RAY LYMAN WILBUR

Secretary of the Interior in President Hoover's Cabinet and Chairman of the Federal Oil Conservation Board.

WHAT CAN THE STATE DO which the oil industry itself cannot? All of the oil producing states have conservation laws of some sort. They range from very brief statutes in Ohio and Pennsylvania, which require protection of producing formations from water intrusion, to the long and extremely detailed laws of Louisiana. In all 19 oil states protection of producing formations is required. In most of them the "waste" of gas and oil is prohibited. In defining "waste" wide discrepancies are found. So much for the physical methods of drilling a well.

Ray Lyman Wilbur

In the production phases there is also wide discrepancy. Again waste is prohibited in general terms in the mid-continent oil states, the Rocky Mountain states and California.

Blowing gas into the air is specifically prohibited in some states; in others it is specifically permitted if necessary to produce an oil well. In California, production of more than a reasonable amount of gas per barrel of oil is prohibited, even though the gas is put to beneficial use. So much for the actual physical loss and escape of oil and gas.

On the question of control of production, the laws of the mid-continental states are generally alike. In Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas there is a provision, for proration of production, at least during times of over-production, all under production schedules to be fixed by some state agency.

States' Sphere
Trend Is Determined, But Authority Vague

In California, the restriction on production hinges on the amount that can be produced without waste of gas. The California gas law was passed in 1931; the Arkansas law in 1923. Some of the Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana statutes are older.

The modern trend toward state protection of its oil and gas resources is clearly indicated. The sphere of state authority is not completely determined. Two bases for state action have been variously relied upon—one the common right of the surface owners to the oil and gas in the pool, the protection by the state of each of them from unreasonable action on the part of another; second, the interest of the people of the state in its natural resources, justifying the prevention by the state of waste.

As time goes on and it becomes more apparent that as a nation we have needlessly deprived our grandchildren of what should have been one of their greatest assets, there is no doubt that the power of the state will be more and more recognized.

Federalism
Public Domain Guarded Against Exploiters

So much for the industry and for the state. As for the United States, it has certain very broad powers on the public land, but most of the known oil deposits are under privately-owned land. As a potential source of supply, and so far as existing law permits, the public domain is being carefully guarded against speculation.

During the last two years the administration's oil conservation policy has resulted in a denial of all applications for prospecting permits, except those based on prior equities, and slowing down as much as possible drilling on public land.

But, aside from its authority over the public domain, the federal government has never undertaken to regulate production in any state. There are those who think that such a power rests in the United States, possibly growing out of the war power; but the weight of legal opinion is overwhelmingly against the possibility of direct action by the United States.

WASTE—A striking view of a gas fire at an oil well at Santa Fe Springs, California. Secretary Wilbur points out that such fires burn up millions of cubic feet of gas and destroy enormous quantities of valuable energy.

If the industry and the states must solve this problem, how are they to do it? Regulation by any state can only extend to its own border, and interstate agreements among oil operators are apt to bring them within the prohibition of the federal anti-trust laws.

Yet curtailment of production in California may be followed by an expansion of production in Texas, and curtailment in Texas may be followed by an expansion in Oklahoma, and so on. States have, therefore, been just as reluctant to limit their own citizens without any guarantee of reciprocal action by other states as individual operators have been.

In the Federal Oil Conservation Board's first report, in 1926, it was suggested that "there should be active co-operation between the oil-producing states in the study of proposed legislation, to the end that uniform laws may be enacted or even agreements or compacts entered into between the states, subject to ratification by Congress."

In June, 1929, at an oil conference at Colorado Springs, the same thought was suggested by the government representatives. At present there is considerable discussion among the oil states of this possibility.

During the first week in April representatives of the governors of 10 oil states met in Washington and requested a conference with the Federal Oil Conservation Board. They presented to the board a program calling for co-ordinating state conservation effort through an interstate compact which would reserve to each state the regulation of production within its own border by its own enforcing agency, but would co-ordinate their action through the 10 oil states by some conference group.

The Oil Board
Lacking Executive Power, Relies on States

These 10 states, within which over 97 per cent of the nation's oil is produced, are trustees of these great resources for the benefit of the people of the nation. They must exercise their police power on behalf of the other 38 states if these resources are to be protected from reckless exhaustion.

Our oil is being thrown on the market now at prices from 20 cents to 50 cents a barrel, driving out of business the independent producers in the old, settled fields, forcing the permanent loss of many of these old wells through salt water intrusion following their shutdown, and driving the oil produced into inferior uses which compete with coal, instead of preserving the oil for use of its gasoline content.

It is a national problem, yet the federal government under our usually accepted concept of federal and state sovereignty has no power to protect itself against this waste. The 10 oil states must act for the rest of us, and the country will watch with the deepest interest their present effort to co-ordinate their action.

Whatever agreement they may reach must have the consent of Congress and will undoubtedly call for federal co-operation in some manner, so that the danger of unreasonable prices of oil products may be eliminated.

It is a new application of the means created by the writers of our constitution to provide for the joint application of the state's police power to a problem which transcends state lines. But it is a method which has been exercised over 50 times in the various states for protection of their boundaries, division of water of rivers, joint police protection of certain areas, creation and patrol of interstate parks, and so on.

The Federal Oil Conservation Board has no power to direct either the industry or the states. Its power is purely advisory. It has consistently asked that sound, uniform laws be enacted by the oil states for the protection of the rest of the country and it is hopeful that some such result may come out of the present state effort.

Fighting Power, Not Cost, Measure of Defense—Reilly

For instance a 15-ton heavy tank costs us $40,000, Britain $30,000, France $22,000, Italy and Japan 23,000, and Belgium $16,500.

An infantry rifle costs us $35, Britain the same, France $25, Italy and Japan $28 and Belgium $19. Multiply by a million and see the tremendous differences in cost for the same number.

With warships, a rough rule which has been worked out for construction is that for what we can get for every dollar Britain, Japan and Italy can get one and a half times as much and France 2½ times as much.

With the exception of the United States, Britain and Germany the lower ranks of practically all the armies and navies of the world are raised by compulsory universal service. Thus their pay is very small.

These three countries raising their armed force by voluntary elistment have to compete with the civilian wage scale. Therefore they must give pay as well as board, lodging and clothing.

Wide Differential
Americans Paid $21; Italians 13 Lira

The lowest paid American private gets $21 a month, a French one 30 francs, an Italian 13 lira and a Japanese 5 yen.

We pay all costs of our army and navy in the Philippines, even the Filipino scouts, India contributes $500,000 annually to the British East Indies Naval Squadron and pays not only all native troops but also the British white regulars used for her defense.

The question of where the armed forces of a nation can and cannot be used is of the greatest importance in determining the military power of a nation.

Transoceanic and round the world flights show that aviation is opening up a new era in the accessibility of all countries to attack by the armed air forces of another.

The primary purposes of navies has always been to keep the enemy armed forces from getting at the homeland, while enabling an invasion to be made of his.

Britain's freedom from French invasion during the Napoleonic period was solely due to the superior strength of her navy and the military genius of Nelson, her great admiral.

In the Great War Germany counted on her submarines to prevent any American army being landed in France in time to reinforce the Allies.

The white and native African army of France, on which she counts for essential reinforcement of her home army in time of war, will be of no help unless she can keep the sea routes open across the Mediterranean from North Africa to South Africa.

Military Power
America Has Lost; France, Britain Gained

Land obstacles like great rivers and mountain ranges also make tremendous differences. When North Italy finally gained freedom from Austria she had to accept a frontier line which gave Austria all the passes through the mountains between them. Not only that, but sufficient territory on the Italian side of each remain Austrian to permit her troops to safely debouch from these passes. As a result of the war Italy reversed the situation.

What other nations will throw in their armed forces for or against has always been not only a decisive factor in war, but also in maintaining peace.

The history of the decade prior to the Great War is simply that of the struggle of the principal opposing powers to line up the others on their side.

The French were handicapped in the beginning of the war because, uncertain as to Italy, they had to keep a large force on the Italian frontier. The Germans detached troops from the west subsequently badly needed in the first battle of the Marne because of Russia's advance.

An examination of the military power of Japan, France, Britain and the United States beginning with the period just before the Great War of 1914 to 1918 and carried to date will show the first three to have gained enormously while we, after a short period of gain, have progressively lost in strength.

Distance No Bar
War Illustrated Ease of Transportation

The Russo-Japanese War of 1904-05 taught Japan the immense distances across Siberia were no bar to Imperial Russia's huge manpower being poured into Manchuria in steadily increasing and perhaps overwhelming numbers. The Great War through its disorganization of Russia has given and still is giving Japan plenty of opportunity to intrench herself in Eastern Asia to meet that threat should it ever be renewed. The war wiped out the German Asiatic fleet and took away the German base at Tsing Tao.

The powerful French squadron which used to join similar Russian, German and British squadrons in enforcing Europe's will in China no longer exists.

The American bases at Manila and Guam and potential bases in the Aleutian islands either insufficiently fortified or not at all, must, because of the Washington treaties, so remain. The peace treaty gave Japan islands stretching from within 500 miles of the Philippines to within 1,700 miles of Hawaii, and completely surrounding Guam. Thus Japan has potential naval and air bases more than half way across the Pacific, while our fleet and aviation are tied to Hawaii, our Pacific coast and the Panama Canal.

France, prior to the war, was only one of a group of great continental powers. Germany, Russia and Austro-Hungary were the others. The first two had larger war armies.

Economy
Only Increase Has Been In Aviation

Today she is the supreme land military power in Europe.

Our 1916 navy building program if completed would have given us a stronger fleet than that of Britain. It would not have given us greater military power at sea because of her naval bases scattered all over the world, her much larger merchant marine and her control of most of the world's cables.

The Washington and London conferences which in principle gave us parity in ships did not in these other decisive factors. Therefore, Britain on sea like France on land occupies an unthreatened position of military dominance.

Economy has prevented the carrying out of the modest Army program laid down by the National Defense Act and has prevented our even building up to the navy strength in ships allowed by the treaties.

Thus the years since the war show a steady decline in our armed strength on sea and land. Only in aviation have we increased in strength. However, even this increase is both insufficient to give us the air power we need and to counteract our total decrease in military power.

College Hop Spiel Begins Long Tour For Tyrone Group

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

BASEBALL MANAGERS do not make all the boners. There's the manager of the Penn State Glee Club of some years ago, f'rinstance. He wouldn't let Fred Waring into his crew of musical boys. Nor any of Fred's fellow Penn State students who had surrounded him when he picked the banjo in the first peppy orchestra he organized to play for dances around Tyrone and State College. That director, it is only fair to state, feels properly embarrassed now when he thinks about having turned thumbs down on Fred.

Because Fred, himself, now directs the most prominent organization of its type in existence—an orchestra of 20 "collegiates" who play 50—count 'em, 50—different instruments. For several years it has been starred in vaudeville, motion picture and musical comedy theaters. In 1928 it played all summer at Les Ambassadeurs, Paris.

In First Music Film

It was featured in the first talkie musical comedy, "Syncopation." It was the stellar attraction in stage productions, including the musical comedies, "Hello Yourself" and "Rah Rah Daze." Last season it was featured in the E. Ray Goetz musical production, "The New Yorkers."

When Fred was a mere youth—he is an old man of almost 30 now—he and his brother, Tom, Freddy Buck and "Poley" McClintock, organized the Waring-McClintock Snap Orchestra. "Snap" was intended to convey that the boys were hot stuff. They played for school dances and house parties and worked at various jobs, saving the income from play and work to pay for their tuition at Penn State. There all four tried to "make" the glee club at that institution of learning, and were rejected, as related above.

Destiny Takes Hand

Destiny early took hold of Fred Waring's shoulders and began showing him about. When he found he couldn't get into the glee club, or dramatic society, at State, Fred decided to reorganize his orchestra, by adding a number of instruments, the players of which were personal friends. They soon had plenty of dance dates and had achieved a local reputation when Ol' Man Destiny took a hand. University of Michigan students were to give a dance—a J-Hop—at Ann Arbor. A second orchestra was needed to play for the overflow that was anticipated from the larger hall, where the principal orchestra would be playing.

Then, just as in fiction, the unlooked-for happened. The Pennsylvanians, who had gone to Ann Arbor on 24 hours' notice, "stole the show." All the J-Hoppers wanted to get into the hall where they were playing. And the Pennsylvanians didn't get back to State College for months and months. An Ann Arbor theater manager heard the boys play and suggested that they ask for a chance to play in a Detroit theater.

An audition was arranged, after which they were engaged for a week, their first in any

Lotti Loder, From Vienna And Films, Is to Be One Of Mr. White's 'Scandals'

By LEO MARSH

(Universal Service)

NEW YORK, July 18.

GEORGE WHITE has confided that he had snared Lotti Loder, the Viennese musical comedy star, for his new, now-rehearsing "Scandals."

It will be the first American stage appearance for Miss Loder, who came here a while back to make talking pictures. According to reports from Vienna and from Mr. White's office, she is a comedienne as well as a singer.

The "Scandals," according to present plans, will go on view at the Apollo Theater late next month.

Comes Lillian Bond

Also from motion pictures comes Lillian Bond, whom Schwab & Mandel have borrowed from Warner Bros. for their new musical show, "Free For All," another piece that is due for a late August opening.

But Miss Bond is not new to Broadway, nor to Schwab & Mandel. She played her first leading role for them two years ago in "Follow Thru." She already is in the cast and at rehearsal.

There is talk that Alice Brady may have a sort of repertory theater next season. Just now she is rehearsing in "Manhattan Nocturne," which William A. Brady will introduce at Asbury Park next week.

Others Mentioned

And now it seems that "Manhattan Nocturne" may be the first of four or five plays, new and old, in which Miss Brady will play during the winter months. "Oliver Twist" and "Pygmalion and Galatea" are two other plays mentioned along with her name, as is a new and untitled play by Sophie Treadwell.

Well, they have announced that Ted Husing, the radio announcer, would be a guest performer when "Shoot the Works" has its premiere next Tuesday in the Cohan Theater. He will

Movie Go Round

BY LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, July 18.

I never did like to be called a prevaricator. Truth is my middle name. When I cabled from Honolulu that John McCormick and Janet Gaddis McCormick had decided to part, vehement denials were wafted in every direction. Even the story that Janet had gone to her grandmother's house directly from the boat and John had gone to Beverly Hills, where his mother and father have taken a house, failed to convince some of our doubting friends. John is about to return to business. He is interested in a camera concern and will, it is rumored, become general manager. Hhere is no better business man in the motion picture industry than John. Once he settles down he should do well. Janet is charming, well bred and she was very popular with all the film crowd who met her in Honolulu. Too bad they couldn't make a go of it.

The inimitable Al Jolson, who always has some good gag or another, sat next to me the other night and in five minutes he had given me a dozen laughs. Al is looking for a house in California. His wife, Ruby Keeler, reaches here next week and the Jolsons plan to find a summer home here. News of a prospective buyer in Hollywood spreads faster than the proverbial wild fire. So Al has been besieged by real estaters. He took a look at the Colleen Moore mansion in Bel Air and was impressed with it.

"How much?" he asked the butler. "The asking price is $325,000," was the answer. "And a very good ask," replied Al.

I wonder if it's a good idea for these films and books to damn our modern colleges. I have just finished reading a book called "The Parable of the Virgins," which is a most depressing piece of literature. The story deals with women's colleges and is a plea against sending girls to these schools. I no more than read this tale than I heard that "Confessions of a Co-ed" had been barred from the state of Virginia because it showed the pernicious effect of a co-educational college on the morals of young people. Good heavens, where shall we send our children? If both institutions of learning, the college solely for women and the co-educational institution, sow seeds of immorality, where can our children get their education? Personally, I think both stories are exaggerated and might apply in isolated cases, but for the most part are untrue.

My hearty congratulations to Peter Gridley Smith. You know he used to be Pete Smith before he became a big producer. Pete has written a whippet-racing short that holds the attention of the audience from start to finish. It not only appeals to dog lovers who delight in the canine beauties, but it is instructive as well. You get a faint idea of the infinite pains taken to breed the thoroughbreds and get them ready to compete in the popular whippet races. So much has been said about producing shorts that are not a badly done revival of the old slapstick comedies, that Pete, it would seem, has started something new.

Newsy letters from Paris are welcome during these hot, sticky dog days. However, the young person who held down the job while I was vacationing purloined the best items and left me scarcely a line. One choice bit did escape her eagle eye and that concerns Charlie Chaplin and his tennis. Charlie, who has been hob-nobbing with royalty, has played tennis daily on the Riviera with Michael Arlen. I suppose Maxine Elliott didn't interest Parsons, Jr., because she was in the cradle when Maxine was emoting on the stage. Anyway, Maxine has been on the Riviera, a daily observer of Chaplin's tennis. Likewise, the Dolly gals, Rubye de Remer and Peter Rurik, Von Sternberg's erstwhile assistant, were also impartial lookers on.

A bright and breezy soul walked up to Thomas Meighan the other night and asked permission to present a friend.

"I want you to meet Blanche Ring's brother-in-law," was the introduction. "Say," said Tommy, "it's been a long time since that has been my sole claim to glory."

Frances Ring Meighan, standing by, cast a mischievous look at her husband—who has been Thomas Meighan, famous movie actor, since Heck was a pup.

Ziegfeld 1931 'Follies' Can Stand on Own Merit

By BUSHNELL DIMOND

NEW YORK, July 18.

GENEROUS MR. ZIEGFELD, whose golden cornucopia is a local proverb, has spilled out on the stage of his own theater a new "Follies." To rheumy old sentimentalists that bare fact would be enough; of what moment is merit when, with a bare two syllables, you can evoke the perfumed past, a past winding back to 1907, when the glorifying business found its first legs?

Fortunately for the more critical-minded, the new "Follies" can stand, unabashed, on its own shapely feet. It is true that feeble laments are heard, here and there, that the impresario has offered up the corpse of the comic spirit on the altar of beauty. Well, what about it?

Beauty the Base

That is the Ziegfeld formula, and he alone is master of it. His latest entertainment may be a little wobbly regarding gags, but no one can gainsay the counter attractions of Miss Gladys Glad's fair loveliness, of the now pianoless Miss Helen Morgan's dulcet wailings, of the spry dancing magic of the new Miss Mitzi Mayfair.

In the iced recesses of the Ziegfeld Theater, as a matter of record, there is plenty of fun waiting for you. There is Mark Hellinger's suavely unmalicious burlesque of "Grand Hotel." Albert Carroll, drafted from the smaller revues, is a source of mild hysteria in a series of far from unmalicious caricatures, the peak being reached in his Mary Boland. Miss Faith ("Vanities") Bacon shakes a wicked fan, and the Brittons' lunatic orchestra is calculated to convulse both Park avenue and the peasantry.

Shaker of Mirth

Finally, for the fun of the thing, Jack Pearl and his amiable stutters that have been impounded from the talkies. You may be slightly appalled, but you will be just as surely mirth-shaken, by the toasted sandwich incident in which Mr. Pearl figures. This is but one of a score of parlor improprieties with which the librettists have decked out a long and luxuriant evening.

It is, perhaps, news to report that Harry Richman is ardent, agile, personable and in good voice. Suspicions have been basely entertained in the past that Mr. Richman's affair with himself (as Stephen Crane would say) ought to be stopped by the police. But the It man of Times Square seems to have conquered those impulses. Clad

Fiske Heads New Venture

Robert Fiske, remembered for his long association with the George Sharp Players in the Pitt, has organized his own company to play during the summer months, or longer, in the tristate territory. The company will open in Uniontown on July 21.

The present bookings are Uniontown, two matinees and two nights; Morgantown, two nights, and Beaver Falls, one night. The company will complete the circuit once a week, each town having the same night each week as its date.

This is in line with the Theatrical Press Representatives of America's SOS movement described at length in this department recently. The purpose is to bring first-class productions, with experienced companies into sections of the country which have been deprived of good stage entertainment.

Mr. Fiske's opening will be "Apron Strings," to be followed by "Danger," "Strictly Dishonorable," "Death Takes a Holiday" and other plays of similar merit.

The productions will be built and painted in Pittsburgh and trucked to the towns in which they are to be presented. Mr. Fiske will direct the company and play prominent roles. Others in the cast will be Fred Sullivan, who played the Nixon last season with the New York Theater Guild; Katherine Card, Catherine Maison, Peggy Dougherty, Billy Link, Nancy Leslie and Robert Elton.

Constance In New One

Constance Bennett and Paul L. Stein, RKO-Pathe's star-director combination, have just finished their fourth production, "The Common Law." The previous features they have made together are "This Thing Called Love," "Sin Takes a Holiday" and "Born to Love."

Author of 'Grand Hotel' Sets Broadway to Bidding

By MARK BARRON

Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 18.

VICKI BAUM, the little German housewife who decided she would like to write, may be Broadway's most prolific author this fall. It is entirely possible she will have three plays running in New York at the same time.

The drama which first introduced her to this country, "Grand Hotel," remains one of the current hits, and likely will stay out the winter. After this show opened, other managers began a spirited bidding for others of her works.

Paul Streger has acquired an earlier play of hers called "Parisier Platz 13," and it is scheduled to come to town around September.

Golden Buys Novel

John Golden has purchased the dramatic rights to her recently finished novel, "And Life Goes On." Miss Baum will place the novel in play form herself, with someone else translating it into English.

Those who have read "And Life Goes On" say the leading role would be sensational for Katharine Cornell. However, their hopes that she will play it probably will go astray, for Miss Cornell now is an independent manager in her own right, and it is unlikely she would take the part unless she produced the play herself.

The probability is that "And Life Goes On" will be a November opening. The plot, it is said, would adapt itself to the form used so effectively in "Grand Hotel"—that is, a series of swiftly moving scenes depicting episodes in the lives of a number of characters.

The last play in which the late Holbrook Blinn appeared was a Molnar comedy called "The Play's the Thing." It was one of Blinn's greatest successes, and was the vehicle which started Catharine Dale Owen toward her movie career.

Billy Rose has decided to make a musical show of "The Play's the Thing," so has commissioned P. G. Wodehouse to do the adaptation, with music from Lorenz Hart and Richard Rodgers. Ernst Lubitsch may

The Screen and Its Players

Romantic Teams Active In Week's New Lineup Of Talk Screen Drama

By MILDRED FILLMORE

MANY POPULAR movie players are teamed up in that romantic way in the new picture lineup. Nancy Carroll and Frederick March are in "The Night Angel" in the Penn. Joan Bennett and Hardie Albright are in the Stanley in "Hush Money." The Warner offers Ricardo Cortez and Kay Francis in "Transgression." Phillips Holmes and Sylvia Sidney are in both the Fulton and the Sheridan Square in "Confessions of a Co-Ed." The Fulton will show the Schmeling-Stribling fight. The Harris presents George O'Brien and Sally Eilers in "A Holy Terror."

In "The Night Angel" Miss Carroll is seen as a cabaret entertainer, who meets with many romantic and dramatic experiences before the right man comes along. And in this case the right man is Mr. March, of course. Edmund Goulding wrote, as well as directed the story. The locale is Prague, that gay European place that is said to rival Paris and Vienna.

Miss Bennett portrays a little girl who wants to go straight in "Hush Money." She's involved with a crook gang at first, but when the police intervene she decides she's going to be a good girl. She marries a young millionaire. A baby comes. Then her past casts its shadow into her future and threatens to mar her happy rainbow. But the finale has the blue birds chirping merrily.

Mr. Albright, who used to go to the Carnegie Tech drama school, does the wealthy lad act. Owen Moore is prominent as a blackmailing crook, and Myrna Loy, with her oriental eyes, is some sort of a menace.

A Co-ed's Diary

Another former Carnegie Tech student is in our movie midst. He is Norman Foster, who supports Miss Sydney and Mr. Holmes in "Confessions of a Co-Ed." This film is heralded as the intimate story of an anonymous college girl, taken from her day-to-day diary.

The plot presents a collegiate love triangle, but the right girl gets the right boy in the final fadeout. So what could be nicer!

The film, "Transgression," also offers another love triangle. The principals are the above-mentioned Mr. Cortez and Miss Francis, and Paul Cavanagh. The plot tells the story of a husband who takes a trip to Africa while his wife takes a trip into the arms of another man. In the end, however, she discovers it is husband she has loved all the time.

Polo-Playing Sleuth

The story of "A Holy Terror" concerns a young society polo player, who, trailing the suspected slayer of his father, meets a beautiful girl. Supporting Mr. O'Brien and Miss Eilers in this production are James Kirkwood, Humphrey Bogart, Stanley Fields and Robert Warwick.

"Laughing Sinners," featuring Joan Crawford, begins a three-day engagement in the Enright Monday. It was recently seen downtown. The film is based on the stage play, "The Torch Song," and the cast includes Clarke Gable, Neil Hamilton, Marjorie Rambeau and Cliff Edwards.

This Hobart Girl Is One Who Will Not Be Cowed

By HARRIET PARSONS

(Universal Service)

HOLLYWOOD, July 18.

IF I HADN'T liked Rose Hobart for her own charming self I'd have liked her for her 4-month-old Scottie puppy. His name is Alcibiades, and he ate a large bone all over my white shoes with delicious unconcern. He—but look here—this is a story about the girl, not the dog.

Well, the wriggling, ingratiating black Alcibiades' owner is a paradoxical young person. In a way, she's typical of the modern American girl—there's a dash, an independence, a straightforwardness about her. She likes dancing, good times and being on her own. Yet, somehow, she's most un-American and not at all of today. And she's far too distinctive an individual to be called typically anything—except typically Rose Hobart.

Rather Shy

In spite of her poise and assured bearing, she's rather shy. Hates large parties unless she can get off in a corner with two or three people she knows and likes. Much prefers to entertain a few friends at dinner—and then talk for hours about anything and everything. Reads voraciously, but discriminatingly. Lives alone in pleasant, rambling house tucked away in the hills.

Rose Hobart

She got her first stage experience at 15, playing in "Cappy Ricks" over a Chautauqua circuit. Went back to New York thinking she was a full-fledged actress—and couldn't get a job. Finally J. J. Shubert recommended her for a child's part in "Liliom," which the Theater Guild was putting on.

Looked the Part

Eva Le Gallienne took one look at her and said: "At last the Shuberts have gotten some sense. Here's a child who actually looks like a child." In trying out for the part she pronounced a French phrase with an impeccable accent. Miss Le Gallienne was delighted, and she got the job. Recently she played on the screen the role in "Liliom" which Le Gallienne created on the stage.

Leaves Suddenly

After a considerable success in the theater, Rose came to Hollywood under contract to Universal and made "The Lady Surrenders." At the end of the picture she departed suddenly for New York. A story went the rounds that Rose Hobart was "temperamental" and "difficult" and that she was holding the studio up with exorbitant demands. So far as I know, her only display of temperament has been a refusal to work 18 hours a day.

She strikes me as much too intelligent to be temperamental. I suspect she simply wouldn't let herself be imposed upon.

You have only to look at the Hobart chin to know that she has courage and determination. All her features are cleanly modeled and her mouth quirks up humorously at one corner. She calls herself "Hobart" in an impersonal manner which indicates that she can stand off and regard herself objectively and unemotionally.

Her quarrel with Universal patched up, she has made "East of Borneo" on the home lot and was loaned out to First National for "We Three" and "Chance."

Star's Next Is 'Emma'

Clarence Brown intends to start work early next week on Marie Dressler's new picture, "Emma." This is an original story by Frances Marion, in which Miss Dressler will have the part of a house servant. Brown's last directorial effort was "A Free Soul."

SALLY EILERS appears with George O'Brien in a western film, "A Holy Terror," the screen attraction in the Harris.

Honolulu Theaters Grand, But Exhibit Year-Old Pictures

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

LOS ANGELES, July 18.

HONOLULU, modern, up to the minute in all improvements, and alertly American in many ways, is curiously deficient in its motion picture entertainment.

I was surprised to find that all the films shown in Hawaii were at least a year old. Bebe Daniels, who became the idol of the Island during her brief stay, learned, to her dismay, that "Lawful Larceny," made more than a year ago, was billed at a local theater while she was in Honolulu.

Styles change so completely during a period of 12 months that no actress likes to feel she is wearing out-of-date clothes. Furthermore, stories are outmoded and screen treatment often, after a few months, becomes old-fashioned.

They Like Films

The Honolulu folk adore motion pictures. They know every favorite, they read every fan magazine and they welcome every visiting star as if they were receiving royalty.

William Powell, visiting the island with Carole Lombard, his blonde bride, found brown hand after brown hand extended in his direction.

"Please, a hand-shake," some bright-eyed Japanese or Chinese lad would say.

Bebe and Ben Lyon were surrounded on the beach day after day by gay, singing Hawaiians who played their ukeleles and guitars and composed sweet Hawaiian songs in their honor.

Norma Talmadge was weighted down with leis thrown about her neck by her admirers. Sweet homage, all this, in a land that is poetically beautiful in its sentiments.

Rates as Swimmer

Dorothy Mackaill, known to every beach boy and every Kanaka as being Waikiki's champion swimmer, always had one of the brown-skinned lads ready to boast about her prowess in the water.

After Kathryn Crawford learned the Hawaiian songs in the native language she could have been elected to any public office.

Warner Baxter became "Warner" overnight to hundreds of friendly Honoluluans, who did everything to let him know how much they enjoy his pictures. Yet, with all this, and the many Hollywood folk who visit the island each year, the screen entertainment is woefully antiquated.

It wouldn't be so noticeable, perhaps, if there weren't so many fine theaters. The syndicate that controls these houses may buy its talkies cheap.

Girl Without Past, That's Our Heroine

By JERRY HOFFMAN

(Universal Service)

HOLLYWOOD, July 18.

UNFORTUNATELY, there has been little, if any, scandal in the life of Miriam Hopkins. I say "unfortunately," and mean it. Had there been some shocking episode, by this time every movie fan in the world would know just what Miss Hopkins eats for breakfast, what she puts on it and why. As it is, Miss Hopkins happens to be merely a good actress, known to theater-goers in New York, and to those who happened to see the one movie she made in the past.

Now comes "The Smiling Lieutenant," starring Maurice Chevalier, with Miriam Hopkins as one of his leading ladies. It is Miss Hopkins' second picture. Hence, it behooves me, (h-mm, business of clearing throat), to present Miriam Hopkins—her dark, terrible past. You see, Miss Hopkins is making her first visit to Hollywood.

First Movie Talk

This is her first movie interview. It should deal with brilliant quotations dropped from the ruby lips of Miriam Hopkins. It should describe the vivacious, enthusiastic personality Miss Hopkins displays. Really does. But first you must know:

That Miriam Hopkins was born in Savannah, Ga., of rich-but-honest parents. I gather they were wealthy, for Miriam was educated in boarding school. In fact, she left boarding school to become a dancer. Just as she was about to sail for an engagement in South America, she broke her ankle. That decided her to become a dramatic actress. Few have had as legitimate reasons.

Career Up to Now

There, children, you have—up to the moment she appeared in such things as "The Music Box Revue," "Garrick Gaieties," several others, and, during the past year, "Lysistrata"—the life-work of Miriam Hopkins. Professionally, that is.

"Now that you are here," I asked her, as one must ask stage personalities new to Hollywood, "I suppose you won't ever care to return to New York?"

The brilliant originality of the War Songs And Others Of Sixties

By J. FRED LISSFELT

IN MY SUMMER ramblings on the trail of old American music I have just come across some delicious rhymes and tunes of Civil War days. Beside two old muskets, a canteen, a belt and a sabre in a secure corner of the attic, lay this package of well worn music. Its titles alone brought a smile. The naivete of the cover designs is a sure mark of Victorian days. The tunes are sentimental beyond tears, and the moral of the fables within the verses is on a par dramatically with the good old plays "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "Ten Nights in a Barroom."

There are soldier songs, none of them in the grand spirit of "Tipperary" or "Pack Up Your Troubles," but all foretelling death and needy mothers. There are political songs as bitter as the spiked epithets of our own politicians.

Tragic Songs Too

There are tragic songs. "The Gypsy's Warning," for instance, from which have been arranged a dozen Gypsy "rosebuds," variations difficult and easy, a quickstep, a polka, a march, a mazurka, and quadrille among them. And most precious, a song for him whom the bears got on the stock exchange.

The frontispieces of this music are by no means uninteresting in an art sense, for many of them have the characteristics of excellent engraving and composition. "Just Before the Battle, Mother," however, has left nothing to the mother's imagination, for each vignette about the title suggests deepest tragedy to engage her waking hours, while her son is at the front.

Alone He Stands

Here he stands on lonely guard duty and you know the enemy sharpshooters are about to pick him off; here is the family about the dinner table and his chair is vacant; there is the dismal parlor and his lute is silent; here the general is calling for defense of the left, and we know the son has volunteered and will be heard from no more; and, at least, we have the grand review of the heroes, but the song's hero has gone to the soldier's heaven!

The "Old Union Wagon" displays a grand cartoon. Honest Abe is in the driver's seat and his generals are the horses. The main axles are the constitution of 1776 and the hubs are North and South. The Nation is riding and carrying the flag, but many have jumped overboard into the swamp and mud of Secession.

Stuck in Mire

The South wheel is stuck in the mire, and serpents are hissing all about. Union statesmen are using a steel bar, the Emancipation Proclamation, and the victories of 1863 as fulcrum to raise the wagon and help it over the hole in the road. Some who have fallen are cry-theater. It was a "first" for Detroit, too, the first time it ever had heard a "syncopated" orchestra. Fred, at this time, quit teasing the banjo and took up the baton as a director. Youth, pep, comedy and originality caught on with the public, with the result that the original one-week engagement stretched into eight.

On to Chicago, with Fred bearing a letter of introduction to the head of the Balaban & Katz theater chain!

"Never heard of you," said the man behind the desk at which the letter was presented. When Fred told him about Detroit, however, he became interested and said he would give him a try-out, adding—"but you'll probably be a flop."

"Cally, Here We Come"

The kind of a "flop" the Pennsylvanians were pleased the B. & K. management so much that an original two weeks was followed by 15 weeks in theaters in that circuit. After which A. J. Balaban, head of the company, suggested Waring and his boys to Sid Grauman, master showman of Los Angeles, as a good feature for the opening of his then new Metropolitan Theater. So, there they went, and what had begun with a one-night engagement at a university hop in Ann Arbor found a group of Penn State College students thousands of miles from dear old alma mater, and fairly immersed in a current that was to carry them much farther.

Old Man Destiny was at the helm.

The engagement in the Metropolitan extended first into weeks and then into months until six had passed into eternity. After Los Angeles came San Francisco—the fame of the boys was spreading. The payroll for the Detroit engagement was $700 a week. At the end of a year it was $1,500 a week. Now it is said to be $7,500, plus railroad fares.

Almost "Real Good"

Which is quite good (one might almost say "real good"), isn't it, for a bunch of boys who couldn't make glee club grade at Penn State?

According to B. A. McDevitt, press representative of the Pennsylvanians, they have played to a total of 20,000,000 persons. A statistician will tell you this is approximately one-sixth of the population of the United States. The estimate is based on an average audience of 2,000 persons, four audiences a day, at more than 10,000 performances since they started for that fateful J-Hop 'way back in 1922.

Their first Pittsburgh engagement was in the Schenley Theater some years ago, when their number totaled 11 members. Nine of them still remain in the orchestra, which is a round score in strength at present.

"Tyrone Forever"

The nine are Fred Waring, Fred Buck, Jr., Fred Campbell, William Townsend, Curley Cockerill and J. R. McClintock, all of Tyrone; Nelson Keller, of Wilkinsburg; James Gilliland, of Greensburg, and Arthur Horn, of Philadelphia. Tom Waring, now a radio entertainer in Cleveland, brother of Fred, and Ed Radel were original members of the band and are not now with it.

The Waring boys began their musical careers as members of a Boy Scouts' drum corps in Tyrone, of which Fred was fifer and leader. The family was musical, the mother being a vocalist, father playing the organ, and sister the violin. She taught Fred to play the fiddle, too, but Freddie adopted the banjo as his own means of "musical expression."

And Old Man Destiny did the rest.

Shows Here At Midnight

Midnight shows will be held in both the Warner and the Stanley this Sunday midnight.

Cab Calloway and his Cotton Club Band will be seen on the Stanley stage. Jazz Lips Richardson will be another feature. The Stanley screen will present "Hush Money," with Hardie Albright and Joan Bennett.

The midnight show in the Warner will feature the film, "Transgression." The cast features Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez and Paul Cavanagh.

query stunned her for a moment. But she recovered rapidly to impress with:

"I don't want to give up the stage. I hope to do a play in New York before long. Of course, pictures are lots of fun, and the opportunities for intense interest are tremendous. I mean the different roles one can play in the same time he would do one character in a play, and lots of other fascinating things in pictures. But as to giving up the stage——!"

War Songs And Others Of Sixties

ing for help to ride again. And among the verses:

The makers of our wagon
Were men of solid wit,
They made it out of "Charter Oak"
That would not rot or split.

There is the tuneful "Belle Mahone," and the lover sits upon her tomb and sings: "Wait for Me at Heaven's Gate, Sweet Belle Mahone." There is a song of a wounded boy, content to have given all for his country, willing to suffer upon the hard ground, his knapsack for pillow, willing to bleed to death, "If you'll only tell me truly, who will care for Mother now?" all guaranteed to have been made from the true story, as told by the attending surgeon.

Upbraids Her Lover

In "Fanny Grey, the Ballad of Real Life" Fanny upbraids her lover who has been absent so long, while she has sat ever hopeful with her "bonnet on from half past four. You know I hate to sit alone, unsettled where to go!" And Fanny swears she will not keep time like a watch.

There is the joyous "Prisoner's Release," with its bugle call from friendly ranks. Also a pretty benediction in "My Beautiful Dead" the companion to "Mother, Let the Angels In!" But there are dances, too, and what was then lacking in noise of the instruments was made up by stamping and shuffling feet during those irresistible quadrilles.

For Oily Birds

Prophetic of today, however, is the comic ballad "Oil on the Brain," and where the verse may be weak, the sentiment is strong.

There's various kinds of oil afloat,
Cod liver, castor, sweet,
Which tend to make a sick man well,
And set him on his feet.
But ours a curious feat perform
We just a well obtain
And set the people crazy with
Oil on the brain.
Stocks par
Stocks up,
Then on the wane;
Everybody's troubled with
Oil on the brain.

And yet the public says music is too materialistic in our day!

In Next "Vanities"

Helen Lynd, comedienne out of the first "Little Show," will be in the next "Vanities," Earl Carroll lets if be known. And, at the same time, he announced that Howard Deighton, formerly his stage manager, will be his new manager.

Jack Livingston, publisher of Livingston's International Casting Directory, has joined the producing ranks. In the fall he will present a comedy called "Good Morning, Caroline," by Suzanne Caubaye and Crane Wilbur.

And Sam Warshawsky, regularly a gatherer of fame for others, has joined the playwrights. "The Woman of Destiny," which he wrote, will be presented next month by the summer players at Provincetown.

as a Marine, and doing credit to that uniform, he appears in tropical surroundings, warbling manfully, while Reri, the South Sea beauty, performs native rhumbas and things.

It is not, perhaps, news that Miss Ruth Etting, the most picturesquely doleful of the torchesses, adds wistful color to the show in a characterization of a cigaret girl, who is evidently the daughter of the 10-cents-a-dance heroine. In a night club episode setting forth the evils of prohibition, Miss Etting is superb, when her arms receive the wounded body of Hal LeRoy, who has been wounded by racketeers in the Legs Diamond manner.

Aside from the elephants, with their fair burdens, I can imagine nothing more exciting in the Follies than Mr. LeRoy's dancing. When this gawky-looking Ohio youth vaulted over our horizons in the luckless "Gang's All Here," the experts of heel-and-toe proclaimed him as good as Jack Donahue.

Now these same experts will tell you that he is better than Donahue. Surprisingly enough, it is all true. The LeRoy boy's antics are indescribable. One fancies him addicted to fish suppers and white wine, which, according to the Elizabethans, "will make a man hop like a flea." When he and Miss Mayfair, also an infant by the clock, perform in double harness, something very like a miracle occurs. It must be seen to be evaluated.

Other items in Mr. Ziegfeld's glamorous circus include settings of rewarding beauty by Josef Urban; some droll remarks by Gene Buck and assistants, and, most of all, the chorus. It should be added that the primness that marked some of Mr. Ziegfeld's less notable exhibits, such as the unwept "Smiles," has vanished. A few clothes are worn by the young ladies, but not enough to be disfiguring. All in all, the Follies comes as a reassurance that the greatest producer of American revue is back in his old stride—a stride calling for seven-league boots that none of his rivals can come near filling.

but these men are truly penny wise and pound foolish. The wealthier families, who take their children to the mainland each year, see the new pictures, and are, therefore, not interested in the old films. The college crowd of happy boys and girls, who would be the best patrons, have all seen the talkie by the time the local theaters show them.

I talked with dozens of prominent Honolulu men and women who lamented that Hawaii was unable to get new pictures.

The one exception is Charlie Chaplin's latest film "City Lights." It was being shown while we were there.

The syndicate, I thought, found one place where they could not economize. I was wrong.

Surprising as it may sound, Charlie received a smaller percentage for "City Lights" in Hawaii than he received in any other country. He stoutly held out for his rights in the United States, England, Germany, etc., but the shrewd syndicate on the island was able to convince United Artists that it should be shown there cheaper.

Some day some outside interest will walk into Hawaii and start showing new pictures—when that day arrives the old films won't stand a chance of doing any business.

Rodeo Remains In Kennywood

Swimming, boating and all forms of outdoor diversion are found in Kennywood Park. The Compton-Hughes Wild West Rodeo, now in its third week, remains as the leading attraction. A small charge is made for the rodeo, which goes on twice a day at 3 and 8:45 p. m. The performance of the Four Haas Brothers, aerial gymnasts, continues as the free, outdoor act. Thomas O'Shea and his McKeesport Municipal Band will play two concerts this Sunday. The Kennywoodians play afternoon and evenings, except Sunday, for the dancers.

Faust Returning To Menke Boat

"Lady Audley's Secret," melodrama based on the popular novel, will open a week's engagement on Capt. Menke's Golden Rod showboat at Montrose, Monday night. An added feature will be the return of Vic Faust, the Swiss bell ringer, who was popular last year during an 18-week engagement on the Golden Rod. Since appearing here last season, Faust had a try at a Broadway revue. He will be seen nightly in a between-act specialty. The cast for "Lady Audley's Secret" will include Billy Florer, Blanche Gardiner, Harry Rollins, Robert Graham, Frances Golden and William Seldon.

RADIO NEWS and PROGRAMS

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Mark Time!

TIME IS THE ALL essential watch word at Pittsburgh broadcasting stations . . . the element of a split second sometimes occupies as much importance in a gram as the featured artists . . . precision is the word and a production man would feel as lonely as Robinson Crusoe without an accurate timepiece . . . We watched J. L. Kaufman, manager of WCAE, clocking the "Radio Trip" (featuring train effects) one night last week and—would you believe it—he had that train's progress mapped out on his manuscript almost to the turn of the wheel . . . one time the program was five seconds late and we thought sure they would eliminate a toot on the whistle to land in the station on time, but no—they threw more coal in the boilers and had that Empire Builder in the station two seconds ahead of schedule . . . it's fun to watch the grimaces of production men as they hold a watch in one hand and the manuscript in another and fervently pray that things will come out on time just as they did in rehearsal . . . Perhaps the most difficult of timing jobs on local stations is the reading of advertising copy on the Cavalier-Rosario Bourdon red network "break" Friday night at 8:30 . . . the network program is interrupted for two minutes during which Fred Webber must read a standby announcement that each week varies in length from 100 to 400 words . . . Fred must judge the time that it is taking Ford Bond to make the same announcement in two minutes in New York . . . most times he comes under the wire by a split second, a very creditable achievement.

Darrell V. Martin

The Cop's English

WHAT WITH COLLEGE professors, dramatists, authors taking more and more pains each day to criticize stations on "slip-ups" in programs, the production men are becoming more and more careful of what goes out on the air. There's the case of the University of Pittsburgh pedagogue who asked us last week to have the police station announcer refrain from saying "U LIKE in Utah" in spelling letter for letter the names of persons over WPDU. The correct phrase would be "U AS in Utah." One announcer followed the suggestion, a good one, but apparently the other announcer is not so particular about his grammatical construction.

The Right Atmosphere

ATMOSPHERE IS another important phase of program presentation. Claude Morris, production man at KDKA who gives us extremely pleasing continuities for the Rondoliers, Homey and Old Fashioned and Revelers, is almost meticulous in his choice of words, phrases and backgrounds for programs. Take for example today's play on KDKA at 6:10. It is a newspaper sketch, "The Scoop." Claude reasoned correctly that the play might be produced with a good deal more genuine atmosphere if he had the cast visit a newspaper plant. So it was our pleasure to show him. Violet McKinley and Ed Harvey through the Sun-Telegraph editorial and mechanical rooms for the environment he wishes to convey to listeners tonight. Claude, an exceptionally brilliant young fellow, deserves a round of applause for his practical psychology.

Theatrical producers have their eye on Tom Higgins, brother of Peter Higgins, and you may hear him soon on a downtown stage . . .

Paul J. Miller, whose "Skippy and Ray" sketches caused some comment on KDKA, may join the WLBW staff at Oil City. . . . WLBW is scheduled to change ownership . . .

Katzenjammer Kids in Radio Comic Series

Popeye the Sailor—Blow Me Down!—On Hearst Air Waves Soon.

By E. J. GOUGH
Director, Hearst Radio Service.

NEW YORK, July 18.—The Katzenjammer Kids are going on the air.

The oldest and most famous comic feature of the Hearst newspapers, which also appears in more than 500 other newspapers, in more than 10 languages, is to be featured by radio stations from coast to coast in weekly programs.

Production of a radio adaption presenting Hans and Fritz, the captain and mamma, the inspector and other characters of H. H. Knerr's comic will be begun this month, it was announced today by King Features Syndicate. At the same time "Popeye," adapted from the comic by E. C. Segar, appearing in the Hearst and other newspapers, will also join the list of King Features of the air.

Casting of the roles of Hans and Fritz, the world's best-known boys, in "The Katzenjammer Kids" is offering some difficulties to William Morris, Jr., of the William Morris Agency, which, with Cameo Broadcasting and Recording Studios, New York, is associated with King Features Syndicate in the production of King Features of the air.

These promise to be the most exacting roles even given to child radio actors, and extensive tryouts are being given the more than 300 prospects for the parts.

King Features of the Air are now program favorites on a group of stations from coast to coast, and Jiggs and Maggie of "Bringing Up Father" and Tillie and Mac of "Tillie the Toiler" have begun to vie seriously with Morton Downey, Jessica Dragonette, Rudy Vallee, the Shadow, Amos 'n' Andy, Lowell Thomas and Floyd Gibbons for premier places in the favor of air fans. Jiggs and Maggie are receiving large quantities of mail from fans who now accept them as real persons.

BIG GAME HUNTERS

THE AFRICAN big game hunters, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, are to be interviewed on their experiences over WCAE at 10:30 o'clock this Wednesday night.

Inside Story Of How News Scoops Occur

Daring Exploits in Getting Pictures to be Related On CBS Chain.

NEW YORK, July 18.—The inside story of how famous news-picture scoops were obtained will be told a nation-wide radio audience by Peter C. Stone, one of the editors of International News Photos, Inc., world's largest news-picture organization.

Mr. Stone will be the feature of Bill Schudt's "Going to Press" hour on Columbia Broadcasting System, Wednesday, July 22, from 6 to 6:15 eastern daylight time.

The talk will be broadcast in Pittsburgh over WJAS through special arrangements made with J. R. Crutchfield, manager of the Law and Finance Building. Realizing the importance of this feature, Mr. Crutchfield graciously relinquished 15 minutes of the Law and Finance Building radio time to permit the broadcast.

The development of speed in news-picture gathering and distribution since the day when William Randolph Hearst, then personally editing the San Francisco Examiner, astounded the newspaper world in 1897 by hiring a special train at a cost of thousands of dollars to bring photos of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight in Carson City, and beat opposition papers by many hours, will be traced by Mr. Stone. He will reveal some untold stories of individual exploits of news-cameramen in scooping the world and draw his own experiences in 10,000 news picture adventures.

Mr. Stone, a veteran news-picture man, has played a prominent part in developing International News Photos into a far-flung organization with 5,000 cameramen and correspondents, serving more than 2,000 newspapers and magazines published in 31 countries.

CHILD STAR

BABY ROSE MARIE, cute juvenile star, sings on Station KDKA next Friday night at 8 o'clock.

McNamee SPEAKING

Mr. McNamee

At last it's happened. They've started a "campaign" to reform all orchestras—beginning with the radio studios. A new kind of reformer wants to apply the scale of the prize ring to the musical scale, and nobody can tell if he's serious or not. "What's the idea of tiny little men playing big bass viols, and great 200-pounders tooting piccolos?" he asks. "The featherweights of the orchestra should play the flute," he says, "or even the piccolo or triangle. The lightweights should play violin, viola or clarinet; the middleweights could handle bassoons, cellos and small brass horns, and leave the big guys, the heavyweights, to juggle bass viols, tubas, tympani—and even pianos in case they have to be moved."

He claims the appearance of every orchestra would be greatly improved. The conductor, he points out, having only to wave a small stick, could be a very small man—about 96 pounds he specifies.

"The question asked by directors in future," he predicts, "will not be what do you play, but what do you weigh? The instrumentalist then will be assigned an instrument suited to his physical development.

It may be a good idea, but I question whether the disciples of the new system will ever make much headway where orchestras are hired for the sounds they produce and not for the appearance they make. Even in concert halls where the musicians can be seen, the audience is too critical to be fooled by mere appearance.

And as for radio, what difference does it make? They can't be seen anyway. At least, 'til television comes.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

Radio Proving Ground

NEW YORK, July 18.—Radio has become the proving-ground for music. From the moguls of jazz right up to the Stokowskis of symphony the microphone is being used for the try-outs of new musical moods and modes.

Louis Reid

It is radio that solves the problems of tempo, that gives the maestros a chance to experiment. It is radio that is responsible for the present moanin' low vogue of dance music. Bridegroom Vallee began it; others have followed in his wake. Today most of the dance band men have dimmed their brass, have muffled their horns, have slowed up the beat of the tom-tom, so persistent is the call for languorous jazz.

It is radio that permitted Maestro Leonard Joy to test the merits of dance music in which there is not a bleat of a horn, not a toot of a saxophone, not a tap of a drum. If such a master as MacDowell sounds best in an all-string orchestra it is reasonable to believe that Broadway's Walter Donaldson might sound best when given over exclusively to strings. Anyway, the boys would find out.

Nothing may seem of less importance than the newest tinkle that may be given to "Just a Gigolo," but the newest tinkle may be tomorrow's musical style. And upon tomorrow's musical style may hang a civilization. It is not well to take too lightly those who write—and wave a stick over—the nation's songs.

* * *

Evolution is going on in the musical world. And if jazz is still with us—and it shows no signs of departing—it is no longer in a general sense the blatant, wah-wah, oom-pah-pah jazz. It is jazz refined, graceful, sophisticated. Nowhere outside of certain spots in Harlem and Chicago can the old rowdy type of jazz be heard. In another five years it will be as dead as the Bowery, as a bare-knuckled prize fight.

Government Owns Ether

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Slowly but surely the federal government is establishing its claim to ownership of the ether, as against the counter claims of radio stations.

Practically since the beginning of radio the question "Who owns the ether?" has been in doubt, despite the admitted fact that it is the most important legal point in this new electric art. Nobody knows what the ether is, but it is known that there are invisible roadways in the sky over which all radio waves travel, and which have become of tremendous value.

Another legal ruling in favor of the theory that Uncle Sam owns the ether, in trust for the American people, has been written on the statute books. The question cannot be settled finally until it reaches the Supreme Court of the United States, and several attempts to have that tribunal pass on it have proved futile. It is the case of WMBB, which was refused the right to operate.

100 Watt Station Runs 25,000 Hours

California's "perpetual broadcaster"—and perhaps the country's—is KGFJ, Los Angeles, a little 100-watter which has been on the air 24 hours a day without interruption since October 1, 1928—a total to date of nearly 25,000 consecutive hours.

Automatic Radio Distress Signals

Automatic radio distress alarms for submarines and surface craft may be the next radio contribution to mankind. The Submarine Signal Company, of Boston, in asking authority from the Federal Radio Commission to conduct practical ether tests of apparatus it has under development, discloses that it is endeavoring to "perfect" such devices. Details, of course, are withheld, while the work is yet in the experimental stage.

Cyrilla Tuite To Sing Here

Cyrilla Adelaide Tuite, mezzo soprano, of 5752 Ellsworth avenue, whose voice has thrilled thousands who witnessed "My Maryland" as well as the sound picture, "Young Man of Manhattan," in which she sang the theme song, will be heard from KDKA Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock. "Don't Ever Leave Me" will be Miss Tuite's opening selection. Miss Tuite made her radio debut at KDKA in the spring of 1925.

Miss Tuite

Father, Daughter On 'Sacred Songs'

Will Rhodes, tenor, and his daughter, Sarah, will sing in the Sacred Song Concert Tuesday night at 7:30 over KDKA. Other artists will be Max Kroen, baritone, and Louise Clark, pianist. Selections include "In the Garden" and "The Light of the World Is Jesus."

WTMJ Files Court Appeal

WASHINGTON, July 18.—A new battle for existence faces the Radio Corporation of America, involving the 1,409 wave length licenses held by its four powerful operating subsidiaries, the National Broadcasting Company, RCA-Communications, Inc., Radio-marine Corporation of America and RCA-Victor Company.

With the appeal by Station WTMJ, of the Milwaukee Journal, from the Federal Radio Commission's recent decision absolving the Radio Corporation from the culpability prescribed by Section 13 of the Radio Act, many months of entangling litigation are in prospect. It is considered certain in informed radio circles, that the case is "earmarked" for the Supreme Court, and that the intermediate legal steps may require at least two years.

WTMJ, now a regional station with 1,000 watts night and 2,500 day power, is an applicant for the cleared channel occupied by Station WENR and WLS, both of Chicago. The former is operated by the NBC, and WLS has an operating arrangement with the network.

Broadcasters Set For 'Wave' Battle

Battle lines are forming for a radio fight to the finish next year in Madrid, with the broadcasters of the world pitted against aviation and ship interests.

More room in the ether for broadcasting, even at the expense of other services, is the issue. Broadcasting wants to move into the long waves in which aviation and ship stations now are ensconced, and these latter groups are preparing to offer stout resistance, on the ground that their services involve safety of life, whereas broadcasting has to do only with entertainment and uplift.

DX Popular In Mid-West

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 18.—Who says DX-ing is passe? Though this is the summer season of poor distance reception, next winter will see the devotees of the Grand Order of Dial Twisters more active than ever at their sport of "fishing" for far-away stations, in the opinion of a local DX Club.

Even this summer there is plenty of evidence of interest in DX-ing, for the numerous trans-oceanic broadcasts being offered by the chains really represent a revival of interest among radio fans in the distance-hunting sport. Moreover, the appearance on the market of more short wave broadcast receivers is eloquent evidence of interest in DX-ing.

It is the club's profound conviction that the game of long distance reception will always be popular with a large proportion of set owners. There are still many stations which put on special late-hour programs for the pleasure of those who hunt for distance.

House Where Keats Wrote Great Odes Becomes a Shrine

By GEORGE SEIBEL

On the hillcrests north of London lies the suburb of Hampstead, a village embowered in green when John Keats, over 100 years ago, wrote his "Ode to a Nightingale" in the garden of the house which was dedicated as a national literary shrine last week by Lord Crewe.

George Seibel

The world has two Keats shrines—the other one being in Rome, where the poet died in an old house at the foot of the Spanish Stairs and is buried near the Pyramid of Caius Cestius.

Perhaps no other poet except poor Chatterton, the "marvelous boy," had so sad a life and so glorious an ascension to fame. Today the three great English poets are Shakespeare, Milton and Keats. When he died he asked his friend Severn to inscribe on his tombstone the words: "Here lies one whose name was writ in water."

Found Love and Death

The house in Hampstead was the home of Keats from 1818 to 1820. Here he fell in love with gay Fanny Brawne, to whom he wrote letters of frenzied passion as if he had dipped his pen into his life's blood. Here he had the chill and hemorrhage that told him he was doomed to die of consumption, which had already killed his brother, Tom.

The house was originally a double house, built by Charles Armitage Brown, a Scotchman, who had a theory about Shakespeare sonnets. Bacon hadn't been heard of, or Brown might have worked him into the theory. But Brown was a good friend of the young poet's and took him on a 700-mile walking tour of Scotland, and later took him into his house after Tom had died.

In the other half of the house lived Charles Wentworth Dilke, an art writer. After he moved the Brawnes took the place. Keats in a letter described Fanny as "ignorant and monstrous in her behavior," but in a few weeks he was her utter slave. A lock of her hair is among the treasures of this museum.

Lyre of Poet's Hair

There is also a lock of the poet's hair, cut from his head after his death. His friend Severn had intended to have it made into a brooch for Fanny—"in the form of my Greek lyre, and make the strings of poor Keats's hair"—but couldn't find any workman equal to the job.

Leigh Hunt's desk is there, and a framed mss. of a poem to Keats written by Thomas Hardy at 80, and Keats's own folio of Shakespeare showing "Troilus and Cressida," his favorite play, and the garnet engagement ring Keats gave to his Fanny.

There are scores of old prints and newer etchings—one of them the surgery at Edmonton drawn by the artist Herbert Cutner, who sold three of the pictures and presented a fourth to me. In that surgery Keats compounded drugs like Ibsen, also an apothecary's apprentice.

Where Keats Wrote

Keats's own sitting room has been restored as nearly as possible to the condition in which he left it. His bookshelves are still there; the Chandos portrait of Shakespeare hangs on the wall exactly where it is shown in a portrait of Keats painted by Severn. The French windows would have made it possible for Keats to step right out into the garden where he wrote the "Ode to a Nightingale."

Brown has left an account of how that great poem came to be written:

"In the spring of 1819 a nightingale had built her nest near by my house. Keats felt a tranquil and continual joy in her song; and one morning he took his chair from the breakfast table to a grass plot under a plum tree, where he sat for two or three hours. When he came into the house I perceived that he had some scraps of paper in his hand, and these he was quietly thrusting behind some books. On inquiry, I found these scraps, four or five in number, contained his poetic feeling on the song of our nightingale."

Three Centuries Old

Brown probably meant the spreading mulberry tree which still casts a grateful shade after having flourished 300 years.

The very rich collection of Keats' relics, including his own copy of "Endymion" and all the letters he wrote to Dilke, has now been brought to this museum shrine from the library in Finchley road where they were kept for safety. Until now the house had been open only three days a week, and its treasures were not guarded very carefully. Like the Shakespeare birthplace, Scott's Abbotsford, the homes of Carlyle and Dickens, the Burns' cottage and other shrines of the great, Wentworth Place after this will be the mecca of many thousands every year.

Amy Lowell's Part

It is gratifying to know that American reverence for the poet had a great share in the preservation of this his last English home. It was advertised as a "building site" in 1920. A committee was formed to rescue and restore it. The sum of £4,650 was raised for that purpose, and Amy Lowell raised £2,534 of this amount in America. She was the poet's most ardent American devotee.

When the house was first dedicated in 1925, Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch delivered the inaugural address. Lord Crewe presided over the ceremonies on July 16, which insure the permanency and dignity of the lovely rural manse where Keats, coughing blood, told his friend Brown:

"I know that drop of blood is my death warrant. I must die!"

The most poetical of poets, the most disconsolate of lovers, his fame grows brighter every year. "He is with Shakespeare," exclaimed Matthew Arnold.

MUNICH ON A BIG CANVAS

Among modern German authors who are doing in fiction what Herr Kaulbach did in his pictures, none can handle his mobs more masterfully than Lion Feuchtwanger. None can give his history a more epic rhythm, as he showed in the great romances based on the life of Jew Suess and the Ugly Duchess. His latest work, "Success" (published by Viking), paints life in Bavaria after the war and after the abortive Soviet. We meet with figures that might be vociferous Hitler and half a dozen other actual personalities—but the author assures us that none is lifted straight from life.

His hero, sent to prison through the plotting of enemies who do not like his taste in art—which is as important in Munich as the home brew—spends most of the book behind the bars being morally regenerated or degenerated. His heroine, who reads character from handwriting, spends most of her time trying to secure liberty for her lover.

But these people are only two in the mob of hundreds. Feuchtwanger's Munich is a human ant-hill, honeycombed by upstart reformers, cheap patriots, fanatics of many isms, and interesting infusoria of all species. Nobody else could write such a novel, and nobody would read it if it were written by anybody else. But it lives and moves and carries you with it. Great is Feuchtwanger and great is his "Erfolg."

EARLY TALES BY CURWOOD

James Oliver Curwood's "Falkner of the Inland Seas" (published by Bobbs-Merrill) is made up of narratives of the Great Lakes and the dauntless men who manned the boats. The hero, Jim, was found beside the dead body of a man and taken to an orphanage by Capt. Falkner. The call of the sea is in his blood, but Richard Brown takes him from a pirate ship and sends him to school.

"Captain Kidd of the Underground" is a story about Ah Ho, a Chinese girl spirited away. "The Object Lesson" is a thrilling story of a wreck, written by Falkner, who has become a newspaper correspondent in one of the Great Lake cities. This book of Curwood's tales will preserve much of the history of these inland waters.

ESSAYS AND A YEAR BOOK

Basil W. Miller has written a series of inspirational essays, "The Gold Under the Grass" (published by Cokesbury), which teach lessons from lives of the great—mostly lessons of courage and patience.

"The Year Book of the Pennsylvania Society" for 1930, edited by Robert J. Spence, is graced with the portrait and autograph of Henry Ford, who was guest of honor at the farewell luncheon in the Waldorf-Astoria. The address by President C. M. Schwab tells a touching episode of his previous visit to Detroit. "Charlie," said Ford, "if you don't call me Henry in the future I am not going to talk to you any more." The calamity has been averted.

THIS 'WHO'S WHO' FOR MUSICIANS

Pierre Key's "Musical Who's Who" (published by Pierre V. R. Key), like similar publications, is a collection of biographical data about our contemporary musicians. Mr. Key, who is editor of Musical Digest, turned his material over to Irene E. Haynes for compilation and arrangement, and a good job has been made. This is a handy book for reference and will be found quite useful for those who wish to know about our musical artists, conductors and impressarios, ranging from Abbas, Philip, to Zuro, Josiah.

DAMP HUMOR AIMED AT DRYS

Those who cannot enjoy a drink may enjoy a laugh by reading "The Saloon in the Home" (published by Coward-McCann). It is a garland of temperance gems, compiled by Ridgely Hunt and George S. Chappell, with Hogarthian pictures by John Held, Jr. The suspicion is justified that this book is damp humor aimed at the drys.

KOCH-WESER ON GERMANY

Erich Koch-Weser, leader of the Democratic party in the old Reichstag, writes illuminatively of "Germany in the Post-War World" (published by Dorrance), but the wisest and most benign statesman would be at a loss to explain or prophesy.

Examples of Laces Shown in Paintings In Museum Exhibit

By PENELOPE REDD

Summertime in art is akin to the holidays one had leisure to visit a friendly attic of rainy days to muse over treasures.

Penelope Redd

The business of winter always prevents more than a passing glance at the collection of old lace in Carnegie Museum which is lent by Mrs. Henry R. Rea.

Women from the Sixteenth Century on have always liked a bit of lace whether their means allowed punto in aria—threads spun in air—or the nondescript product of the amateur's crochet needle.

In Mrs. Rea's collection are examples of all the laces celebrated in the portraits of history's vivid personages.

In style, the Point de Venise, which is more closely affiliated with the linen drawn-work from which lace had its genesis, is heavier than the French laces.

Indeed, France quickly adapted the Italian patterns to their own temperament, thus creating at Alencon, a less formal and more graceful lace.

The Venetian lace is usually featured by the proximity of the elements of the pattern without any intervening ground work. While the Alencon lace is developed against a background of mesh providing an effective foil for the naturalistic decorative motifs.

Copied From Alencon

The "Spanish Blond" and black Chantilly types found in Mrs. Rea's collection are again variations of French designs. Originating in France for export to Spain, these laces were usually confined to bold, discursive floral patterns.

The two kinds of lace, needlepoint and pillow lace vary in their methods.

Needlepoint is constructed on a skeleton thread pattern; while in pillow lace, pins to guide the placing of the threads are thrust into the pillow that the bobbins may be used to manipulate the thread into the designated pattern.

Teng's Workshop

Ascending to the workshop of Teng Kwei in the Cathedral of Learning, one perceived the sound training of the Fogg Museum of Art in Cambridge, Mass., functioning with precision.

Mr. Teng is preparing a painted ceiling, the decorative climax of the Chinese Room for the University of Pittsburgh, to withstand our chemical laden atmosphere.

Lacquer and wax will protect the 40 panels of the coffered ceiling which are being painted in gesso, a medium now rarely used. The chief proponents of its use were the primitive Italian painters.

Gesso is a hybrid of relief sculpture and painting with plaster of Paris employed as the distinctive ingredient.

The gesso work involes a procedure that suggests a mediaeval incantation.

A stove with an array of kettles, egg whites, red earth from Armenia, gold leaf, and infinite patience are of equal importance with the ability to design.

GOLD RUSH IN COLORADO

"The Golden Chimney" (published by Little-Brown), C. M. Sublette's story of the Colorado gold rush, is a colorful book. The "Chimney," an ore vein of surpassing richness running straight down into the hidden heart of the earth, raises Marcellus Bassett "from the obscurity of his blacksmith shop into the bright light of public life." The life of Bassett is passionate and intense and dramatically told.

Providence Kept Busy

Victor Vecki's "Threatening Shadows" (published by Stratford) is the story of a convent-bred girl, whose loyalty to religion makes her give up happiness. Victoria was born in Louisiana; her mother the daughter of an Indian Chief, her father a French Canadian. Both parents died, and so she was sent to the convent. Henry Atterson convinced the Prior that he was a good man, and he marries Victoria, but he was so cruel she had to leave him.

Going to the office of Dr. Ivan Nemir, Victoria was told that she would soon be well again. Dr. Nemir was very kind, but when she goes back to her confessor, she is told she must not see Nemir again, because she has no divorce and he, too, had been married.

Dr. Nemir is threatened with blindness, and Victoria is told he will actually lose his eyesight. She returns to him, and is freed from her husband by death. It's the sort of sentimentalized tale that makes you rush off to read "Candide" all over again.

GIRL WORKS TOO HARD

Kathleen Shepard's "Working Girl" (published by Mohawk) gives a vivid picture of a girl who chose a career. Kathleen, brought up in a sheltered home and engaged to Gilbert, insists on working in a newspaper office. Her work consists in interviewing—she even writes up Barry Deane, the "perfect lover." The story is modern and flippant—what is called "strong"—and not exactly necessary to a complete education.

OAKMONT GARDEN SCENE OF CHARMING JULY WEDDING

Miss Seaver Becomes Bride Of Dr. Ritter

By PATRICIA PITT

Just when one decides that all the weddings are over until fall brings brides-to-be back to town, someone is married! Just to prove my point, last night, three weeks after the June bridal season came to a glorious end, there was a charming wedding ceremony with a garden setting.

The bride was Virginia Seaver, daughter of the Kenneth Seavers, of "Woodland Lodge," Oakmont, who became the bride of Dr. Richard Clinton Ritter, son of the D. R. Ritters, of Ebensburg, at 7 o'clock.

The blooming garden of the home was the scene of the marriage, performed by the Rev. Dr. Stuart Nye Hutchinson, assisted by the Rev. Dr. W. Frank Reber.

Garden flowers entwined in lattice work at one end of the garden made the background for the ceremony. Large urns of garden flowers formed a path to the prie dieu. And for the dinner and reception following the wedding, there were flower-decked small tables in the garden and in the home.

All in white lace was the bride, given in marriage by her father. Her gown of white had narrow, ruffled capelets of the lace at the shoulder, and the veil of lace had a long train. She wore white lace mitts and carried white bouvardia and lilies of the valley.

Pittsburghers Entertain at Watch Hill

Back from a cruise on board their new yacht, the Simon T. Pattersons, their daughter, Nancy, and her young guest, Janet Lyon, and the Patterson's son, George Reese Patterson, are at the Ocean House, Watch Hill, R. I., a resort long popular with Pittsburgh society.

Nancy entertained Wednesday at the Misquamicut Golf Club in honor of her house guest, Janet. Marcelle and Sally Hammond, of Westerly, R. I., were guests, too.

Fifty society fliers with their fleet of 14 airplanes, making up the cruise of the Aviation Country Club of America on its first trip, landed on the sandy beach back of the William S. Moorhead cottage at Watch Hill, recently.

Mrs. Moorhead played in the Shenecesset Golf Club national woman's championship matches during the past week at the course at Eastern Point, N. J.

Miss Frances C. Griscom, of Haverford, entertained all the entrants at a dinner and bridge at Ocean Mound, her Watch Hill place.

The Harvey Childs III have arrived at Watch Hill to be the week-end guests of the Jerome Smiths, and Mrs. William Reed Thompson will arrive in August. Mrs. William B. Trainer is the guest of Mrs. Burrows Sloan, of Ardmore, at her Watch Hill place.

Jack Trainer, young summer resident of Watch Hill, who's at the Ocean House, has left for a few days in Pittsburgh. With him is Raynham Townsend Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. Raynham Townsend, who are spending the summer at Everbreeze.

Club Programs Show Wide Change Since Tepid Eighties

World Topics To Be Studied By Brighton

By MRS. C. M. BREGG
Club Editor.

Looking over a list of study topics chosen by local women's clubs for next season, one is impressed by the great distance club programs have come since those half-century-ago days when a woman read a lengthy paper on whether it was better to be good than to be beautiful—and then fainted.

Maybe you think this is merely a piece of facetious exaggeration. But as a matter of fact it is down in the minutes of a well-known eastern club. However, that is all aside from what we started out to talk of—club study topics.

Russia Topic

"Russia" is a great favorite this season, some clubs devoting an entire year to it and others alternating study of the country with other topics. "Our United States" is a perennial choice and for the last few years "International Relations" has been good for study by several groups. "What's New" or differently phrased captions to the same effect afford wide scope for the program makers.

This idea is now being carried out for a prominent South Hills club whose year book is always a delight because of its originality and whose season can be depended upon to bring out something unusual. Another program committee is basing its season on the General Federation's plan of work, which should make an interesting year for those women.

Brighton Program

From one of the weightiest and most impressive titles possible — "World Problems" — the Brighton Women's Club has managed to formulate a season's programs of wide appeal and deep interest. Mrs. A. M. Meckelnburg's year in the presidential chair will start off on October 1 with a recounting of vacation experiences by all the members and a talk on "Our Club Relations," by Miss Mary P. Lang. After that begins the real study with papers on "Effects of the Modern Map of Europe," "Mussolini and Fascism," "Mustapha Kemal," "Karl Marx and Communism," "Soviet Five-Year Plan" and five-minute papers on several appropos subjects.

On subsequent meeting days, the members will hear discussed "Education in India," "Gandhi and Lord Irwin," "Eurasian Womanhood," "Our Island Possessions," "Pioneers in Aviation," and phases of progress in the air, "The Disarmament Conference," "The Child Welfare Commission" and "Noted Modern Women." The programs, as outlined, also include many book reviews.

Special Events

Varying the regular study meetings will be a visit to the international art exhibit, the annual sale for the blind, the Christmas celebration at which Miss Eleanor G. Lang will tell of her own Christmas in China; visits to Juvenile, County and Federal courts and the annual business meeting.

Serving under Mrs. Meckelnburg as president are Miss Gertrude McCargo, vice president; Mrs. E. V. Weller, recording secretary; Mrs. J. T. Taylor, corresponding secretary, and Miss Anna B. Dietrich, treasurer. Miss Mary P. Lang is honorary president.

Magazine Council Group Heads Named

Committee chairmen have been appointed by Mrs. O. B. Hughes, new president of the National Better Magazines Council, who presided at her first regular session Tuesday morning. The committee heads are: Education, Miss Waller Bullock; reading, Mrs. R. S. Quick; hospitality, Mrs. J. F. McCrory. Mrs. Donald Miller was named historian.

Events Talks To Be Given At Prytaneum

Mrs. Hugh Nevin, Mrs. J. E. Campbell and Mrs. John Fisher have prepared the program of miscellaneous topics which is compiled in the newly distributed year books of the Prytaneum Study Club of Homestead.

An especially live feature will be the current events talks which the women will give at each meeting, each member having been assigned a certain topic for the entire season. For instance, one woman will talk on what is happening in Pennsylvania at every meeting, another will bring the latest news of research work, another of child welfare and the other topics assigned are Palestine, Russia, national affairs, United States possessions, business of today, prohibition, Canada, Great Britain, royalty, science and invention, books, education, the United States and miscellaneous and local items.

The papers to be given at the various meetings include such subjects as "Musical Appreciation," "The Predominance of Women in Fiction," "Australia," "Wall Street and Speculation," "The Challenge of Modern American Literature," "The Rubber Industry," "Precious Jewels," "Latin-America's Progress," "Joseph C. Lincoln," "Religion in a Changing World," "National and International Relations," "Blue Laws," "The Physical Basis of Personality," "Thomas Jefferson," "Public Conscience," "The Changing Home," "The Reconstruction of Washington" and "Power."

Bridge Held By Alumnae Of St. Xavier

Members of St. Xavier's Academy Alumnae Association entertained with an exquisitely appointed bridge luncheon on Saturday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. Earl E. Tebbets, Mt. Lebanon boulevard. Luncheon was served in the spacious living room and dining room, each table having for a centerpiece a pale green vase of coreopsis.

Mrs. Tebbets' aides were Mrs. Paul A. McCrory, Mrs. William Hamilton Young, Miss Marie A. Herman, Miss Mary A. Marlier, Miss Katherine Ryan.

Pittsburgh Women Will Join Caravan

Members of the Pittsburgh branch of the International League for Peace and Freedom will attach themselves at various times to the peace caravan which the state branch is sending into this part of the state this week.

A rearranged schedule of engagements brings the motor caravan to Ford City today with Morris Storer, son of Mrs. Norman W. Storer, president of the Pittsburgh branch, as the speaker. Afternoon and evening meetings will be held tomorrow at the Manchester Settlement and Duquesne University and on Tuesday the party will go to Washington for an afternoon meeting under the supervision of Mrs. Stephen M. Byers, State Federation chairman of American citizenship.

The campus of Slippery Rock State Normal School will be the scene of a meeting on Wednesday morning and that evening a mass meeting will be held in New Castle. Local ministers will take part in the peace day meeting at the Tarentum camp meeting grounds on Friday and from there the caravan will move on to Johnstown.

INCIDENTALLY—

More than $100 was contributed last season at the birthday table which featured each monthly meeting of the Congress department of education. Each woman whose birthday came during the month contributed her age in pennies. The money, of course, went to the scholarship work of the department.

Mrs. D. W. Haydock, octogenarian member of the department, while unable to get out for the meetings on account of ill health, served as a most efficient chairman of telephone for the season. She made more than 600 calls.

The sewing committee of the Congress is one of the busiest groups, and if you don't believe it just listen to this—23 dozen towels, 16 table covers, seven pairs of curtains, two cretonne window drapes and 16 chair backs hemmed; six pairs of window drapes remodeled, 15 dozen card table covers mended and three dozen table cloths mended and remodeled.

Triumph Chapter To Hold Benefit

Miss Elizabeth Mau is general chairman, as well as hostess, for the benefit garden party which Triumph Chapter No. 136, Order of the Eastern Star, will have on Wednesday at her home in Glenshaw. Mrs. Rose S. Rickey, worthy matron, and a large committee of members are assisting the hostess-chairman. Cards, bingo, a fish pond, games, a candy sale and refreshments will feature the affair.

Chautauqua Events Get High Praise.

Word concerning the fine programs of the Chautauqua Woman's Club is being sent back home by the Pittsburgh members of the organization. Of especial interest is the talk which Miss Ruth Pennybacker, daughter of Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, president of the club, is to give on one of August's programs prepared by Mrs. Thomas A. Edison.

Miss Pennybacker, who was secretary to Lady Astor when she made her lecture tour of this country, also will speak before the Chautauqua Institution. She recently has been gathering information on the lives of well known authors of the Southwest and her talk will be on "Literature Discovers the Southwest."

Auxiliary and 17th Infantry to Meet

Members of the Ladies' Auxiliary and the wives and mothers of Pittsburgh Garrison No. 1, Society of the 17th United States Infantry, have been invited to attend a special meeting of the organization today in North Side City Hall. The meeting has been called to arrange for the society's participation in the fifth annual reunion to be held in Columbus, July 26-29.

New Congress Unit Head on Charter List

Mrs. Daniel N. Bulford, the newly-elected chairman of the educational department at the Congress of Clubs, is a charter member of the Congress and was vice chairman of the first educational committee before the committee became a department. For nine years Mrs. Bulford has been active on the permanent scholarship loan committee which had its inception in the educational committee.

Mrs. Bulford has also been interested in the Child Health Council, the Pittsburgh District Dairy Council and Women's Auxiliary to the Allegheny County Medical Society. She is a former president of the Tourists' Club and the Allegheny Branch of the Needlework Guild. Her most important work, however, has been done in Parent-Teacher circles. She was active in founding the Allegheny County Parent-Teacher Association which she headed for six years. She then became vice president of the Pennsylvania Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations, an office which brought her in contact with the associations in 10 counties of Western Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Hugh Patton, radio chairman, has asked Dr. John A. Hollinger, of the Board of Education, to speak during the Congress hour over KDKA on Tuesday at 2:30 o'clock. Dr. Hollinger, who is director of nature study in the city schools, has chosen for his subject "Over Pennsylvania Highways."

Members of the Congress Choral are keeping in touch with each other this summer by means of a series of get-together bridge luncheons at the clubhouse. One scheduled for Wednesday of this week is the third in the summer series.

On August 11 the board of directors will give another bridge breakfast, the first of which proved so popular and enjoyable last Wednesday. Fifty-six tables were in play at last week's affair, which was under the chairmanship of Mrs. Thomas Otto.

Sloan Club Awards 12 Scholarships

Twelve scholarships ranging from $10 a month to $300 a year have been awarded for next year by the Sarah Sloan Scholarship Club. One of these is an aviation scholarship, thought to be the first of its kind in Pittsburgh. The other awards go to five students at the University of Pittsburgh, two at Carnegie Tech, one at Pennsylvania College for Women, Muskingum, Penn State and to a Pittsburgh student at the University of Georgia.

A series of summer bridge luncheons is the means by which the executive board members are raising their scholarship fund. Mrs. C. A. Brooks and Mrs. Joseph B. Drake have already entertained and for the next affair Mrs. D. Edwin Miller, first vice president and publicity chairman, will be hostess at her home in Glen Arden drive, on Friday.

Home Club Holds Bridge Luncheon

Sponsored by the ways and means committee of which Mrs. J. A. Gesler is chairman, the Bellevue Home and Hospital Club held the first summer affair in its history. The event was a benefit bridge luncheon at the Food Craft Shop, Fifth avenue, on Tuesday.

Plants Exchanged By Garden Club

An exchange of plants and an exhibit of unusual specimens marked Monday's meeting of the Rockledge Garden Club, at which Mrs. Sydney Chalfant, of William Penn highway, was hostess.

the back. She carried an arm bouquet of summer flowers. And her lace mitts matched her gown, I almost forgot to mention.

Another sister, Mary Seaver, who was maid of honor, wore a pale pink lace gown in similar style with mitts to match, and carried garden flowers.

Gowns Similar

The bridesmaids wore similar gowns in different colors with lace mitts to match their frocks, and carried garden flowers.

Katherine MacCloskey and Mary Louise Succop were in seafoam green lace, and Mrs. Ernest M. Johnston, of Ebensburg, sister of the bridegroom, and Kathryn Watkins wore cornflower yellow.

James Verner was best man, and Ernest M. Johnston, of Ebensburg; A. Evans Kephart, of Germantown; Dr. F. F. Schade, of Aspinwall; Dr. R. D. Donaldson, Dr. N. K. Hammond and H. M. Strouss were ushers.

In Receiving Line

Receiving with the bridal party were the parents of the bride and bridegroom. The mother of the bride chose orchid lace and a corsage of white orchids, and the mother of the bridegroom, black chiffon and a corsage of lavender orchids.

Dr. Ritter and his bride will spend their honeymoon at the Cavalier Hotel, Virginia Beach.

She went to Bradford Academy, near Boston, and is a graduate of the Pennsylvania College for Women. Dr. Ritter went to Washington and Jefferson and is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh Medical School.

SOCIALITES NO. LII

Drawn From Life by William R. Shulgold.

MR. SHULGOLD has brought out the aesthetic qualities in this drawing of appealing Eloise Dorrance, young daughter of the Harold J. Dorrances, of South Negley avenue. Eloise has long, golden hair and blue eyes, is tall and slender and gave a charming personification of "Summer" in a recent garden pageant at the home of Mrs. William Thaw, Jr.

Eloise is a most versatile young lady, with a great deal of executive ability. She is interested in athletics. She plays tennis often at Foxburg, at the Pittsburgh Country Club and Fox Chapel, and also plays an excellent game of golf. Of course, she swims, rides and does innumerable things of interest to the younger set.

She attended the Winchester School and finished at Ashely Hall, Charleston, S. C. She's still undecided as to whether she will go abroad or to college this fall. The Dorrances plan to present their young daughter in about two years. —PATRICIA PITT.

Miss Gordon Honored at Club Luches

Miss Gertrude Gordon, of New York, former Pittsburgh newspaper woman and a member of the Women's Press Club, the League of American Pen Women, the Business and Professional Women's Club and the Scribblers, spent last week in Pittsburgh as the guest of Miss Antoinette Moran, of Chislett street. On Monday Miss Gordon was guest of honor at a luncheon given in the Woman's City Club by the Women's Press Club and on Tuesday she was entertained at luncheon in McCreery's by the Pittsburgh Business and Professional Women's Club. She spoke informally on both occasions.

Miss Gordon, who is private secretary to Mrs. Ambrose Nevin Diehl, also a member of the Press Club, brought the news that Mrs. Diehl recently was appointed chairman of motion pictures in the National Council of Women. She occupies the same office in the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Wilkinsburg Girl to Wed Eastern Man

Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Hitzfeldt, of Center street, Wilkinsburg, have made known the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Helen Cecelia McLaughlin, to James Welton Dice, of Forrest Hills, L. I. The announcement was made at a bridge given by Mr. and Mrs. Hitzfeldt.

Mr. Dice is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Dice, of Washington Court House, O.

Miss McLaughlin attended Indiana State Teachers' College and has recently returned from a trip abroad. Her fiance is a graduate of Ohio State University. An early fall wedding will terminate the engagement.

DISCUSS PEACE CARAVAN PLANS

Mrs. Norman W. Storer — Mrs. Joseph Schutzman — Miss Natalie Jones — Miss Louise Fentress

COULD A MORE peaceful place than this corner in Mrs. Storer's garden be chosen in which to discuss local plans for the peace caravan which the state branch of the Women's International League for Peace is sending into this part of the state this week? Mrs. Schutzman is a member of the state board, Miss Jones belongs to the local branch and Miss Fentress was Mrs. Storer's house guest.

Lillian Kerr Selects Her Bridal Party

Miss Lillian Maura Kerr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kerr, of McNeily avenue, has chosen her bridal party. She will marry George Lewis Cotter, of Wilmerding and St. Louis, on August 1, at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon, in the Dormont Presbyterian Church. The Rev. U. Franklin Smiley, pastor, will officiate.

Miss Virginia Kerr will be her sister's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Mrs. Richard Nash and Mrs. Andrew Barclay.

Frank Cotter, of Detroit, will serve as his brother's best man, and the ushers will include De Witt Shelley, of East McKeesport; U. A. Whittaker, of Canton, O.; William M. McNeill, of Youngstown, and Henry Conde, of Wilmerding.

The reception will be given in the Kerr home, after which Mr. Cotter and his bride will leave for their wedding trip. They will reside in South Braddock avenue.

Miss Kerr is a graduate of Indiana State Teachers' College, and her fiance, of the University of Michigan.

N. Brighton Girl Weds This Week

Wednesday is the day chosen by Miss Dorothy D. Merriman, daughter of Mrs. Bird Merriman, of New Brighton, for her marriage to Richard A. McConnel, of Ambridge, son of Judge and Mrs. William A. McConnel, of Beaver.

The wedding will take place in the First Presbyterian Church, New Brighton, with the Rev. Robert S. Axtell, pastor, officiating.

The maid of honor will be Miss Josephine Beebe, of Pittsburgh, and the bridesmaids will include Miss Ellame Merrick, of New Brighton; Mrs. Karl W. Stein, of Cleveland; Miss Inez P. Duncan and Mrs. Joy Y. McCandless, of Patterson Heights. Small Ruth Roberts McConnel, of Pittsburgh, will be flower girl.

West End Girl Weds In Evening

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Deuschle, of Neidle street, West End, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Evelyn Deuschle, to William Arthur Slautterback, of Dormont, which took place Wednesday evening in the Deuschle home.

There were no attendants. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white taffeta, and carried white rosebuds and lilies of the valley. There was a reception after the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Slautterback will be at home in Connecticut avenue, Dormont, after a honeymoon in Atlantic City and New York.

Miss Galmish Engaged to J. V. Alexick

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Galmish, of Erie, have made known the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Louise Ann Galmish, of Greensburg, and John V. Alexick, of Greensburg and Latrobe, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Alexick, of Latrobe. A late summer wedding is planned.

Miss Galmish is a graduate of Villa Marie Academy and Edinboro State Teachers' College, and taught art during the past winter in the South Greensburgh Junior High School.

Her fiance attended the New Mexico School of Mines and Engineering, University of Pittsburgh and Indiana State Teachers' College. He is a mathematics instructor in the South Greensburg Junior High School and director of athletics.

Cleo Smith Sets Aug. 1 For Wedding

Miss Cleo B. Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Smith, of Brentwood, has chosen August 1 as the date for her marriage to Dr. George Van Pidball, of Houston, Pa., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Pidball, of South Brownsville, Pa.

The ceremony will take place in the Church of the Redeemer, Brownsville road, after which there will be a wedding breakfast and reception in the Smith home. Dr. Pidball and his bride will reside in Houston after the wedding.

Girls of Church Will Give Supper

A supper at the Food Craft Shop with cards following has been arranged by the Girls' Society of St. Wenceslaus Church for tomorrow evening. Miss Marie Surman has charge of tickets and is being assisted by Miss Anna Bastyr, Miss Anna and Miss Agnes Opatrny, Miss Betty Luther and Miss Dorothy Kufner.

Rachel B. Sharp Weds in Church

Miss Rachel Bittner Sharp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sharp, of Swissvale, became the bride of Richard Jank, Jr., of Worcester, Mass., last evening in the Christian Church. Mr. and Mrs. Jank left for an eastern trip and upon their return will reside in Swissvale.

A formal dinner party was given recently in honor of the bride by Miss Lee Q. Perelstine at the Willows.

Club Women Entertain in N. England

Mrs. George H. Wilson, honoraray member of the Tuesday Musical Club, and her daughter, Mrs. Edward B. Lee, a past president of the organization, are entertaining Mrs. Harvey Fouse at Mrs. Wilson's home in Kingston, Mass. Mrs. Fouse is president of the Woman's Alliance of the First Unitarian Church, of which both her hostesses are members. Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Fouse and Mrs. Henry E. Cole expect to attend the summer Alliance meetings at Isle of Shoals and later in the season Mrs. Lee will be Mrs. Cole's house guest at her summer home in Bar Harbor.

Members of the First Church Alliance will be entertained at "Sky-High," Mrs. Roswell Johnson's summer home, near Bardona, on Wednesday.

West End Girl Becomes Bride Of Minister

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Cleavenger, of Steuben street, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Julia Cleavenger, to the Rev. Dwight Guthrie, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Guthrie, of Apollo. The marriage was solemnized at 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon in the West End Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. William A. McRoberts officiating, assisted by the Rev. C. C. Cribbs.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace and a veil of tulle finished with a cap of rose point caught with orange blossoms. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Henrietta Fording, as maid of honor, wore peach chiffon and turquoise blue, with peach lace mitts and a hat of matching horsehair braid. She carried a Dresden bouquet.

Miss Dorothy Halock and Miss Wilda Guthrie, the two bridesmaids, wore turquoise blue point d'esprit gowns with hats of peach horsehair braid and lace mitts. They carried Dresden bouquets. Small Ruth Hardman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Hardman, was the flower girl, wearing a frock of green point d'esprit, and carrying a basket of rose petals.

Sloan Whitacer served as best man and the ushers included C. W. Cleavenger, brother of the bride, and W. M. Guthrie.

There was a reception in the Shannopin Country Club later, after which the Rev. Guthrie and his bride left for a western trip. On Thursday they will sail for Europe to travel on the continent until October, when they will leave for Edinburgh, Scotland, where Rev. Guthrie is studying at the University. Some time before Christmas they will leave for the States.

Emma A. Stevenson Becomes Betrothed

Mr. and Mrs. John Dickson Stevenson, of North Highland avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Emma Augusta Stevenson, to Gayle Lee Brock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mayberry Brock, of Tulsa, Okla. Miss Stevenson is a graduate of the Emma Willard School, of Troy, N. Y., and her fiance is a graduate of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College, of Bryan, Tex. No wedding date has been chosen.

M. Louise Griswold To Marry Tomorrow

Tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, Miss M. Louise Griswold, daughter of Mrs. W. H. Griswold, of Washington, will become the bride of Dr. George Dean, of Fairport, N. Y., son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Dean, of Buffalo, N. Y., in the home of her brother, Ralph Griswold, of Sewickley.

INITIAL SHOW BOAT CRUISE LEAVES PORT

Belgenland Sails on First Of Series of Fine Trips; Others Will Follow Soon.

The Belgenland, of the Red Star Line, sailed yesterday from New York on the first of a series of five "Show Boat Cruises." The other trips will follow on July 25 and August 1, 8 and 15.

The Belgenland, flagship of the line, is one of the finest sports ships afloat. It is 39,900 tons, 697 feet long (more than three city blocks), and 79 feet broad. Eight decks are available for the Show Boat passengers.

Each Show Boat cruise will include a sea and land vacation of six days and six nights. Each cruise will include the pastimes to be had during an ocean voyage, plus one of the greatest amusement enterprises devised for shipboard presentation, it was announced.

The six days will take the tourist to Nova Scotia and return, where he will be entertained both on land and sea.

All the deck space surrounding the swimming pools on the Lido deck will be covered with Ostende sand and the whole atmosphere will give the impression of the Lido itself.

Included in the entertainment program for the series of trips will include magicians, club harlequin, Piccadilly nights, Paris by night, moonlight troubadours, Lido revue, serenaders, Japanese jugglers and gymnasts.

ARRANGE FOUR WEEK END TRIPS

A series of four week-end cruises has been announced by the International Mercantile Marine Company to be carried out this summer by the White Star liners Majestic and Olympic, and one mid-week cruise by the new motor ship Britannic, largest cabin liner in the world. These White Star ships will call at Nova Scotia on the short vacation cruises which will consume three and a half to four days.

The schedule calls for two cruises by the Olympic, August 6 and August 27; two by the Majestic, July 30 and August 20, all of three and a half days, and one by the Britannic, August 24, of four days. The Olympic and Majestic will leave New York after business hours on Thursday evening and return Monday morning. The Britannic sails Monday evening and returns Friday morning.

Lay Portable Dance Floor in Majestic

To meet the big demand for additional dancing facilities at sea, the White Star Line has installed in the Majestic a portable dance floor.

This floor, which is used in the restaurant, covers an area of 425 square feet and is the first of its kind to be laid in an Atlantic liner.

This special floor is made of 236,940 separate pieces of Austrian oak, walnut, mahogany, maple and rosewood, glued and hydraulically compressed to a canvas backing, so enabling the floor to be rolled up and put away when not in use.

PLACE TALKIES ON STEAMERS

With the installation of sound equipment on the White Star liner Homeric before her last sailing from Southampton, R. C. A. Photophone, Ltd., of London, completed what is said to be the largest contract in the world for maritime talking picture equipment.

The contract called for the installation of complete talkie outfits on the three express steamers of the line's Southampton service, the Majestic, Olympic and Homeric.

For the past three years silent films have been shown on these vessels and now, to keep pace with the latest developments talkies will be a regular feature of every voyage.

'Down East' Tours Prove Innovation

The "Down East" tours, a Pennsylvania Railroad innovation of the current summer season, promises to become an institution, according to R. M. Flocker, passenger traffic manager. The first of the tours left Pittsburgh July 3, and the second left yesterday.

CHAUTAUQUA OPENS COURSE

With Dr. Arthur E. Bestor as chief officer of administration, Chautauqua Institution, at Chautauqua, N. Y., has opened its fifty-eighth season, presenting an eight-week program which includes music, opera, lectures, and collegiate courses covering many academic fields.

For the last half century Chautauqua has dealt in adult education. This year, following the theory on which its establishment was predicated, Chautauqua has included many new courses of study and has adopted the most modern pedagogic systems. Thousands of students, music lovers and vacationists, from all parts of the United States and Canada gather at the "Summer City in the Woods" to pursue full length courses of study and to listen to outstanding diplomats, professional men and women and students of world affairs discuss their subjects in open forum.

Missouri Pacific Opens Freight Office

Increased amount of perishable freight together with the importance of handling such shipments with dispatch has been responsible for the opening of a traffic office at 12 Pennsylvania Building, Nineteenth street, by the Missouri Pacific Lines, it was announced. Henry J. Henrich has been appointed perishable freight agent and will be in charge of the new office.

An increase in produce volume has been responsible for the new office.

Miss McGuire Is Married To Dr. Mowry

Mr. and Mrs. P. Burton McGuire, of Latrobe, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Esther Caleida McGuire, to Dr. Raymer Langford Mowry, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Mowry, of Derry, Pa., which took place at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The ceremony took place in the Trinity Lutheran Church, with the Rev. Dr. L. J. Baker officiating. The altar was decked with ground pine, laurel, gladioli, baby's breath and tall standards of spring flowers.

Mrs. Ralph Cherry, cousin of the bride, sang, accompanied by Mrs. R. Wilson Johnson, at the organ.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and wore a gown of ivory satin with a full court train, and a veil of tulle finished with a novel helmet cap of ivory satin, caught with orange blossoms. She carried a flower muff of Johanna Hill roses, orchids and lilies of the valley.

Bridal Party

The six bridesmaids wore organdie frocks with hats of horsehair braid and carried Colonial corsages arranged against silver shields. The attendants included Miss Lila Mae Clarke, in yellow with an orchid hat; Miss Harriet E. Rogers, in green, with an orchid hat; Miss Regina Chaplin McBride, turquoise blue with a coral hat; Miss Avisia K. McBride, in coral with a turquoise blue hat; Miss Regina K. Hudson, in green with a peach hat, and Miss Girelda E. Mowry, in peach with a turquoise blue hat.

The little flower girls were Phyliss Overholdt and Kathryn Ann Edwards in blue organdie Kate Greenaway frocks with matching poke bonnets, lace mitts and lace pantalettes. The others wore similar costumes, and included Betty Jane Hartman and Eleanor Jane Edwards, in pink, and Marian Elizabeth Blackburn in orchid. The latter carried a silver basket filled with rose petals, and the others carried miniature Colonial bouquets.

Ringbearer, Page

Mathias S. Hartman, II, was ringbearer and Byron Blackburn, 11, was a page.

Dr. William S. Dietrich served as best man and the ushers were Dr. A. E. Mitchell, Cameron Burton McGuire, Dr. Frank Leonardo and Prof. John Martz.

A reception was given for the families and bridal party at the Latrobe Country Club.

The bride is a graduate of the Beechwood School, Jenkinstown, and attended the College of Fine Arts, Carnegie Tech; Miss Maude Schurer's School for Professionals and the Ned Wayburn School. Dr. Mowry is a graduate of Washington and Jefferson College and the Temple Medical School.

Hilda E. Broslet Engaged to Marry

At a tea recently given by Mr. and Mrs. William C. Broslet, of Bellevue, in honor of Miss Emma Gredlein, announcement was made of the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Hilda E. Broslet, and William M. Gredlein.

Madelon's Mirror of Feminine Fancy

IF SOMEONE had taken a handful of little shops and flung them far and wide about the city and suburbs . . . we'd think that was the way Bromeier's began. For we find them tucked away here and there, into busy corners . . . always the same neat, business-like serving window . . . always the same trim, smiling attendant in her white uniform. And as to the things which make these shops the success they are . . . little need be said. For if you're like we are, you'll not have to be told twice about their fresh, crunchy popcorn . . . their rich, fat peanuts . . . their numerous kinds of old-fashioned candies that include the famous cream taffy whose first success dates back to when we were a little girl! You'll find them at the main shop, 103 Diamond Street, opposite McCann's, or at any of the suburban stores.

. . . Sitting in a Corner

WHEN you see the wonderful chairs that Gilbert's are featuring at special prices, you'll want to spend most of your time "sitting in a corner" in one of them. The furniture market opened a month earlier this year . . . with the result that Now you may buy the same chairs you'd expect to find in the August sales, at August sale price! Never has the selection been so varied . . . with chairs to suit every purse! There are 18th century types, with solid mahogany frames and your choice of material, priced $29.50 to $49.50! Occasional chairs with any kind of covering, and solid walnut frames for only $19.50! And all sorts of overstuffed chairs at $45 and upwards. No need to put off buying any longer—prices are at their lowest! Make tomorrow your day to get a chair for that bare wall in your home. At Gilbert's Fine Furniture, 632 Smithfield Street.

. . . Cubby-Holes

THE other day as we were waiting for a street car (believe it or not!), we discovered a snug little cubby-hole full of the yummiest sorts of candies, with peanuts and popcorn on the side! Said we to our ourselves, "what have we here?" . . . and it proved to be one of Bromeier's little nooks. Now if you're a devotee of really delicious popcorn . . . or fresh peanuts . . . and have a sweet tooth to boot, you'd better hie yourselves to the nearest Bromeier shop and stock up. For there they are with taffies . . . maple, chocolate, and black walnut fudges . . . plain, nut, cocoanut, and chocolate caramels . . . not to mention four kinds of super-extra nut rolls! When you try them we're sure you'll retire with your favorite book, and "let the rest of the world go by" as we find ourselves doing! Get some the next time you're near Bromeier's, 103 Diamond St., opposite McCann's, or at any of the suburban stores.

. . . Fashion's Footprints

FASHION is a capricious soul! Here we are in the middle of the Summer . . . thinking white . . . and in she rushes with the newest thing for the coming season! Dark cocoa brown kid strap shoes . . . wearing pearl lustre sea sand and dark pearl lustre kid trimmings. And you may like to know that these are the same type of shoes that would have sold for $10 last fall . . . now priced $8.50. Petty's have not been napping . . . they've just received a number of the new models for next season. These are the smart shoes that are made over the same last, insuring proper fit and comfort. We predict that wise women will open charge accounts with Petty's at once . . . and stop in often, that they may keep an eye on the new arrivals. At the Petty Shoe Company, main floor of the Jenkins Arcade, Atlantic 1444.

. . . White Magic

NOW there are two kinds of magic—white and black—and Mrs. Lasner belongs in the former class. Only one who had unusual gifts could accomplish the marvels this little artiste has. We know of one case . . . a woman whose figure was 'way out of proportion, came to her to be "remodeled." That was at the time she was married. The other day she and her husband returned . . . with the announcement that they were planning an 8-months cruise . . . and were relying on Mrs. Lasner to see that Madame was completely, and properly outfitted for such a trip. Which simply proves the absolute faith her patrons have in this little corsetiere! She will leave shortly for New York to buy the many things this particular woman will need . . . while work goes forward in her studio on those foundation garments that are being made for Madame's individual figure. Imagine the relief of being able to turn all such details over to one who knows! . . . and Mrs. Lasner does. Ask for her booklet at 604 Clark Building.

. . . Light Fantastic

NO MATTER where it is that you "trip the light fantastic" this Summer, your steps will be lighter and gayer if they're made by a pair of these charming shoes Parisiam is featuring this week at $4.95! They're the daintiest of white shantung—sandals with a T-strap effect—and may be dyed any shade you wish to match your frock (free of charge). We're of the firm opinion that any Summer evening frock will be well completed with a pair of these light-stepping sandals! And while we're on the subject, we want to give you a timely tip! Parisian has taken lots more of their higher priced shoes and placed them in the $4.95 class. So if you've had your eyes on a certain pair, and didn't want to pay the price, go down this week—it is probably among the $4.95's. At the Parisian Bootery, Penn and Sixth, in the Roosevelt Hotel.

A thought for those who are taking water voyages! Sew three buttons and loops on your steamer rug—it will be more snug, and keep from slipping.

. . . Great Oaks

YOU will remember the saying "great oaks from little acorns grow" . . . which is something that Mrs. Cornelius, principal of the Grace Martin School, believes. And that her "little acorns" may get a head start in their growth, she is already planning for the school year that will begin September 8th. This is her regular-course day school . . . though there are evening classes for those who want them, beginning September 14th . . . from 5:30 to 7:30. In each of these sessions students may take shorthand and typing, or advanced dictation and secretarial practice. Applications for September and February classes are already pouring in . . . so we suggest a visit to Mrs. Cornelius soon, as she employs no solicitors, and makes all her contacts personal. On the 18th floor of the Keenan Building.

. . . Jack and Jill

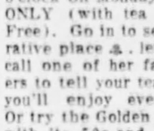
WHEN "Jack and Jill go up the hill," they'll be dressed in clever little togs that came from the Jay Kiddie Shop. That is, they will if their mother is smart and thrifty, too! For never before have we seen such dainty little frocks for girl-children . . . organdie dresses with long skirts (ideal for wedding parties), and short little styles that wear bows on their shoulders and flowered prints 'round the bottom. Nor has "Jack" been overlooked. For there are sleeveless linen suits . . . mannish little sweaters . . . and pique hats that make any small boy look like the sturdy little man he is. Take the kiddies in . . . let the Jay Kiddie Shop give you their personal attention—years of experience have given them a thorough understanding of questions of children's dress, ages 2 to 6. At 3007 Jenkins Arcade.

. . . Sick Permanents

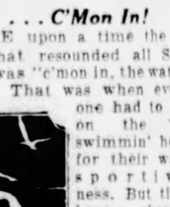
WE'VE heard of "sick pearls" and what the cure is . . . but we have never heard of "sick permanent waves" before! This week we were down at Maison Frederic and made a discovery. A "sick permanent" is one that has RAKED the hair after the steam has evaporated . . . and as a result, the hair is left dull, lifeless, about like so much hay! Now what we suggest to the various owners of "sick permanents," is that they pay a visit to Maison Frederic for a scalp or hot oil treatment. This particular salon knows just what to do under such circumstances, and can youthify any dead-appearing wave. Don't make the mistake of neglecting your hair just because you think nothing can help it. That's the crucial moment when a well-timed step can bring back the original lustre and beauty to anyone's hair. Stop in at Maison Frederic, 207 Fifth Avenue.

. . . Very Doggy

JUST because you and your family are all properly provided for is no reason to forget good old Rover . . . or Puss . . . or any other of the household pets. They should come in for their share of good care, too! All of which Beckert's realize, as is shown by the complete stock of food and food containers they carry—beginning with dog food, and continuing on through cat, canary, pigeon, and rabbit food. They have practically every kind of food for these pets . . . as a matter of fact we counted six kinds of canned dog feed (selling 2 for 25c). For instance, they have rabbit food crocks, regularly worth $3 the dozen, now priced $1.50. Even shampoo for your particular doggy . . . and all sorts of remedies for pets' ailments. Why, our pets can be just as well taken care of as we are, with all of these things. We even spied a catnip mouse that will send any kitty into delighted antics. At Beckert's Seed Store, 101 Federal Street.



. . . Lunch-ward Ho!



SENORA TERESA is living up to her Spanish hospitality again this week . . . for here is the Wishing Cup Tea Room featuring their special 45c luncheon from 3 to 5 o'clock on Monday and Friday ONLY (with tea leaves read Free). Go in to see this decorative place & . . . let the Senora call one of her famous readers to tell your tea leaves . . . you'll enjoy every minute! Or try the Golden Swan Room with its 50c and 75c luncheons . . . its 75c and $1 dinners . . . and its chicken and steak menus with tea leaves read Free . . . $1.25. On the roof you'll find the Roof Garden and private dining rooms to be reserved for parties, banquets, and weddings . . . and in the Grill Room there's a brand new cafeteria just opened—fine for quick service and reasonable prices. Try any of them at the Hotel Mayfair, below Horne's, Atlantic 6060.

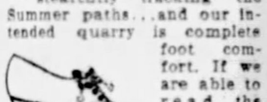
. . . C'Mon In!

ONCE upon a time the cry that resounded all Summer was "c'mon in, the water's fine." That was when everyone had to rely on the "ole swimmin' hole" for their water sportiveness. But times have changed . . . and it would be rather foolish to depend upon outdoor water of doubtful character when we have the gloriously clean, clear, sanitary Pittsburgh Natatorium practically at our own front door. Tuesdays and Thursdays are ladies' days . . . and we will find comfortable lockers, shower rooms, and rest rooms at our disposal. The pool itself is a marvel of spaciousness and blue-green crystal cleanliness, that any one will enjoy. Capable instructors and instructresses may be had for lessons at nominal sums. And the whole pool may be chartered any evening for only $20 (this allows 75 people privileges) . . . Just call the Natatorium, Grant 9876, or stop by 540 Duquesne Way.

. . . New Arrival

MUCH excitement! There's a new arrival in the bread family that makes Rhea's its dwelling place! One would think that a family of 20 was enough for anyone . . . but Rhea's always seem to have room for one more. This week it's Tomato Bread . . . the youngest and one of the healthiest breads we've ever found. Everyone knows how tomato juice has taken the country by storm . . . so it's no wonder that Rhea's have found a way to incorporate it in their wholesome loaves since they're always on the lookout for new health breads. This new addition is of a moist texture . . . pale salmon-pink in color . . . with an odor and flavor reminiscent of tomatoes (toasting accentuates this). It's sort of a "two in one"—we get our bread and tomato vitamins all in one fell swoop! Try a loaf this week . . . for 17c. At Rhea's Bakery, 441 Market Street, Atlantic 6561.

. . . Timely Duet



CONSIDERING that it's the height of vaction time, we've decided to delve into our store of holiday-spots and give you a duet to choose from this time! You may sail from Cleveland to the beautiful Saguenay . . . seeing all the historical spots en route and back . . . in complete comfort . . . for only $130. This includes all expenses. OR, you may be one of those people who get seasick at the thought of a boat! In this case, we would suggest a 14-day motor tour through Eastern Canada and the New England states. This means luxurious busses will take you through the Alleghenies . . . the Finger Lake region . . . to Montreal (with a water trip to Quebec from there) . . . and back down through those lovely New England states that everyone raves about! The total cost of the tour including everything (except meals in New York City) is $197.50. And we think you're doing well at that! For further details, consult Mr. Miller in the Travel Department of the Union Savings Bank, Frick Building.

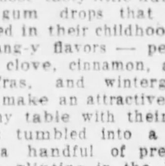
. . . Track of Comfort

LIKE so many Indians, we're stealthily tracking the Summer paths . . . and our intended quarry is complete foot comfort. If we are able to read the signs along the trail we'll know where to find it . . . at Ritter & Morrison, 501 Liberty Avenue. There we'll see the shoes that promise cool, smart comfort, without which anyone's Summer can very nearly be a failure. They are the kind of shoes that you'll want to tuck in your bag for that extra bit of vacation wear. White or natural linen is—with the Menihan Arch Aid for just the right amount of support. And priced $8.50. When you plan to go for yours, remember the morning is the best time to enjoy Ritter & Morrison's famous "unhurried service."

. . . The Iron Is Hot

SEEMS to us we've been brought up on that old theory of "striking while the iron it hot" . . . so you see what we mean when we say that a certain "iron is hot!" The psychological moment has arrived for fur buyers! Right Now is the time to have that old coat of yours rejuvenated . . . or to get the new one you'd been pondering! Mr. Connolly's furs are at the lowest prices they've been in years . . . and he is offering to make up coats to our special order for a trifle of their cost in past seasons! It's sort of a double whoopee—this thing of getting really marvelous furs in smart Autumn styles at prices that are about equal to the average family's monthly grocery bill! Think it over . . . then go down to Mr. Connolly and let him advise you. Remember, Autumn isn't so very far away, and furs ARE going to be worn! 207 Fifth Avenue, third floor.

. . . Spicy Bits



NOW you'll be sure to have a successful party . . . with assorted spice jelly drops assisting! Dimling's are offering them special all this week . . . those tasty little nubbins, like gum drops that were stunted in their childhood! In six tang-y flavors — peppermint, clove, cinnamon, anise, sassafras, and wintergreen. They make an attractive note on any table with their gay colors tumbled into a dish like a handful of precious stones glinting in the light. And they're so practical, too . . . no soiling of card-playing fingers with stickiness. Little full-flavored bits that we can pop into our mouths with perfect ease as we "trump our partner's ace!" And in case you didn't know . . . they sell regularly for 40c the pound . . . which makes this week's price of 30c the pound doubly interesting! At the factory, 801 Liberty Avenue, or any of the seven Dimling stores. (15c sends any size box anywhere in U. S.)

Contract Bridge Usurps Place Held for 40 Years By Auction at Tournament

By ERNEST H. HEINRICHS

Sun-Telegraph Bridge Expert.

The championship bridge tournament beginning tomorrow at Asbury Park, N. J., and which is one of the outstanding events of the bridge world, is this year of more than usual interest, because it will mark an epoch in the bridge history of this country, inasmuch as for the first time in 40 years a tournament of that character will be held without any of the contests being played at auction bridge.

Indeed this tournament is being designated particularly as an "all-contract" tournament, and if there were any further proof wanting, this event certainly furnishes the strongest evidence, that the good old game of auction bridge, which has been the popular favorite of bridge players for almost half a century, does no longer occupy the throne of bridge, but is being rapidly and surely surpassed by its younger rival, contract.

Replaces Auction

It is merely another case of "the king is dead, long live the king," and from now on contract bridge will hold the reins until again a successor has been found to take its place.

This Asbury Park affair is usually the gathering place of all the leading eastern experts, and the character of play on this occasion is generally of the highest order.

The program prepared is especially attractive. It includes no less than five national championship events as follows: National masters' pair, national team of four, challenge cup, national mixed team of four, national mixed pair and national womans' pair. The prizes for these various events are among the most highly prized by the devotees of the game, including solid gold as well as sterling silver cups, besides a bronze statue, symbolizing the city of Asbury, which donates this prize.

State Championship

There will also be a contest for the championship of New Jersey, and another for the local championship of the County of Monmouth, in which Asbury Park is located.

Although they do not offer the same distinction, there will be held 12 open contests, which are especially attractive, and offer equally important interest, because players from all parts of the country will take part in these events.

The tournament is conducted under the auspices of the American Bridge League, the largest organization of bridge players in this country, of which Capt. F. G. French, of the Pittsburgh Bridge Club, is the president, while two other well-known bridge players of this city, Mrs. H. D. Stahl and Henry J. Bailey, are members of the tournament committee.

The tournament will last throughout the week, and all games will be played in Convention Hall on the Boardwalk.

City Backward

Although it is a fact that contract bridge was played in the rooms of the Engineers' Society of this city long before it had been introduced in the other leading bridge centers of this country, the new game has apparently not yet taken a very strong foothold here. This is no doubt to be accounted for by a characteristic conservatism, which seems to be inherent with Pittsburghers.

We do not claim to be a prophet, but we venture the prediction that the spectacular challenges for a bridge match of 200 rubbers between Ely Culbertson and Sidney Lenz, of New York City, will never materialize any farther than the talking stage. However, if it does it will be worth going many miles to see.

Lenz Problem

Apropos of Mr. Lenz, who has won the United States bridge championship no less than 12 times, who is considered one of the greatest card players of today, and who is also the composer of many bridge problems, it may interest some of our readers to solve the following, which is one of Mr. Lenz's very simple problems.

Miss Kelley Married to Scranton Man

A bride of Thursday morning was Louise Dorothy Kelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris G. Kelley, of Spanish Villa, Jeannette, when she married Joseph Paul Sheridan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Sheridan, of Scranton, in the Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church. The Rev. Callistus Stehle, pastor, officiated, at 9:30 o'clock. Palms, cibotium ferns, gladioli and regal lilies banked the altar. The aisles were lined with tall baskets of spring flowers.

The wedding music was played by Prof. Julius Desterberg, violinist; Robert Desterberg, 'cellist, and Mrs. Henrietta Laurent, organist. Miss Margaret Garrity and Alex Roy sang several selections.

Gowned in Satin

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and wore a Grecian gown of ivory satin, fashioned with a brief train, over which her veil of tulle fell in soft folds from a cap of lace and a bandeau of orange blossoms and seed pearls. She carried bridal roses, bouvardia and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Charles Hauser, the matron of honor, wore a gown of French blue lace, having a peplum at the hipline, with which she wore a matching hat and carried pink roses and blue delphinium.

Miss Philomena Costanzo, of Wheeling, W. Va., and Miss Loretta Hudson were the bridesmaids. They wore princess frocks of white mousseline de soie embroidered in peach and green over matching satin, and hats of peach and green. Their colonial bouquets were of spring flowers in sunset colors.

Mrs. Morris G. Kelley wore beige chiffon and lace with a black lace hat, and Mrs. Philip Sheridan, blue chiffon and lace with a gray hat. Both wore shoulder corsages of orchids.

Francis Sheridan, of Scranton, served his brother as best man, and the ushers included Dr. Joseph Carroll, of Pittsburgh, and Ford McHale, of Scranton.

Reception Held

The wedding breakfast for the bridal party and families, was given in the Greensburg Country Club. An informal reception was held early in the afternoon in the Kelley home.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan left immediately for New York and yesterday sailed on the Bremen for Europe. They will spend two months in Switzerland and bordering countries, and upon their return will be at home in Spanish Villa until after the holidays, when they will reside in Salina avenue, Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh guests included Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Courtney, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tentriss and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Langhill.

N. Kensington Girl Marries Pittsburgher

On Saturday, July 11, Miss Lois Ann Alter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Riley Alter, of New Kensington, became the bride of William Alvah Stewart, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Stewart, of Pittsburgh and Coraopolis Heights. The ceremony took place in the First Methodist Episcopal Church of New Kensington at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The Rev. Dr. Herbert A. Baum, pastor, officiated. The altar was decorated with cibotium ferns, palms, pink and blue larkspur, gladioli and blue delphinium. Mrs. Ruth Brown played the wedding music and Mrs. Eleanor Van Scoten Bates sang.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore her mother's wedding gown of white crepe de chine over taffeta, in the mode of 1900. She also wore her mother's veil of tulle, which was finished with a cap of rose point. Her bouquet was of Johanna Hill roses and lilies of the valley.

Bridal Party

Mrs. Samuel Ashe Alter, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing a gown of pink net edged with blue, and a pink hat. She carried pink and blue garden flowers.

The bridesmaids included Miss Emma Snodgrass, of Rochester, Pa.; Miss Ann Thompson and Miss Mary Joy Alter, sister of the bride; Miss Marjorie Ashe, Miss Jane King and Miss Theresa Clingerman. Small Ann Louise Stevens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Stevens, of New Kensington, was flower girl.

The bridesmaids wore frocks of pink and blue point d'esprit over taffeta with white hats and lace mitts, and carried blue and pink colonial bouquets.

Men in Party

George L. Stewart, of Chicago, served as his brother's best man, and serving as ushers were Samuel Ashe Alter, of Pittsburgh; Foster and Ben Alter, of New Kensington, brothers of the bride; James G. Fulton, Gerald D. Prather and Charles R. Clark, of Pittsburgh.

The reception was held in the assembly room of the church, and the wedding dinner for the families and bridal party was given in the Alter home.

Curious Kitty

By the Brilliant Satirist Fish

Verses by Carolyn Wells.

Kitty was truly in the Seventh Heaven of delight,
When she became companion to Miss Arabella Hite.
The lady's wealth was fabulous, her prestige was correct,
And the Clubs that she belonged to were exclusive and select.

"This week-end at the Spindrift Club," Miss Arabella said,
"I want to get a browner tan; this is a shade too red."
Three motor cars conveyed them to the gay and festive scene;
At the Club Miss Hite was welcomed like an empress or a queen.

Down to the glistening beach they went, in scanty garb arrayed;
Miss Hite's belongings carried by two footmen and a maid.
But curious Kitty strayed away—she couldn't understand
Why all those gay umbrellas were planted in the sand!

One big umbrella caught her eye, a gorgeous black and red;
"I'll peek in that one and find out!" curious Kitty said.
Eagerly she leaned down and tipped it just a teeny mite—
And under it a great big man was flirting with Miss Hite!

Of course, Miss Hite was furious. She said, with icy stare,
"Of a companion's duties you are strangely unaware.
And since your curiosity you seem to overdo——
A fashionable beach is not the place for you!"

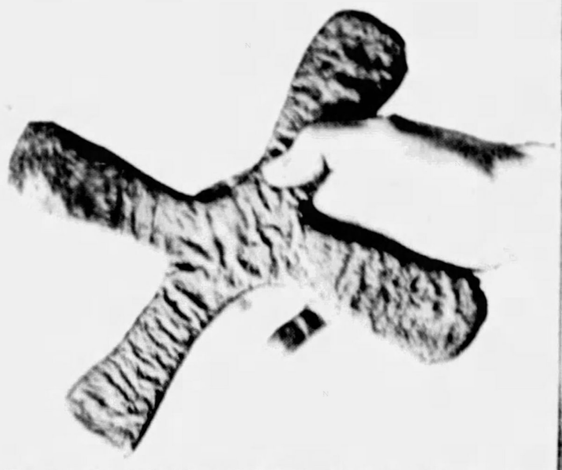
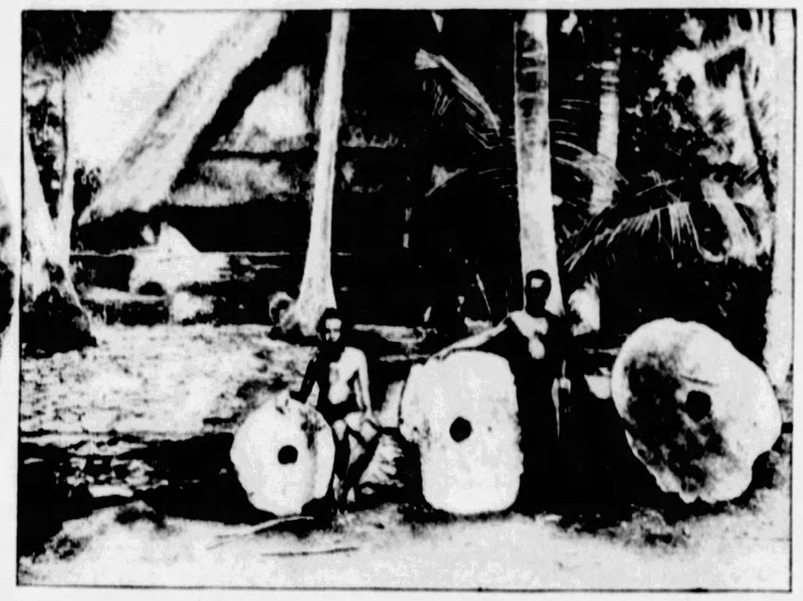
No Depression in the Land of Yap Where "Coins" Are 12 Feet in Diameter



This Peculiarly Fashioned Coin Is Almost as Strange as the Stone Money of the Island of Yap and It Purchases a Wife in the Congo.

In Bulgarian Villages the Lack of Banks Forces People to Keep Their Money on Hand, and This Has Developed the Custom of Using Money for Sartorial Decoration. This Peasant Girl's Face Is Literally Her Fortune.

A Stone Dollar From the Island of Yap, in the Carolines. In That Country It Is Perfectly Safe to Leave the Money Lying Around.



No Fear of Robbers Haunts This Moneyed Family. Five or Six Men and an Ox Cart Would Be Needed by Burglars and the Money, if Stolen, Could Not Be Concealed. Thus, This Capitalist Just Places His Money Outside His Home So Everyone Will Know He Is Rich. That Has the Effect of Establishing a Wide Credit.

THE dusky natives of Yap, an island of the Caroline group in the South Pacific, demonstrate more interestingly than any other people on earth the true definition of money—that "money is what the other man takes for the things you want."

In Yap a man with a chest of American twenty-dollar gold pieces would be poor, while another man with a half-dozen big stone discs in his front yard would be regarded as a millionaire. This is because chunks of limestone quarried in the Pelew islands, some 20 miles from Yap, are by ancient custom the medium of exchange among these primitive South Sea Islanders.

Just how stone discs, ranging in size from six inches to 12 feet in diameter, happened to be adopted as the coin of the realm of Yap is something of a mystery. Probably the stone became the measure of value because—like gold or silver, or diamonds among civilized people, it is available but difficult to acquire in large quantities.

The wealthy men of Yap are the only ones who have the power and the means to send other men on the dangerous 400-mile voyage to the Pelew Islands and back for the coveted limestone.

Only the smaller stone coins are exchanged in trade and the big pieces, some of which weigh as much as five tons, are symbols of accumulated wealth. These ponderous objects change hands only in the case of some big deal comparable to the purchase of a seat on the Stock Exchange.

Money, it should be explained, does not mean so much in Yap as it does in America, for life is simple there and a medium of exchange is not especially important where men pay no rent, wear little clothing and pick up their meals where they find them, by fishing, hunting and a little gardening. Much of the trading among the natives is done by the ancient method of barter in which no medium of exchange is necessary. Depression is unknown among the Yaps.

The negroes of the African Congo use big crosses of copper for money. In certain sections of Morocco big bars of rock salt serve as money and change is made by breaking bits off the long, white "dollars," but nowhere else in the world can money approaching Yap currency in size and weight be found.

Mixed Bathing in Sunshine

SUN BATHING has become so popular in Germany that Luna Park, the largest amusement resort in the vicinity of Berlin, recently opened a spacious "bathing pool" where men, women and children can bask in the health-giving rays of the sun for a small admission fee.

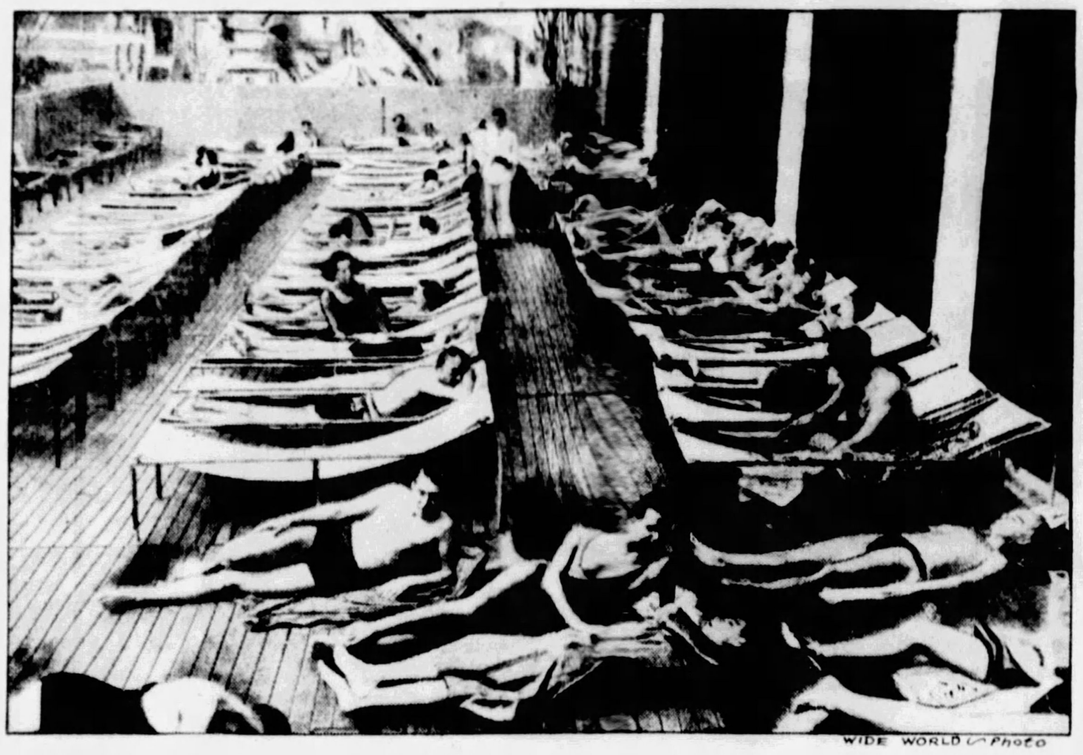
The establishment is open from early in the morning until late afternoon. And it is open every day whether the sun shines or not. On cloudy and rainy days a canvas roof is stretched over the pavilion and the place is flooded with ultra-violet rays from a battery of sun lamps.

The Germans take their sun baths seriously but not prudishly. Men, women and children lie in the sunlight together, unhampered by so much as a loin cloth. Bathing in the nude, however, is confined to certain restricted areas not as public as Luna Park. The average American would, however, be surprised to see how little clothing is worn by the patrons of the newly-opened public solarium which has become about the most popular attraction of the celebrated German playground.

Sun bathing has taken a stronger hold in Germany than in any other country in the world, although the benefits of ultra-violet rays on health are appreciated all over the civilized world. Thousands of people in Germany get their daily quota of sunshine, natural or artificial, just as thousands of Americans and Englishment go in for their daily round of golf, weather permitting.

The attendants at the new sun pool are skilled operators of artificial sunlight apparatus and try to see to it that none of their patrons suffer from sunburn. They circulate among the deck chairs on which the bathers lie and warn careless or reckless absorbers of the powerful rays to take their ultra-violet vibrations in moderation.

When a patron does get too long and too strong a dose of sunshine the attendants at the pool apply a special oil to take out the painful sting and to keep the skin from blistering and peeling.



Berlin's Luna Park Has Just Opened a New "Bathing Pool." Patrons Are Told by Signs That Mixed Bathing Is Allowed, but There Is No Water in the Pool. It is a Sun-Bath Establishment Where Anyone May Go for a Small Fee and Lie Around All Day in the Warming Rays. If the Day Is Cloudy, a Canvas Roof Is Spread and the Attendants Supply Artificial Sunlight Lamps.

Why Monday Is "Blue"

FOR want of a better name, psychologists and physicians have labeled the rather depressed and grouchy disposition of the average American at the beginning of the week, the "Monday blues."

Various explanations have been given to account for this interesting national disease, if it can be called that. Some students of the behavior of human beings have ventured the guess that the average person likes loafing much better than work and that the day of rest so accentuates the desire for leisure that the aversion to activity expresses itself in touchiness and, in many cases, downright ill-temper.

Other experts at the difficult science of analyzing the vagaries of the human mind believe that the business and professional man, the clerk and the stenographer unconsciously spend the one day away from gainful occupation picking to pieces his, or her, particular role in the economic scheme. More often than not the individual finds the role far from satisfactory and goes back to his desk, his counter or his bench feeling a vague spirit of rebellion.

Dr. Gladys G. Ide, Philadelphia psychologist, recently suggested another reason for the "Monday blues." She thinks that the trouble can be traced to what most people regard as the most enjoyable phase of the week-end freedom from labor—the great American Sunday dinner.

"We loaf around all day," says Dr. Ide, "and sit down to a bigger meal than we've eaten at any other time during the week. There's no need to hurry, and the menu is abundant and appetizing. We linger long at the family board and get up filled with much more food than we need or can comfortably digest. More often than not the unusual intake of nourishment makes us feel more like taking a nap than exercising and we just sit or lie around, trusting Mother Nature to take care of the bulk of edibles inside us. More often than not the repast is composed of foods which cause indigestion when eaten together. Then, too, our daily routine is upset on Sunday, and we are all creatures of habit. Is it any wonder that so many of us are victims of the 'Monday blues?'"

Male Actors of Japan Rapidly Losing Their Ancient Monopoly of Women's Roles

FOR centuries the most popular "leading ladies" of the Japanese stage have been men and, until recently, none of the theatre-goers of the Island Empire objected to this time-honored theatrical custom. But Japan has reached what many of its older and tradition-bound citizens scoffingly call its "jazz age" and the young bloods of the country, having succumbed to the Occidental charms of Hollywood's cinema queens, are demanding that the respected female impersonators of the Nipponese stage stick to masculine roles, or quit the honorable ranks of the Thespians.

This almost blasphemous demand has caused considerable furore among the players of the Japanese theatre and among a large element of the population which deplores the rapid westernization of the country and the scrapping, one after another, of ancient customs. But the youth of Japan usually gets its way in such matters and it is likely that the time is not far distant when the leading ladies of the stage will all be members of the sex indicated by their lines and costumes.

The character of the drama itself also seems marked for radical changes, for the Japanese theatre has, for generations, presented few plays that have not been "Kabuki"—historical dramas preserving the traditions and the customs of the old feudal days. The young Japanese prefers a modern American movie, or a snappy revue, to these stiff and unchanging depictations of life in what seems to them the "dear, dead days," and they seldom attend such performances by choice.

From the days when "Kabuki" were first performed, the female roles always have been taken by men. The playing of these roles became family affairs, that is, the profession of female impersonator was passed on as a legacy from father to son and the males of a few families devoted their lives to learning and playing a numerous repertory of roles which have changed little in their interpretation in the last five centuries.

Perhaps the most celebrated player of "Kabuki" roles now alive is Utayemon Nakamura. He is more than 70 years old and can no longer play the parts of young women. He does, however, appear as an old woman, and is held in the greatest esteem by a veritable army of admirers who have followed his dramatic career for more then half a century.

Utayemon Nakamura has a son, Fukusuke, who learned his art at the hands of the old man. Sometimes father and son appear in the same production and share the applause of the audience. The son is still young enough to play leading lady roles and has a son of his own whom he is training to carry on the name of Nakamura on the Japanese stage. He admits, however, that the present agitation against female impersonators may deprive the lad of the honor of enacting the feminine roles in which he is being coached.

Next to the elder Nakamura and his son, the Japanese regard Kikugoro as the formost masculine "actress" on the Japanese stage. Kikugoro is unique in his profession because he can play masculine roles as well as feminine roles. One day he may take the part of a stern and formidable warrior of the feudal days and the next day he may don the elaborately embroidered kimono of a geisha girl and delight his audience with his graceful dancing.

Kikugoro is not particularly worried about the prospect of losing his place on the stage because he believes that the "Kabuki" will have a place in Japan for many years to come. If the day comes when women replace men in the leading roles he will confine himself to the playing of masculine parts.

Strangely enough the objection to the masculine "leading ladies" of the Japanese stage is not based entirely on the manner in which these actors play their parts. It is the idea of impersonation against which the youth of the country complains. Some of the "Kabuki" players do not look feminine or conduct themselves with womanly grace on the stage, but most of them are skilled in their roles and can, with the aid of make-up and costumes, put on as good a show as a woman could in the part.

One Look at Kikugoro, One of the Foremost of the Old School of Japanese Actors, and Then Comparison With an American Movie Heroine, Will Tell the Story of Why Men No Longer Exclude Native Women from the Stage. Kikuguro's Legs Are Not Exactly Alluringly Feminine in Molding.

Fukusuke Nakamura, Another Famous Young Female Impersonator, Who Is Rapidly Losing Prestige. Japan Is Picking Real Feminine Beauty Under the Influence of American Screen Plays. Male "Emoters" No Longer Have Much Box Office Value.

Some Years Ago This Version of a Beautiful Woman, Impersonated by Utayemon Nakamura, One of the Foremost of Japan's Thespians, Was Irresistible to the Public. But Now the Ornate Dress, the Slanting Eyes and the Weighty Headgear Have Given Place to Modern Sport Costumes and Shapely and Athletic Young Japanese Women.

Rich Mr. Manville's Latest Matrimonial Misadventure

Disinherited for Marrying Wife No. 1, a "Follies" Girl; Wife No. 2, a Sensible Stenographer, Had Him Put Back in His Father's Will for $25,000,000—But He Returns to the "Follies" for Wife No. 3, Despite His First Sad Experience, and the Curtain Is Rung Down on Their Honeymoon After a Brief 28 Days' Run

Mr. Thomas Franklyn Manville, Jr., the Asbestos Heir, With His Wire Busy.

"WHY don't you awsk for the chemist's clark?" Mr. Thomas Franklyn Manville, Jr., knew perfectly well that, in ordinary English, this meant that he should ask for the drug clerk. Instead of doing so, the heir to the asbestos millions threw down the telephone, snatched his hat and ran out of his hundred dollars-a-day apartment in the Hotel Pierre, New York, leaving his bride, who was Avonne Taylor, of the "Follies," after only twenty-eight days of married life. At least, that is what he is reported as having given as one of the reasons for ringing down his honeymoon curtain on its brief run.

But why should such a trivial matter as this have disrupted a romance that cost Mr. Manville a quarter of a million dollars to begin?

The first guess was that he had never really and truly and deeply loved his Avonne. But there is impressive evidence to the contrary. He loved her so madly that he not only wanted to marry her but settled a quarter million $250,000, and then some, to say nothing of a $20,000 bracelet and a few other trinkets. Such behavior in these hard times when even millionaires have to economize looks like rather ardent affection.

Then all the more, with that unusually pleasant start calculated to make a bride agreeable, what could have happened to sour all the honey on that honeymoon in four short weeks so sadly that the asbestos heir was willing to write off a loss of $250,000 and then some to say nothing of the possibilities of alimony just to be in the same unattached condition he had been twenty-eight days before?

Mr. Manville, as he hurried over to see his lawyer, looked puzzled and worried, as well he might, for this is his third and worst matrimonial failure. If he doesn't have better luck soon he may lose confidence in marriage and give the whole idea up. For some reason, three brides have unaccountably looked better before than after taking.

"I can't stand her broad A's, her ritzy manner and general high-hat attitude," he was reported as explaining. "She calls an elevator a 'lift,' a drug store an 'apothecary' or a 'chemist's,' and she refuses to eat a beefsteak unless it is called 'filet mignon'."

The deserted Mrs. Manville, with nothing between her and selling apples except that mere quarter million dollars, put her finger on the weak spot in the bridegroom's explanation. She said:

"If he does not like the way I talk why didn't he find it out before he married me? It seems a poor time to make the discovery now."

It is, indeed, a poor time, but, as marriages go, it is quite the usual time. Mr. Manville, having been married only three times so far, may not yet have learned that there seems to be a sort of natural law governing matrimonial mannerisms. What may seem original and just too cute for words before marriage often quickly turns into an infuriating bad habit shortly after the ceremony. For instance, "baby talk" in addressing each other seems cute to probably 99 out of every 100 lovers, but after marriage it is equally probably a pain in the neck to the same proportion of husbands. Why this is so nobody knows. Matrimony is not an exact science.

While a girl is a man's beloved fiancee it may seem cute when she does not know what a "soda jerker" is and calls him "a chemist's clark," and if the third Mrs. Manville really did this, it may have been one of the things that pleased Mr. Manville so much that he made that down payment on matrimony of $250,000. But when, as his own little wife, she frequently said the same thing, it might very well have gotten on his nerves, but many would hold that was not his wife's fault.

And as for the "high-hat" business, he surely had warning enough on that, too, and undoubtedly thought he loved it. Like everyone else who knew the former Miss Avonne Taylor, he had heard that she had been admired by the Prince of Wales. His Royal Highness has admired many fair ones, but the third Mrs. Manville is said to be the only one who ever snubbed that gallant young man, and just how and why the alleged snubbing was done has never been made clear. However, anyone would realize that a girl who could even be said to have done such a thing must know something about "high-hatting."

Miss Cynthia Cambridge, Formerly of the "Follies," Whom Mr. Manville Considered Marrying Before Marrying the Stenographer—And if He Had He Would Probably Still Be Disinherited.

The Second Mrs. Manville, the Sensible Stenographer Whom Mr. Manville Married and So Surprised His Father by His Good Sense That He Revoked His Disinheritance and Left Him Between $15,000,000 and $25,000,000 as a Reward.

The Third Mrs. Manville, Before Marriage Miss Avonne Taylor.

The First Mrs. Manville, Miss Florence Huber of the "Follies," Because of Whom the Asbestos Heir Was Disinherited.

Mr. Manville was also quoted as complaining that Mrs. Manville "high-hatted" his 28-room house near New Rochelle, N. Y., and called it "second-hand. But Mrs. Manville No. 3 hints that there is more to it than Mr. Manville has said and, of course, she is probably right.

Both have been married twice before, but matrimony is a game in which practice does not seem to make perfect. To use a golfing expression, Mr. Manville's game suffers from bad coaching. He started off at the age of 17 with what was perhaps not such a bad idea, if he had only been allowed to stick to it. At that time he married a "Follies" girl, Miss Florence E. Huber, right out of the front row of that institution, after only two days' acquaintance and without asking consent of his father, the asbestos "King."

To make sure there would be no annulment on account of his tender years, Tommy, Jr., married his bride in two States and threatened to repeat the ceremony in all the others if necessary. He mentioned this fact in the telegram to his parents notifying them that he was ready for their congratulations. The reply was to bring the bride at once. The summons was obeyed, the tall and beautiful bride was inspected and rejected, and right there apparently the great mistake was made.

Mr. and Mrs. Manville rejected their son's first selection because she was a show girl and therefore presumably not quite the type to grace properly the mansion of the heir to the asbestos millions. Now, if Florence had only hurled the broad "A" at them, "high-hatted" and ritzed them with talk about clarks and apothecaries, all might have been well, and Tommy, Jr., perhaps, have been allowed to follow his original idea.

It was not such a bad idea. Somebody had to marry these stage beauties, and their natural mates, the only ones who have the money to upkeep them and the leisure to wait on and watch them, are the sons of the very rich. A poor man can't afford such a luxury and a hard-working rich man hasn't the time for them. Had Mr. Manville given the boy his blessing and a quarter million or so to spend on her each year, Tommy might have been happy with that very first wife—at least for a while.

Instead he cut off the boy's allowance, disinherited him, but gave him a job in the factory nailing up boxes at just $15 a week, which was the union scale in those days, but not much of a Saturday evening offering for a "Follies" girl who lives on a different scale. Still the pair managed to stick together at least three times as long as the same husband and his present "Follies" beauty, in spite of the fact that the third Mrs. Manville, 32 years old, was $250,000 ahead of the game, and instead of trying to pay the rent out of $15 a week, was living in a $100 a day apartment, "with hot and cold running servants."

When the break up of this first marriage finally came, the father-in-law offered the bride $50,000 cash for a divorce from his son, but young Mrs. Manville thought it worth twice that amount and they did not do business. For ten years the pair remained married but separated, and then the wife notified the old gentleman that she was ready to accept his offer.

"Too late!" said Manville, senior, and when he refused to give even $10,000 for his son's freedom his daughter-in-law swept out of his presence vowing that she would never release him. A few months later she changed her mind. Someone informed her that the asbestos magnate did not want his son divorced for fear he would "make a fool of himself with some other girl." Just for that Florence divorced him for nothing.

Mr. Manville felt that way because he had heard his son, though unable to marry any of them, had been running around with theatrical women as much as he could afford. And now, sure enough, he celebrated his freedom by becoming engaged to Cynthia Cambridge, also of the "Follies."

"Out of the frying pan into the fire" remarked his father but the engagement finally died, apparently from starvation. In 1925, after three years freedom, Tommy, Jr., fooled everyone by marrying Miss Lois Arlene McCoin, a demure, serious, sensible, businesslike young stenographer who had come to New York from Idaho. This had no more than happened when the founder of the asbestos fortune was stricken with his last illness. As always when a very rich person is dying, relatives, from far and near assembled, including the disinherited, wayward son. The dying millionaire, hearing that Tommy had married again expressed a gloomy desire to see what he had picked this time, and so the second wife was brought into the death-chamber.

The dying man studied her face with only a little powder and no rouge, examined her well-groomed but capable-looking hands and asked her many questions. Then he sent for the scapegrace and demanded:

"Why in thunder did you marry a girl like that?"

"Because," answered his son, justly indignant, "you always wanted to me to marry a sensible one. Now that I have done it, don't you like it?"

"I like it so well that just for her I am putting you back into the will. Maybe she'll make a man of you."

Lawyers were summoned and, because of the impression sensible Lois made on the dying magnate, Tommy received between fifteen and twenty-five millions. After that favor, Mr. Manville really ought to have lived happily ever after with his second wife. He felt the obligation, tried hard and managed to last five years, but apparently the show-girl habit had become second nature with him. Lois was sensible and sweet and had every virtue, but all these years of specializing on the theatrical type could not be thrown off. He discovered that love, like most everything else, is largely habit.

After five years' effort he gave up and was divorced again. If Mr. Manville was a confirmed show-girl fancier, the logical thing to do was to marry for his third wife a show girl. So Mr. Manville did that logical thing and went wrong worse than ever. It is hard to be logical in love.

The trouble this time may have lain in the fact that sensible, clear-headed Lois, though she had lost her husband's love because he still yearned for the other type, had not failed in those five years to make a deep impression on Mr. Manville, making him see show girls at least somewhat through her eyes, though, as usual, love was blind until after the ceremony.

Miss Taylor would probably have done splendidly for the first wife and equally well for the second, except that she might not have had the power to change the Manville will. But coming as she did, after the coaching of the practical Lois, she found the matrimonial stage set all wrong for her.

Mr. Manville is said to have run out on his third bride twice before on their honeymoon, only to come back and apologize. The third time they both consulted lawyers but there may still be a third reconciliation. In that case the bride may have to face more than relearning a few words such as elevator, druggist and steak; she will have to undo and obliterate the five-year impression of the wife just before her. Nobody knows how long that might take. It might be better not to bother, and call it off.

With $250,000 for only four weeks' wedded life, her marriage can hardly be called a financial failure, and as for Mr. Manville, well, there are some people who just don't seem able to learn by experience.

Added 40 Years to the Age of His Face in 40 Minutes

1—Roscoe Ates, Clean Shaven, Ready to Have the Black Base of Make-up Put on His Face. Later This Black Is to Emphasize the Wrinkles.

2—The Actor's Face Partly Smeared With the Black Paint.

3—The Next Step Is the Application of a Coat of White Talcum. This Gives a Texture Effect to the Skin.

4—A Soft-Bristled Brush Is Now Used to Remove Surplus Talcum and the Skin Is Left a Dull Gray.

5—Next Comes a Coating of Flesh-Colored Grease Paint. Mr. Ates Wrinkles His Face While the Coating Is Being Patted On.

ONE morning, during the "shooting" of an historical movie on a Hollywood lot, Roscoe Ates, actor, 35, dark-haired, clear-eyed, smooth-skinned, walked into the cluttered sanctum of Ern Westmore, master of make-up. Mr. Ates looked as he does in the oval above. Forty minutes later the door opened and out he walked, a bent old man, white-haired, bespectacled and furrowed by time. He had aged 40 years in as many minutes.

Here's how Mr. Westmore beat Father Time at his own game: First he smeared Ates' face with a special black paint. When this was dry he dusted it over with a thick layer of talcum powder, and brushed away the surplus powder with a soft-bristled brush.

The make-up man told the actor to twist his face to form wrinkles in his forehead, around his eyes, in his cheeks and around his mouth. While the actor was wrinkling his face, the make-up man put on a thick coating of regulation flesh-colored grease paint over the wrinkled areas. When he relaxed his features the deep gray color of the black-and-talcum base showed through the flesh-colored paint. There were the lines of age, touched up with paint, fixed on the face of a young man.

Next came the make-up of the actor's dark hair. This was made white with "hair paint," which washes out easily. Then the mustache was affixed with spirit gum, a few hairs at a time.

A pair of "prop" spectacles completed the amazingly clever job of artificial ageing, which added to Mr. Ates fame as an actor and won Mr. Westmore a silver cup for advancing the art of make-up.

6—A Brushful of Liquid Dark Make-up Now Emphasizes the Lines of the Subject's Face. The Make-up Expert Follows Them Carefully.

7—The Hair Is Now to Be Treated. A Special White Hair Paint Is Applied and Then a Mustache Is Glued On, Tuft by Tuft.

8—And Now Look at This Man and the Face in Picture No. 1 and See What Has Happened. Roscoe Ates Is Now the Kindly Old Printer—a Character That Brought Him Wide Applause.

End of a 10-Day Marriage

WHEN Dorothy Roth, pretty, 18 years old and a resident of Wichita, Kansas, said "yes" to Thomas Macey's proposal of marriage, she determined to make a happy success of an arrangement that, in this country, so frequently ends on the rocks of divorce. She always would be affectionate, loyal, modest and hard-working. She never would endanger her domestic happiness by "going modern" along the well-known drinking-smoking-and-flirting route.

Ten days after the man she adored led her to the altar her hopes for marital success by this seemingly sensible code of behavior went violently glimmering. Much as she dreaded airing her troubles in court, she told a judge all about it and he gave her a divorce and her maiden name back. The legal grounds for the divorce were extreme cruelty and gross neglect, but the real reason, according to the ex-wife, was her good, old-fashioned attitude toward marriage.

"I was too old-fashioned for Tom," said Dorothy. "He got angry with me because I wasn't a good enough sport to smoke and drink with his friends. His anger so overcame him that he took a razor blade and slashed my trousseau to bits. Almost everything I had to wear was cut into ribbons, even my wedding slippers. The next time I refused to drink with him he started on me—nothing serious, but I was pretty badly cut on the hands. He slapped me and knocked me down. I just couldn't stand it any longer."

The tragic story of Dorothy Roth's 10-day marriage was published in newspapers all over the country and she began to receive as much mail as a movie star. Some of the letters were from people who commended her for her old-fashioned ideas about marriage. And more than a few of them were from men who had been looking for just such a girl for years. One applicant mentioned the fact that he would inherit a fortune of half a million dollars.

"I may marry again," said the pretty ex-wife, "but not until I find the right man. I didn't answer any of the letters and, believe me, I'm going to be old-fashioned enough to think a long time before I take a second plunge."

Curious Woodcarvings by Savages in Harvard Museum

THE average person never links the fair name of art with the savage tribes of Africa, but a traveling exhibit of remarkable carved figures picked up in the jungles of the Dark Continent and now going about this country, is revealing the interesting fact that black tribesmen who never have been exposed to "Western influence" are able and imaginative sculptors.

One of the figures is more than a recognizable representation of a giraffe; it's almost a caricature, with the familiar spots of the long-necked creature cleverly burned in its wooden body. Another of the carvings is an exceptionally well done figurine of a monkey, with its thin tail curled in just the proper way. No one who ever had seen a picture of a giraffe or a monkey could doubt what the primitive artists were depicting with their crude carving tools.

More interesting than these more or less literal representations of animals are the symbolical figures which scientists, browsing about in the African wilds, brought back with them as tangible proof of the existence of art in a quarter of the world supposedly devoid of such marks of civilization as culture and esthetics.

One of these figures shows two serpents curving gracefully upward toward a pair of speckled birds. It is supposed that the snakes are engaged in charming the birds, and that the group stands for something in the lore of the tribe, although the meaning of the carving is not known. Another of the curious works of art might well be used as the model for a bird bath in the modernistic manner.

The most elaborate sculpture in the entire exhibit is a black figure, which appears to be half man and half rabbit. The carving on this figure is amazingly well done, but the significance of the hybrid is a mystery known only to the citizens of the jungle community in which it was found.

New Interpretations of the Bible

More Than 5,000 Changes and Revisions by a Learned Student of the Scriptures Which Make Clear Many Things Which Were Difficult to Understand, and Some Which Completely Alter the Meaning of Long Cherished Texts

Rev. Dr. Kaye Asserts That the Words in the Lord's Prayer, "Deliver us from evil," Should Be Changed to Read, "Deliver us from the evil one." In Those Days People Believed in a Personal Devil and the Old Picture Bible Showed Satan Busy With His Wickedness.

WE are taught the Lord's Prayer in early childhood, when we do not understand the meaning of the words very well, and we repeat it mechanically for the rest of our lives. And thus the true significance of the words, "Lead us not into temptation," seldom becomes apparent.

Of course, it ought not to be necessary to appeal to the Heavenly Father and beg Him not to lead us into temptation. The thought that God would deliberately lead anyone into temptation is inconsistent with the whole conception of a Divine Father. And yet there it is in the Lord's Prayer; and countless millions have thoughtlessly repeated those words, as if the Saviour, in formulating that petition, found it necessary to caution mankind to ask the Almighty not to lead the children of man into traps.

But the Rev. Dr. James R. Kaye, a distinguished Bible student, has gone back over the original authorities of the Scriptures and has pointed out that these words are a misleading and incorrect translation. His study of original manuscripts leads him to translate those words "help us to keep from temptation." This, Rev. Dr. Kaye points out, is a much more reasonable thing to pray for.

Almost Meaningless Words of St. Paul, "Evil communications corrupt good manners," Are Changed in the Revised Version to a More Comprehensible, "Evil companionships corrupt good morals."

Dr. Kaye, who is now in retirement at Oak Park, Ill., has spent a lifetime studying various translations of the Bible line for line and even word by word. Familiar with Greek, Hebrew and Latin, and after extensive travels in Bible lands, Dr. Kaye has now produced a revised version which contains 5,566 corrections of the old familiar King James version.

In the Lord's Prayer Dr. Kaye finds another error. Where it says "but deliver us from evil" he would change the words to "but deliver us from the evil one"—that is to say, deliver us from Satan. The early Christians believed in the personal activities of the devil. However, the old form of the Lord's Prayer has sunk so deeply into the consciousness of the English-speaking world that it is difficult to make any change in it. But since the original words read "the evil one," therefore that is the way the prayer ought to be printed, he asserts, with an explanation by modern clergymen that the old idea was that there was a personal devil, Satan.

Changes in Sense Due To Changed Meanings of Words.

The concluding words of the Lord's Prayer are given by St. Matthew in chapter 6, verse 13, as "For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen," according to the King James version, although these words are not included by Catholics in the Lord's Prayer. A great many persons have derived comfort from repeating these sententious words. But Dr. Kaye's revised edition of the Bible declares they should be omitted. He finds satisfactory evidence that these words were not in the original text of the Bible.

An examination of the prayer will show any reasonable person that these words of glorification are not at all essential to the morality and significance of the prayer. A self-respecting modern king would derive no satisfaction from having humble subjects continually testify to his power and glory, and certainly the Heavenly Father would hardly derive pleasure or welcome such testimony of His greatness, as was popular in the primitive days of the old Egyptian kings and savage potentates.

The meaning of many English words has greatly, or even entirely, changed since the translation of the King James version. This is true of the word "prevent," which is used many times in the Bible. In the time of King James this word meant "to precede," or "go before." In the Psalms we find the phrase "in the morning shall my prayer prevent thee." This is now changed to "in the morning shall my prayer come before thee."

St. Paul, in his statement to the Thessalonians, says: "We . . . shall not prevent them which are asleep." This should be: "We . . . shall not precede them"—that is to say, we shall not precede those who have already passed away.

There are many evidences that the translators of the King James version were imperfectly acquainted with the Greek language, in which most of the New Testament was written. The old version attributes to St. Paul the peculiar statement: "For our conversation is in Heaven." Many simple-minded persons have been puzzled about this and have naturally thought it meant there would be a great deal of conversation in Heaven. The original Greek word, translated as conversation, is "politeuma," meaning "citizenship," and the passage is now made to read: "For our citizenship is in Heaven."

The words of St. Paul, "Evil communications corrupt good manners," are constantly quoted and are familiar to everybody, although many persons if questioned would have difficulty in explaining exactly what they meant. They acquire more sense and significance when correctly translated:

"Evil companionships corrupt good morals."

A very much quoted passage in the Gospel of St. John, referring to the Saviour, says: "He came unto his own and his own received him not." This is changed to: "He came unto his own world, but those who were his own people did not receive him."

In his labors Dr. Kaye has made an extensive use of the modern revisions made by the English and American Episcopal Churches, but he has modified them in the light of his own studies. He was a pastor for many years and has written forty books on the Bible, history and philosophy. He is the author of "Through the Bible in Four Years," a work which helped thousands of Bible students to a rapid knowledge of their subject in this and other countries. He also wrote "The Key to the Treasury" and "The Student's Bible Guide and Helps," an encyclopedic work of 740 pages.

The Rev. Dr. Kaye has made prolonged researches at Jerusalem, Calvary, the Mount of Olives, Bethlehem, Hebron, the Jordan Plain, Samaria, Galilee and other places in the Holy Land. In his researches he located what he asserts to be the site of Calvary and the Saviour's Tomb, which he says was not in Jerusalem, but in a little garden a stone's throw from Calvary. He has also conducted investigations at sites along the Nile and elsewhere in Egypt, regions where the Israelites grew into racial consciousness.

The learned editor of the new Bible points out that the translators of the old version were much influenced by the fact that they knew Latin better than Greek and were inclined to turn to the oldest Latin text available. The original language of the New Testament was Greek, and therefore he has turned to the Greek texts for the correct interpretation. He gives the old version for the benefit of those who love it, and the corrections are placed in brackets. The new Bible is published by the John A. Dickson Publishing Company, Chicago.

The Book of Genesis, which tells of the creation of the world and of Adam and Eve, is, perhaps, the most familiar book in the Bible, because it is the first. The changes here are numerous. For instance, the old version makes the Lord say to Adam, after he had eaten of the forbidden fruit: "In sorrow shalt thou eat of it (thy bread) all the days of thy life." The new version gives this: "In toil shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life." It meant that man, having left a fairyland existence, would in future find it necessary to work for a living.

Job, Sorely Tempted, Is Reported as Saying, "I know that my Redeemer liveth." But Dr. Kaye Finds Reason to Change the Statement To, "I know that my Vindicator liveth."

Early in the Book of Genesis comes the story of how Cain killed his brother Abel out of wicked jealousy, perhaps the most famous of all murders. In the old version, the Bible story reports Cain as saying to the Lord: "My punishment is greater than I can bear." The new version changes this to: "Mine iniquity is greater than can be forgiven." The meaning of this sentence is very different from the old one and much more rational.

Further on in the same chapter of Genesis, Lamech, a near descendant of Cain, and evidently an inheritor of his violent temper, is recorded by the old version as saying: "I have slain a man to my wounding and a young man to my hurt." Many readers have puzzled over the meaning of this particular sentence and have found it practically unintelligible. The new version changes it to: "I have slain a man for wounding me and a young man for bruising me."

One of the problems that have arisen in connection with the Bible relates to the heroic slaying of the giant Goliath by young David. The story, as told in the Book of Samuel, is extremely stirring. It was this achievement which eventually led to David's promotion to be King of Israel. The words of the young Israelite soldier, as he faced the gigantic Philistine, are a model of eloquence and patriotism. The first Book of Samuel gives the words of David to Goliath:

"Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield: but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied.

"This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand; and I will smite thee, and take thine head from thee; and I will give the carcases of the host of the Philistines this day unto the fowls of the air, and to the wild beasts of the earth; that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel.

* * * * * * *

"So David prevailed over the Philistine with a sling and with a stone, and smote the Philistine, and slew him; but there was no sword in the hand of David."

Now it happens that the Bible also tells a different story of the killing of Goliath. While the First Book of Samuel gives the David narrative, yet in the Second Book of Samuel, an obscure Israelite, named Elhanan, is named as the man who slew the famous big Philistine soldier. The 19th verse of chapter 21, of Samuel,II, says:

"And there was again a battle in Gob with the Philistines, where Elhanan the son of Jaare-oregim, a Beth-lehemite, slew (the brother of) Goliath the Gittite, the staff of whose spear was like a weaver's beam."

The worthy Bible scholars who translated the Bible commonly in use were evidently stumped when they came to this paragraph about Elhanan and Goliath. It was clearly the same incident and the same big soldier—and yet in the former narrative David was named as the Israelite who killed Goliath; and now here another man was given the credit. There were the two conflicting statements, and something had to be done about them. So the translators calmly solved the difficulty by assuming that there were two big Goliath boys. David no doubt had killed one and Elhanan had finished off the other. Therefore, to apparently reconcile these contradictory statements, the old translators took the liberty of writing into the Biblical narrative the three words, "the brother of." But there is no warrant for this interpolation. Dr. Kaye, however, is inclined to think the "brother" idea is the best way to get over the difficulty.

The Book of Job is one of the most beautiful and interesting of the Bible. Every day people refer to the almost incredible patience of Job in bearing all the afflictions sent upon him and his piety in refusing to curse the Lord for tormenting him. Nevertheless, there are many sentences in the book which are unintelligible to the average reader.

Perhaps the most famous quotation from Job is: "I know that my Redeemer liveth." Dr. Kaye says the more correct translation is: "I know that my Vindicator liveth." Job is referring to the fact that he will be vindicated by a just judge for every one of the misfortunes he has suffered.

Almost equally well known are the beautiful words of Job in the King James version: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." This has been referred to for centuries as expressing the most perfect confidence of the religious man in the goodness of his Creator. The new editor would make this read: "Behold, he will slay me, I have no hope." This indicates that Job was in complete despair after all his sufferings and had no expectation that the Lord would help him. Doubtless, many earnest persons will argue in favor of the higher and finer sentiment expressed in the old version.

A curious change is made in Job, chapter 5, verse 24. The old version says: "Thou shalt visit thy habitation and shalt not sin." The latter phrase is changed to: "shalt miss nothing."

The old version makes Job say: "And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." A great change is made in this and it becomes: "And after my skin, even this body is destroyed, then without my flesh, shall I see God." Apparently Job did not expect resurrection in the body but in a spiritual form.

The beautiful Psalms of David, which have given comfort to countless thousands of people, contain many statements that are either mistranslated, or are unintelligible to modern readers. Many people have not stopped to think of the exact meaning. For instance, the Psalmist says: "Let death seize upon them, and let them go down quick into hell." The ordinary American would think this expressed a desire that the Psalmist's enemies should go quickly to hell, but this is not accurate. The new version makes this read: "Let death seize upon them and let them go down alive into Sheol."

In another place in the Psalms, we read: "There shall be an handful of corn in the earth." This appears to foretell a terrible famine. As a matter of fact, the very opposite was meant by the original writer and the passage should read: "There shall be an abundance of corn in the earth."

Many passages in the King James version are very eloquent and have taken their place in the affections of the people, but they are still inaccurate. There is a famous passage in Psalms 121, which says: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help." The new editor says this should read: "Shall I lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence my help cometh?" The change makes very different sense of the passage. It appears to mean that the troubled soul was in doubt whether he would obtain help from the hills, instead of being certain that that was the direction from which it was sure to come.

In the Psalms, chapter 78, verse 41, the old version says: "Yea, they turned back . . . and limited the Holy One of Israel." The writer never meant to say that the rebellious Israelites could limit the power of the Almighty. The latter part of the verse is changed to the more intelligible reading, "Provoked the Holy One of Israel."

One of the many strange passages of the Bible is in I. Kings, chapter 16, verse 34: "In his days did Hiel, the Beth-elite, build Jericho; he laid the foundation thereof in Abiram, his firstborn, and set up the gates thereof in his youngest son Segub."

This has generally been taken to mean that the heathen king actually followed the barbarous practice of putting the foundations of the walls and the gates of the new city in the bodies of his two children. It is known that many ancient races, when founding a city, buried the bodies of young people alive in the foundations. The editor, however, would change the passage to read:

"He laid the foundation thereof with the loss of Abiram, his firstborn, and set up the gates thereof with the loss of his youngest son Segub."

This indicates that the young men were sacrificed in a ceremonial manner and that it is not strictly correct to say that the gates were placed in their bodies.

Few verses have been oftener quoted than Proverbs, chapter 20, verse 1: "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." This is now corrected to: "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is a brawler: and whosoever erreth thereby is not wise."

Another passage in the Proverbs of similar character, says: "Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright." The last phrase is made much clearer by changing it to "goeth down smoothly."

The frequent use of the word "Holy Ghost" in the New Testament appears an unsatisfactory rendering of a Greek word for "Spirit."

In St. Matthew, chapter 12, verse 31, the Saviour says in the old version: "The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men." This is changed to "The blasphemy against the Spirit shall not be forgiven." It is said that the words "unto men" should be omitted.

St. Matthew, referring to the Saviour, writes: "But he turned, and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art an offense unto me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men." Part of this is altered to: "Thou art a stumbling block unto me: for thou mindest not the things that be of God."

The Gospel of St. Matthew, old version, describing the Resurrection, says: "The angel of the Lord descended from Heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it." It is recommended that the words "from the door" be omitted.

The Acts of the Apostles, chapter 9, speaking of St. Paul, says: "And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks." It is recommended that the last sentence be omitted.

The phrase: "for now we see through a glass darkly," I Corinthians, chapter 13, verse 12, is changed to "for now we see in a mirror darkly."

The next verse reads: "And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." The word "charity" in the new edition becomes "love."

The Revelation of St. John, describing the scarlet woman of Babylon, says: "And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus: and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration."

Perhaps only very foolish persons would suppose that the Apostle regarded this monster with admiration in the modern sense, but all difficulty is avoided by changing the word to "wonder."

The story of Samson's exploits and how he was finally decoyed to his ruin and death by the siren Delilah is of never failing interest. No essential change is made in the remarkable facts of this story, but there are some improvements in language. For instance, the old version says:

"And he said unto her, If they bind me fast with new ropes that were never occupied, then shall I be weak and be as another man." The meaning of this is made clearer by changing "with new ropes that never were occupied" into "with new ropes with which no work hath been done."

A very famous passage in II Samuel, chapter 2, verse 23, tells how "Abner with the hinder end of the spear smote him under the fifth rib." This becomes "smote him in the belly."

Most people have pondered over the words of the Psalms, chapter 90, verse 10: "The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow." Investigation has decided that the original text read "by reason of pride" instead of "by reason of strength."

Different Readings of Some Well-Known Proverbs.

Proverbs, chapter 6, verse 11, says: "So shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth, and thy want as an armed man." A great improvement in meaning is made by changing this to: "So shall thy poverty come as a robber, and thy want as an armed man."

The old version of Proverbs says: "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly." A striking change converts this to: "A man that maketh friends doeth it to his own destruction."

Every student of the Bible is familiar with the miraculous manner in which Joshua captured the city of Jericho. The Lord ordered Joshua to lead his army around the walls every days for six days, and on the seventh they were to blow with their trumpets, whereupon the walls would fall down. The Book of Joshua states that this happened. No change is made by the latest editor in this remarkable occurrence.

When the same mighty leader, Joshua, was winning his great battle over the Amorites, there was danger that some of the enemy would escape on account of darkness. The Lord then said:

"Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, moon in the valley of Ajalon.

"And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies."

There will naturally be much interest to know whether the Ten Commandmants, as given in the 20th chapter of Exodus, are modified. There is no change in them. Many readers would expect to find some alteration in part of the Third Commandment, which has been much criticised and seems barbarous: "For I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me." But the editor makes no alteration in this passage.

The Bible Gives Two Versions of the Killing of the Giant Goliath. In One Place It Says That David Killed Him, but in Another Place It Is Recorded That Elhanan Slew the Giant.

Some people think that a verse in Proverbs, chapter 6, verse 6, sounds unintelligible: "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise." But the editor leaves this as it was.

However, in the 12th verse, the phrase "a naughty person" is changed to "a worthless person."

The New Testament in the King James version is shown to contain many passages that misrepresent the most essential principles of the Christian religion. For instance, in St. John, chapter 5, verse 39, we read: "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life." This passage has puzzled many earnest readers, for it appears to reprove a person for thinking he can find eternal life in the Scriptures. Dr. Kaye shows it should read very differently: "Ye search the Scriptures, because ye think that in them ye have eternal life."

The old version makes St. Paul say to the Athenians on Mars Hill: "I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious." The new version of this is almost the opposite: "In all things I perceive that ye are very religious."

This Bible contains a clear explanation of the relation of Biblical history to that of the rest of the world at the time of the events it describes. For example, the Bible says nothing about Babylonian history in the time of Abraham, who was born in the Babylonian Empire, and nothing of the Hyksos dynasty in Egypt, which is said to have been in power when Jacob and his people came into that country. The relation of these foreign rulers to the events in the Bible is explained in the proper places.

In the Story of the Creation in Genesis, Adam Is Told, "In sorrow shalt thou eat of it (thy bread) all the days of thy life." But in the New Version This Reads, "In toil shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life."

A CHALLENGE

TO THE WORLD OF LOWEST-PRICED CARS

THE New Plymouth is the challenge of Chrysler Motors engineering genius to the whole world of lowest-priced cars.

"Floating Power"—Plymouth's new, exclusive discovery which eliminates four-cylinder vibration—challenges all old-fashioned Fours and low-priced Sixes with its smooth power-flow.

So smooth is Floating Power that even experts could not tell how many cylinders were beneath the Plymouth hood; most of them guessed eight.

Floating Power truly gives the Smoothness of an Eight and the Economy of a Four.

Plymouth challenges with 56 brake-test horsepower giving actual stop-watch speeds of 65 to 70 miles an hour and pick-up from a standing start to 40 miles per hour in 9.7 seconds.

Plymouth challenges with Free Wheeling—that thrilling feature of high-priced cars which makes it possible literally to glide through heavy traffic. You can shift between all forward speeds without declutching—easily, quickly and smoothly.

Plymouth challenges with a new, easy-shift transmission. You can shift quickly from second to high and back again at speeds of 35 and 45 miles an hour without clashing or grinding of gears even with Free Wheeling locked out.

Plymouth challenges with self-equalizing, weather-proof internal hydraulic brakes—simplest and unexcelled for safety and smoothness.

Plymouth challenges with double-drop frame—a feature of high-priced cars that gives a much lower center of gravity for still greater safety and roadability.

Plymouth challenges with scientifically constructed Safety-Steel bodies—not only safest but free from vibration and permanently quiet.

Plymouth challenges with full size—the roomiest car in the field of lowest price.

Plymouth challenges with entirely new styling—an eye-compelling beauty of line and color.

Plymouth superiority challenges your attention. See it. Drive it. Ride in it. Prove to yourself that we state only the simple truth when we tell you the New Plymouth is the one car of lowest price with the Smoothness of an Eight, the Economy of a Four.

Charlie Chaplin's Troublesome Legion of Honor Medal

Kissed on Both Cheeks When Given the Historic Order, Then Scolded and Insulted for Taking It, and Now the Thorough Reform or Even Abolishment of the Decoration Is Being Urged in France

The Picturesque Poetess, the Countess de Noailles, Who Was Recently Made a Commander of the Legion and Also Made the Subject of Polite Ridicule by the French Press for Accepting It.

Charlie Chaplin in the Little Derby, Baggy Trousers and Big Shoes That First Won Him Success.

And the Medal and Ribbon of the Legion of Honor Which Mr. Chaplin Received—With Three of the Ill-Natured Cartoons in the Paris Papers Following His Acceptance of the Decoration. The One Showing Mr. Chaplin Standing on the Arch Reads: "My proper place? Here it is! On the ground? Tush! That is good enough for an unknown." The Next Shows Mr. Chaplin in Stage Character, Pointing to His Legion of Honor Rosette, and Saying: "What's this? Mr. Chaplin, have you been to the hardware market?" The Last Shows a Parisian Concierge, Saying: "I think there must be something wrong with the new tenant. He has no Legion of Honor like everybody else."

Miss Josephine Baker, the Dark-Skinned Harlem Dancer, Who Has Become a Parisian Favorite and Whose Recent Announcement That She Is to Receive the Legion of Honor Medal Has Caused Much Indignation in France. She Is Shown Dining With Her Pet Pig.

PARIS, July 10.

THE conferring of the rank of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor upon Charlie Chaplin threatens to put an end to all similar honors by the wiping out of this order, which was founded by Napoleon Bonaparte. And it has been a troublesome decoration, indeed, to the famous comedian.

True comedy should have always in it something of the tragic or the sorrowful, and Mr. Chaplin is famous for situations on the film in which on kissing the hand of the fair lady, or while engaged in some other pleasant occupation, a brick falls on his head or a mule kicks him. This is precisely the situation in which he has found himself in the matter of his induction into the Legion of Honor, and while it is amusing on the films, Mr. Chaplin has found it far from that when it occurs in real life.

The glittering cross and the resplendent ribbon of the Legion of Honor were hung on his breast, and as if to prove that France not only honored and loved him and that there was no fooling about it, M. Philippe Berthelot, Secretary General of the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs, kissed him on both cheeks.

But he had hardly stepped from the Secretary General's office when the French press raised its collective foot and presented him with not one stout kick but several. And he read with astonishment that many members of the order that he had just joined were protesting to the Grand Chancellor of the Legion about it.

"Why should the red ribbon tinged with the blood of heroes be bestowed on a clown?" read the protest of one group.

Mr. Chaplin was actually the victim of circumstances. Far from being in any manner unworthy, he is probably the most worthy to receive the decoration in a long time, but he received it just as France was boiling with indignation for what had gone before and what was expected to come.

It was his misfortune that hardly more than a few hours before he had received the medal, Josephine Baker, the young colored lady, or, as they laughingly call her, "the Vierge Noire," who comes from Harlem, New York, and who dances and delights the French by doing so in not even practically nothing, had announced that M. Berthelot had promised to give her the Legion of Honor. And not long before that, the lady inventor of a French cheese, which has nothing of the perfumes of Araby about it, was proposed for the same decoration. The latter broke no precedent, however, because the distinguished cook, M. Escoffier, had been given the ribbon and medal for his invention of "peach Melba" and similar triumphs of French cuisine.

The net result, however, is that for the third time in history the matter of abolishing the Legion of Honor, or at least its lower ranks, is now being discussed in Paris and will shortly be brought up before the Chamber of Deputies. The second time was when the medal was given to Madame Cecile Sorel, ostensibly for her high qualifications as an actress, but those who had received the decoration for risking their lives in war for France or for achievements more in line with those which Napoleon had in mind when he founded the Order, quite openly charged that there were other less creditable reasons. And the papers printed cartoons much more insulting than those they have just been printing about Mr. Chaplin.

Picking up the well-known French newspaper, "L'Humanite," Mr. Chaplin saw a caricature of himself wearing the Legion of Honor rosette in his buttonhole—the little red rosette taking the place for street wear of the medal—and a caricature of himself pointing a cane at it. Mr. Chaplin in his film character is known as "Charlot" in France. Beneath was the following caption in French:

"Charlot—'What's this! Mr. Chaplin, have you been to the hardware market?'"

A Frenchman had to explain to Mr. Chaplin that "hardware market" meant the same as junk shop. This was bad enough, but when he turned to the "Cine-Journal" (The Journal of the Film) he saw another caricature of himself standing on the Arc de Triomphe, the Legion cross on his chest, and saying in French:

"My proper place? Here it is! On the ground? Tush! That is good enough for an unknown."

When one realizes that the French Unknown Soldier is buried in the ground under the arch, it becomes apparent that the allusion to an "unknown" makes it about as insulting a caption as could have been devised.

On the same page was a sarcastic editorial in which the matter was discussed as if the Legion emblem had been given to "Charlot" and not Mr. Chaplin:

"'All the members of the great League of Nations, who have applauded Chariot on the screen, will applaud with joy the action of France in raising him to the rank of Knight of the Legion of Honor,' says one of our colleagues.

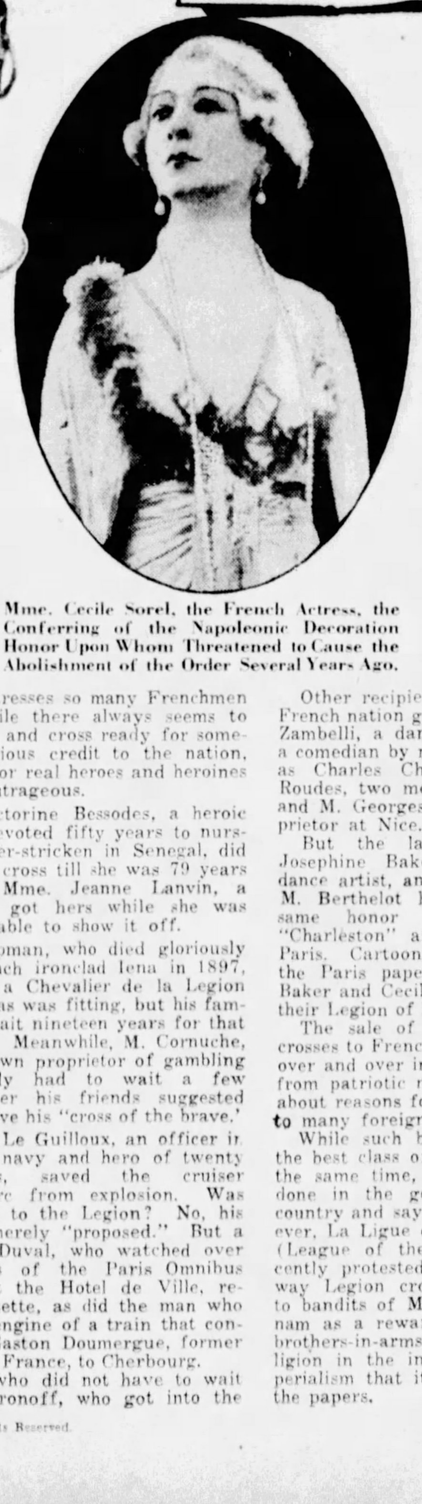
"Should we laugh at this, or should we weep? Neither one nor the other. We should simply shrug our shoulders. We should dishonor the Red Ribbon instituted by Napoleon I if we acted otherwise.

"Charlot is a great artist. I do not contest that. But all the same, what has he done for humanity in general, and for France in particular?"

Still another cartoon showed a concierge, that is a caretaker, talking to a friend while the man passed down the stairs behind them. The concierge says: "I think there must be something wrong with the new tenant. He has no Legion of Honor like everybody else."

There is still a great deal of adverse talk because the picturesque poetess, the Countess Anna de Noailles, was given the grand cordon of the Legion of Honor, while it has not yet been given to Madame Curie, who discovered radium and opened a new path in the world of science. The Countess was made a commander of the Legion. In this case, the resentment took the form of polite ridicule and a sarcastic controversy in Paris newspapers and magazines as to the proper way for her to wear her ribbon.

Not long ago, while complimenting some brave sailors who had saved the lives of a boatload of fishermen, an Under-Secretary of State expressed regret that he had only two Legion of Honor decorations to give.



Mme. Cecile Sorel, the French Actress, the Conferring of the Napoleonic Decoration Honor Upon Whom Threatened to Cause the Abolishment of the Order Several Years Ago.

What distresses so many Frenchmen is that, while there always seems to be a ribbon and cross ready for someone of dubious credit to the nation, the delays for real heroes and heroines are often outrageous.

Mme. Victorine Bessodes, a heroic nun, who devoted fifty years to nursing the fever-stricken in Senegal, did not get her cross till she was 79 years old. But Mme. Jeanne Lanvin, a dressmaker, got hers while she was young and able to show it off.

A midshipman, who died gloriously on the French ironclad Iena in 1897, was named a Chevalier de la Legion d'Honneur, as was fitting, but his family had to wait nineteen years for that recognition. Meanwhile, M. Cornuche, the well-known proprietor of gambling casinos, only had to wait a few months, after his friends suggested him, to receive his "cross of the brave."

Mathurin Le Guilloux, an officer in the French navy and hero of twenty engagements, saved the cruiser Jeanne d'Arc from explosion. Was he admitted to the Legion? No, his name was merely "proposed." But a certain M. Duval, who watched over the interests of the Paris Omnibus Company at the Hotel de Ville, received a rosette, as did the man who piloted the engine of a train that conducted M. Gaston Doumergue, former President of France, to Cherbourg.

Another who did not have to wait was Dr. Voronoff, who got into the Legion of Heroes in recognition of his famous monkey gland transplantation operation, which has since become discredited. Had the glittering cross been pinned on Georges Carpentier, the prize fighter, some people would not have minded so much, for at least he fought bravely in the ring. But why, they ask, was he ignored in favor of Mr. Jeff Dickson, an American boxing promoter who has become a sort of Parisian Tex Rickard?

Other recipients who have made the French nation groan were Mlle. Carlotta Zambelli, a dancing girl; M. Dranem, a comedian by no means as well-known as Charles Chaplin; Baroncelli and Roudes, two moving picture directors, and M. Georges Marquet, a hotel proprietor at Nice.

But the last straw was when Josephine Baker, colored song and dance artist, announced that the same M. Berthelot had promised her the same honor for introducing the "Charleston" and "black bottom" to Paris. Cartoons have been printed in the Paris papers showing both Miss Baker and Cecile Sorel clothed only in their Legion of Honor cross and ribbon.

The sale of the Legion of Honor crosses to Frenchmen has been exposed over and over in the French press, but from patriotic motives little is printed about reasons for which they are given to many foreigners.

While such bribery does not make the best class of Frenchmen proud, at the same time, he realizes that it is done in the general interest of his country and says little about it. However, La Ligue des Droits de l'Homme (League of the Rights of Man) recently protested so vigorously at the way Legion crosses were passed out to bandits of Morocco, Syria and Annam as a reward for betraying their brothers-in-arms, their race and religion in the interests of French imperialism that it actually did get into the papers.

Though Charlie Chaplin was called a "clown," he is fortunate in that nobody thinks that he either paid cash for his decoration or sold out his country or business organization for the bauble. Why, then, did he get it? He deserved it quite as much and more so than many others, but also, once in a while, it must be presented to some foreigner of world-wide eminence; otherwise, it would soon have no great value as a bribe for obscure persons in a position to secretly fix something up for France on the back stairs that would cost millions if done openly and legitimately in the front office.

The honor can be withdrawn, and that power has caused almost as much scandal as its bestowal. The Grand Chancery of the Legion is notorious for attempting to protect and to keep in its ranks members condemned for fraud and other offenses in the courts, such as M. Eiffel, convicted of stealing 20,000,000 francs of public funds.

In 1879 the Grand Chancery had to prohibit grocers, haberdashers and makers of lingerie, perfumes and liquors, whose "civil merit" had won the decoration, from using it as an advertisement and window display to sell their goods. Like British titles, the crosses were for sale to the highest bidder.

In 1927 M. Marcel Ruotte, of the Ministry of Commerce, together with M. Cams and M. Dumoulin, were tried for selling decorations wholesale, some of them as cheap as $4,000. M. Chapgard, a druggist, took one at this bargain figure, and so did a decorator named Dumas, but M. Gossard, big wool merchant, paid three times as much.

In fact, many wealthy men, after receiving the decoration, never wore it nor mentioned it, and are said to have told their friends that they did not want the thing, but had felt obliged to buy and pay for it, in order to enjoy certain political favors in a business way.

The great Napoleon would turn in his porphyry sarcophagus if he knew that the medal for heroism that he founded in 1802 had fallen so low as to be forced by politicians upon rich tradesmen who toss it away in a drawer like tickets they are forced to buy for a policeman's ball.

Criminals Caught Through Their Sweethearts

Recent Captures of "Wanted" Men and Desperadoes Who Have Escaped From Prison, Where Their Women Companions Have Unintentionally Betrayed Their Hideouts to the Police

Betty Werner, Chicago Sweetheart of Martin Durkin, "Sheik" Bandit Accused of Killing Three Officers. Her Apartment Was Watched Until Durkin Appeared, but He Shot His Way Out, Killing Two on the Way.

Mrs. Fred Burke, Innocent Country Bride of the Man Charged With a Dozen Murders, Contributed to His Capture by Constantly Changing $100 Bills.

Fannie Brice, Stage Star and Former Wife of the Notorious Crook and Jailbird, Nicky Arnstein, Who Arranged With the Police for the Appearance of Her Husband When It Became Convenient to Do So.

Edith M. Harrison, Secretary to W. E. Willard, Who Accompanied Him on an Auto Trip Across the Country. New York Police Wanted Him for a $500,000 Swindle and Caught Him in Seattle Through Tracing the Girl.

Dorothy Bolger, Whom Her Absconding Employer Followed Even After She Was Married to Another. She Was Shadowed and He Was Caught.

IT is a lucky thing for honest people that fugitive criminals cannot seem to keep away from tying up to some woman. A bandit may "shoot it out" with the police and get away, or a desperado may manage to escape from prison and successfully hide from the police if he will change his name and his clothes and the appearance of his face and do nothing to attract attention to his quiet and solitary existence.

But as soon as the "wanted" man sends for his old sweetheart or takes up with some new charmer, he has opened the door to discovery. Living his own life, nobody is likely to pay much attention to his coming and going. But as soon as he is tied up with a woman there are a hundred ways in which he may be betrayed. The curiosity and appraising eye of other women are at once focused on the pair, where no attention would have been given to the man alone.

What kind of clothes does she wear, and how does her husband make his money? If the pair move into a new community the women want to know where she came from and somebody is likely to have acquaintances in her native town. And the criminal's sweetheart herself is likely to do a little bragging and drop incautious remarks which may give the clue the police have been hoping for.

If "Killer" Nannery, one of the most desperate criminals in the United States, had not stopped in front of a small-town New Jersey drug store to let his sweetheart go in and buy a lipstick the other day he would still be free as he had been for the last two years since he walked out of Sing Sing Prison.

If "Two-Gun" Crowley had not thrown over his "moll" and taken up with a new charmer, Helen Walsh, the police would not have gotten the tip which enabled them to surround his hiding place in West 90th Street and captured him. So also, a few days ago, Mr. Joseph ("Silk Vest") Dinan, versatile burglar, bank robber and gunman, was sentenced to twenty-seven years in the penitentiary because police had put a watch on Ruth Donald, his lady friend, and she unintentionally led the detectives to him.

Gangdom recognizes this "skirt menace" and tries to regulate it. When a member is removed by bullet or prison sentence his "widow," unless she transfers her affections to another gangster, is likely to be taken for a ride as were Vivian Gordon, Anne Urbas, Alta Bonello and others for fear they might betray gang secrets. But while he is at large the criminal is supposed to watch his wives and sweethearts and take his chances. Like his liquor, he must have his women, though in moderation.

Gerald Chapman, the "super-bandit;" Jake Fleagle, Western train and bank robber; Martin Durkin, killer-bandit; Fred Burke, "worst criminal of the age," were all caught through the innocent actions of their wives or sweethearts. So have been dozens of other notorious criminals.

"Boston Billy," robber, murderer and terrorizer of Jesse Livermore and other Long Island millionaires, was traced by watching the home of a lady friend in Sound View, Connecticut. There he was caught, single-handed, by Gordon Hurley, a young police detective of Nassau County, N. Y., without a warrant or anything else but nerve and a gun.

When Nicky Arnstein ran away with a huge fortune in Liberty bonds the New York police made the strange blunder of not intercepting the mail of his wife, Fannie Brice, the actress. Had they taken that trouble they would have learned that he was living in Washington, D. C., and corresponding regularly as a dutiful husband should. But Fannie turned him in, anyway. She arranged with the District Attorney to accept $50,000 bail and for her friend, the late Arnold Rothstein, to put it up.

When everything was fixed she wrote Nicky and met him at the station with her car. Finding traffic upset by the annual police parade, they watched New York's finest march by, but not one of them recognized the man they were all after. Then they fell in behind the procession and, with this princely escort, drove down to police headquarters in Centre Street, where Mr. Arnstein gave himself up.

Fred ("Killer") Burke, often called the worst criminal of the age because at least twelve murders are charged against him, including the St. Valentine's massacre in Chicago, was a daring, resourceful and successful man, just the kind to lead a powerful gang. In spite of these qualifications he was a sort of lone wolf because other criminals were afraid of him on account of his women.

One woman is a natural risk and necessary evil that cannot be helped. Two of them more than double the risk because, besides offering two different clues for the police to follow, there is the chance of working on their jealousy. Burke's murderous heart was very tender toward pretty blondes, whom he could never resist, and he had a list of affairs even longer than his murder list. This shocked even the most desperate characters of the underworld, who prophesied that one of them would surely get him caught. One did.

The "Killer" had never troubled to marry any of them until he met the little country girl, Bonnie Gwendolyn Porter, who was as good as she was pretty. Burke was in hiding, posing as a country real estate dealer, near St. Joseph, Mo. He was introduced to Bonnie by her father, with whom Burke, as Realtor White, had business dealings. They fell in love almost at first sight and Burke knew that to get this girl he would have to marry her. So he did and settled down in a house on his father-in-law's farm. Of course, Bonnie had no idea that her bridegroom was the most notorious murderer of the age and the most eagerly wanted man by the police of a dozen cities.

All might have gone well if Burke had not had the well-known underworld vanity. He had the sense to dress and act like a moderately successful business man, but he could not resist the temptation of dressing his pretty little wife up "like a million dollars," and she saw no reason for not displaying her finery before the envious eyes of the other women who last year were wearing the previous season's clothes. It delighted him to note the awed silence when his wife flashed a hundred-dollar bill to make purchases. But he would not have been so happy had he known how the women talked of nothing else afterward but how any man could make such money in a hard-up farming community where anything bigger than a five had gotten to be a curiosity.

The women talked so much that finally they got the men to wondering and two amateur detectives thought they recognized in this indulgent husband the much-wanted "Killer." The police were notified and captured him in bed, sleeping as only the just are supposed to sleep. Chicago wanted him the most, but the Missouri authorities had little confidence in the courts of that city and gave their prisoner to officers from St. Joseph, Michigan, where he pleaded guilty to killing a policeman and was sentenced to life or till the parole board pleases to turn him loose on society again

Irma Sullivan, blacksmith's daughter and belle of Cornell, Illinois, went to Chicago and at a bathing beach flirted with Martin Durkin, Chicago's "sheik" bandit, as well-known in the West as was Gerald Chapman in the East. Mr. Durkin, however, neglected to tell her his claims to fame and she thought him just a big, rich business man. After that the boys in her home town did not look so good to Irma.

One day the "sheik" rolled into Cornell in one of the biggest, shiniest cars she had ever seen. A half hour's talk and she was pursuaded to elope. He graciously married her, but that didn't mean anything as he was not legally separated from at least one of his two previous wives. And Betty, another sweetheart, and the baby, were still in Chicago.

Irma and Durkin had a delightful honeymoon trip to Los Angeles in the great, gleaming car, which had been stolen in Chicago. That was one of Durkin's side lines—stealing automobiles, always of the most expensive make. When one broke down or the chase of pursuing officers got too hot, he simply abandoned that car and stole another.

Durkin was a bank and mail robber who never hesitated to shoot it out with officers. At least three were said to have been killed by him. Once, before he married Irma Sullivan, he was traced to a flat occupied by Betty Werner, the unmarried mother of the child attributed to Durkin. Although half a dozen policemen surrounded the building, Durkin shot his way out and escaped badly wounded. He left behind him the dead forms of a policeman and Betty's uncle, who got in the way of some one's bullet.

Durkin made his first mistake when he sent Irma to get new license plates for the honeymoon car in East St. Louis, Ill. The officers ascertained she was traveling with him and kept on the trail all the way to Los Angeles and back. The fugitive barely escaped a trap set for him in the California city. Durkin and his bride headed for Mexico, but their car broke down near Alpine, Tex. As he could not steal another car of the required power there, he acceded to his bride's tearful entreaties and bought railroad tickets for home. Federal officers arrived in Alpine shortly after Durkin's departure and in time to intercept by wire his train in St. Louis, Mo., where Durkin was surprised and arrested in his stateroom. Besides a 35-year sentence for murder, Durkin was given 15 years for auto thefts, so he is now serving a 50-year term if the probation enthusiasts don't let him out.

Gerald Chapman was another lone wolf and quite careful about women, but not quite careful enough. Previous to the spectacular $2,400,000 Leonard Street mail robbery in New York, Chapman had been living at No. 12 Gramercy Park with an attractive, dark-eyed young woman then 24 years old, slender and weighing little over 100 pounds. Occasionally they visited Broadway night clubs, but mostly they lived quietly, spending the evenings at home or in obscure little Greenwich Village restaurants. She was unaware that Chapman was the most daring bandit of the time. When he was arrested and sent to Atlanta for 25 years she married "for security" a Providence, R. I., business man.

After his escape from Atlanta prison, he occasionally corresponded with his former sweetheart. The letters were intercepted and the authorities were always close behind him. They knew he was in the vicinity of Muncie, Ind., when a series of safe-crackings occurred there. They trapped him, he was taken to Hartford, convicted of the slaying of a policeman in an interrupted department store robbery and finally hanged. The authorities shielded the woman's identity under the name of "Mrs. Betty Beeswax."

The fate of Jake Fleagle, train and bank robber and last of that type of wild West desperado, was a clear case of too many women. After the robbery of the First National Bank of Lamar, Colorado, in which four men were wantonly murdered, Jake escaped, though his brother Ralph and two others of the gang were caught and hanged. The officers learned that Jake had a sweetheart in Garden City, Kansas, called on that lady and had great luck.

She was annoyed because Jake had deserted her for another in southwestern Missouri. The detectives gratefully took the rival's address and visited her. Alas, Jake hadn't treated this one right, either, and she told them about a third at Hollister, Mo. When they arrived Mr. Fleagle was also calling and shot it out with the officers, dying with his boots on.

The other day W. E. Willard, New York promoter, who is charged with defrauding small investors of $500,000, was arrested in Seattle, Wash., with his secretary, Edith M. Harrison. They had made an extensive auto tour of the country. Willard had succeeded in covering his trail, but the girl could not. Police of many cities helped trace her to Seattle.

With his wife and family off his mind, the alleged absconder had joyfully set out with Miss Harrison for an auto trip. In a big sedan they drove down the Atlantic seaboard, across the Southern States, through Arizona, down to Tia Juana, up along the Pacific Coast, including San Diego, San Francisco and Seattle. When he ran short of ready cash, Willard did not bother to draw on the $500,000 he is accused of stealing, but simply cashed a worthless check. So impressive was his appearance that the Plaza Hotel in San Antonio and another hotel in Los Angeles trustfully honored his checks for $500 each.

Months later a Seattle printer became suspicious and notified the police when he received an order to print 500 expensive and impressive checks. The police watched to see who called for them. And along came Miss Harrison. They recognized her by the description and trailed her to the Piccadilly Hotel, where the much-wanted Mr. Willard awaited her. Most men can be inconspicuous when they want to be, but it seems almost impossible for a woman.

Fred G. Beale, Binghamton, N. Y., absconder, successfully evaded the police until he followed his secretary, Miss Dorothy Bolger, to Florida on her honeymoon with another man. Police knew of his infatuation for her, shadowed her and caught Beale in Miami.

PARIS, July 10.

THE pajama in recent years has taken an important place in the wardrobe of smart women. First it came out of the bedroom and onto the beach; now it has been promoted to the dining-room, and even, in the case of the divided skirt, to the ballroom itself.

There is a great deal of difference, however, between the divided skirt and the real pajama. The bifurcation in the second is very evident—it is even insisted upon; whereas in the first it is disguised in a number of ways—by its own fullness, by hanging panels and by the girdle, as in the model from Ardanse sketched on this page.

While many of the dressmaking houses, including Chanel, Worth, Lelong, Mainbocher, Schiaparelli and others, make divided evening skirts, I must say that I do not see a great many of them worn. I saw one or two at St. Moritz during the Winter sports season, and a few at Cannes in the Spring. However, the sponsors insist that they have a great future. Worth has a rather new version of them. Under a transparent lace skirt he puts a short, narrow pair of trousers with lace edges, coming four inches or so below the knees. Mainbocher made a great many skirts with long trousers under them, quite hidden, in his first collections. Later he made the full divided skirt that only shows in movement that it is in two parts instead of one. All these come in the category of regular evening dress.

Pajamas for the hostess are more varied and individual. They play the same role that used to be born by the tea gown in the days of long corsets. That is, they give a woman an opportunity to indulge her personal tastes and even her eccentricities to a high degree. They may be inspired by any historical epoch, any country or any clime. The model from Louise Boulanger, on this page, is quite Oriental. It begins with a blouse and full, straight trousers of a white broche silk material, rather exotic in weave. Over this is an interesting drapery of gold lame brocaded with red and white flowers. The lame appears again in the short cape worn over the blouse. This type of pajamas may be Turkish or Chinese; it may be reminiscent of man's modes in the romantic period; it may be Greek or Roman. One may experiment with it to one's heart's content.

Then there is what might be called the "dressmaker pajama," which is very much like a gown, apart from the fact that its skirt is divided. Differing from the evening gown with a divided skirt, being less formal in type, it still remains feminine and follows the general lines of the mode. An example, from Mitsou, is shown on this page in a combination of georgette and satin of a lovely tone of peach. Mitsou makes many pajamas for the actress, Spinelly, who was one of the first Parisiennes to adopt this type of garment, which she wore at tea time when receiving in her modernistic home.

It is on the beach that the pajama reigns supreme. But, oddly enough, not on all beaches. Deauville has never gone in very strongly for it, nor has Le Touquet. At Cap d'Antibes, Juan les Pins and the Lido it is so generally worn that a woman in a skirt would be rather remarkable.

Many types of beach pajamas are seen, and the trousers are of several different lengths—long, ankle, half way down the leg and quite short. The divided skirt, worn over a bathing suit, is perhaps the newest version. One from Mitsou is shown on this page. Mary Nowitsky must be credited with having developed the pajama for beach wear. She was the first specialist in this type and has carried the idea into all kinds of materials and many different forms. On the Riviera the pajama worn by the smartest women is very simple in cut and material. It is as often as not in the form of an overall, worn with a short jacket, sometimes sleeveless, often sleeved. It is made of linen, pique, tussore, or tulle de soie, or of crepe de Chine.

SCIENTISTS are constantly discovering new forms of living animals hitherto unknown, but they are mostly microscopic creatures or of small size, like insects. In earlier ages before the arrival of man on our earth, we know that there were huge creatures of strange features and sometimes of unwieldy bulk. Is it possible that there still remain some of these prehistoric creatures who have survived until modern times, hidden in some unknown part of the world where nobody has yet succeeded in capturing them?

While there are still some unexplored portions of the earth, yet it might seem evident that any large animals living there must be exactly the same as those in the neighboring zones which have been explored, since these creatures can pass from one region to the other without difficulty. And yet it is a mistake to conclude that there are no large, unknown animals. Indeed, during the last thirty years the existence of a number of them has been recognized, although it has not been possible in every instance to prove this by indisputable testimony, such as would be supplied by bringing back their bodies, dead or alive.

A number of discoveries have been made concerning these mysterious beasts since the beginning of the present century, and they have presented fascinating mysteries to science. The list of them is far from being ended and there is reason to believe that science will be given astonishing surprises in the near future. e recall very briefly a few established facts which have been proved before going into detail more fully on the puzzles of the same kind which have not yet been solved.

In the first class of facts, the most remarkable is the discovery of the celebrated Okapi for the first time by Johnston. It is known that the Okapi is a large ruminant animal, representing a stage of development between the antelopes and the giraffe, and which resembles very closely no other animal except a fossil form which became extinct in the Tertiary period and is now known as the Helladotherium.

Johnston first became aware of the existence of this mysterious animal from seeing fragments of its skin used as a covering for shields among the negroes of the Congo. These fragments, which came from the thighs of the animal, were of a purple-brown tint striped with white, tan and black, which caused the naturalist to think at first that it might be a kind of zebra of an unknown species.

He started to search for it in the unexplored forest. But the native guides led him upon the tracks of a great mammal with a cloven foot like that of the deer. He did not care to follow any further the tracks shown to him, which he refused to believe were those of the animal he was seeking. At this time he believed he ought to look for an animal of the horse type, which has an undivided hoof.

As the neighborhood was an unhealthy one, which made the continuation of the hunt almost impossible, Johnston went away without having seen the Okapi. But some time later a Swedish officer, Captain Eriksson, was able to obtain a complete skin and two skulls of the mysterious animal from the natives. Scientists at once saw that the animal differed entirely from all living mammals of which there is any description. New expeditions were then organized. It was only after long and arduous efforts that they were able to find the animal. Since that time it has been possible to capture specimens alive. In 1919 an Okapi lived several months in captivity for the first time. This occurred at the menagerie at Antwerp.

These events prove the surprising fact that we lived into the twentieth century before learning of the existence of a large vertebrate animal of an entirely new species, representing a type which science had believed had disappeared for thousands of years. Such a case, even if it were not a solitary one, proves that our earth has not yet finished revealing to us its most mysterious secrets. But this case is not an isolated one, and we will now consider some others still more curious.

Stanley, when he was exploring the unknown interior of East Africa, was accustomed to say that all the strangest things the world was concealing from man must be there. The discoveries of his successors show that he was right to a large degree.

A few years before the great war, some explorers in the service of the celebrated Hagenbeck menagerie, which is located near Hamburg, in Germany, reported that they had seen on the west side of Lake Tanganyika some strange animals which they had unsuccessfully tried to capture. The description they gave of them was so extraordinary that their statements were not taken very seriously. They asserted that these animals bore a strong resemblance to the mysterious reptiles of an earlier geological period, such as the Diplodocus. This statement appeared incredible. Nevertheless, the descriptions of various independent observers agreed with one another. The reports of the Hagenbeck men were not investigated further.

Shortly afterwards some English officers, and a few months later some Belgian officers, called by their duties to the same region, reported also that they had seen enormous animals appearing, according to the exact expression some of them used, "to date from another epoch," and which unfortunately they had not been able to approach on account of the insurmountable difficulties of the vast marshes in which they were seen. The character and good faith of the witnesses in this case could not be questioned. Such facts called for the serious investigation of scientists, and plans were discussed of learning the truth about this mystery.

Then the war came and made such investigations impossible. But when it was over, the investigation was renewed. At the end of 1919, two Belgian explorers, M. Copelle and M. Le Page, were going through a totally unexplored region on the right bank of the upper Congo. Here they observed strange footprints extending over a distance of fifteen miles, which led them into view at last of an extraordinary animal, much larger than an elephant, with a humped back and a powerful tail, similar to that of a kangaroo, and whose body seemed to be covered with scales. They fired several rifle shots at it but the monster was able to move quickly and disappeared. They were not able to find it again.

The footprints and the testimony of the two hunters, who are perfectly honorable persons, remained to be considered. The documents which they brought back were examined by distinguished scientists. Their unanimous opinion was that the animal in question was very nearly like the Brontosaurus, a formidable reptile with a body 65 feet long and of a race which was believed to be extinct on earth many thousands of years before the appearance of the first man.

What conclusions are we to draw from these facts? It is impossible at the present moment to answer this question definitely. A mission was sent a short time ago to examine the country where this monster was reported, but has not been able to settle the question. The majority of the members died on their journey while endeavoring to fight their way through almost insurmountable obstacles. All that can be said is that the mystery is a real one and that it is one of the most fascinating to the human mind of which we have any hint. But it is not the only one, as we shall see.

We will pass rapidly over the problematic existence of the famous "sea serpent," which for a century has periodically been discussed in the newspapers.

It is a mistake to treat this question as merely a subject for humor. There is certainly a large element of truth in the many reports which have been made of the appearance of the sea serpent. The authors, by reason of their position, cannot be suspected of romancing. Many of them are naval officers, such as Captain MacQuhae, commander of H. M. S. Daedalus; Captain Lagresille and his sailors of the French warship Avalanche, and Lieutenant l'Eost, of the French ship Decidee. The French officers reported the appearance of this creature in 1897, 1898 and 1904.

In connection with the report of Lieutenant l'Eost concerning what this naval officer had seen, I had personally an opportunity to receive the opinion of my illustrious and regretted masters, E. Vaillant, Professor of the Museum at Paris, and Professor A. M. Giard, of the Academy of Science. These distinguished scientists, upon the strength of documents which they had collected, were persuaded that the fabulous sea serpent which is periodically observed in the Bay of Along, in Tonkin, itself one of the geological enigmas of the universe, was not in the least a myth and most probably resembled the large sea animals of earlier geological periods, such as the Plesiosaurus and their cousins, which swarmed in the ancient seas. Reproductions of them are given herewith.

It is, however, not unreasonable to think that the oceans, which are of such great depth and vast extent, and which have only been explored recently, conceal many mysteries. It is practically on account of their immensity that the difficulties of discovering strange animals are greater than on land. Uncertainty is still very great on the subject of unknown marine animals, and so we will not push this subject any further but pass to more specific and positive cases.

For many years the natives of Tierra del Fuego, the lonely group of islands at the extreme southern end of South America, have asserted that there are large strange animals in the most inaccessible regions of their mountains. The natives say that they have met these beasts on very rare occasions at night at the entrance of the subterranean caverns in which these creatures take refuge during the day.

The description which the natives give resembles quite closely the great Edentate, or toothless animals of the type of the extinct Glyptodons. They are a kind of gigantic armadillo, about the size of donkeys, covered with a rigid shell, and lived in America in the Tertiary epoch.

The savages of all countries believe in so many fables that scientists would have given the report no more credit than it deserved, if recent facts had not come to support it in a singularly interesting manner. A few years ago some European travelers, exploring the extreme south of Patagonia, discovered in a cave near Ultima Speranza the skin of a large animal to which some of the flesh and hair was still adhering, as well as the remains of the small bones of the feet, which were similar to those of the Glyptodon and its cousin, the Mylodon. All these vestiges were very fresh and belonged to an animal recently dead. A still more curious fact was that the remains of this strange animal rested on a thick couch of refuse, proving that the beast had always lived in this cave.

According to the Natives of New Zealand, the Epiornis, an Enormous Primeval Bird, Exists Today in the Remote Mountains of This Country. But in This Case the Witnesses Are Less Certain of Their Facts, and It Is Probable That They Are Only Speaking of a Lost Species, But Which Lived at a More Recent Period Than Was Once Believed.

Another remarkable discovery was then made in another region of the same country, near Rio Salado, where the explorer Oates found the remains of another Glyptodon, which gave evidence that it also had died recently.

These facts proved that the stories of the natives are not inventions. This large animal, to which no known existing allied species can be compared in size and shape, must either exist today or have become extinct in recent times, and not before the appearance of man, as was believed previously.

It should be added that the skeleton of an animal nearly related to the Glyptodon was also discovered in Argentina. It was pierced by an arrow which had lodged in the spinal column. The point of this arrow was of quartzite fashioned in the "willow leaf form," and is identical with the arrows which the natives of the region use today.

The discovery of the recent remains of these species proves that statements furnished by the inhabitants of imperfectly explored countries have an importance which should not be despised or overlooked. In the same line of reasoning, it is interesting to quote the unanimous opinion of the savages of the Waipu tribe in New Zealand, who informed the explorer Colenso of the existence in inaccessible parts of their mountains of gigantic birds of which they were in great fear, and some bones of which this traveler actually found. In this instance it is more than probable that the birds were actually extinct and that the tribes had only preserved the tradition of their existence from the times of their ancestors.

Several similar instances might be cited, but we cannot discuss all of them and we will conclude by mentioning the most mysterious and dramatic instance in the whole list.

From the time of the conquest of Mexico by the Spaniards down to modern times, one problem especially remained insoluble in the opinion of naturalists and archeologists. This problem was the occurrence in the Maya monuments of Yucatan of large statues representing monkeys of a distinctly anthropoid form, more like man, indeed, than the gorillas and orang-utans are.

Now we know, or, rather, we thought we did until recently, that no anthropoid monkey has ever existed in America, and scientists have lost their way in interminable suppositions concerning the origin of these statues. The only document to which any credence could be given only helped to make the mystery deeper. This is a text of the "Cronica del Peru," by Pietro Cieza de Leon, written in the Sixteenth Century.

This distinguished author states:

"There are very large female monkeys in this country, which are daughters of devils, with the head of a man and the feet and hands of monkeys. Some of them are so much like the human race that men have married them. They have no language, but utter a plaintive wailing."

Some commentators have suggested humorously that the reason why men married them was that they had no language.

It was only about 1883 that investigators began to see their way through this puzzle. A Spanish missionary, Father Juan Rivero, of the Jesuit Order, saw one day on Mt. Macaguane, in the country of the Betoyas Indians, an extraordinary creature who stood upright on his feet like a man. He had the face of a man, but his body was thickly covered with hair and his limbs appeared to be those of a monkey. As soon as this animal saw the travelers he uttered plaintive cries and fled into the forest. They were not able to find him again. The question still remained a mystery, but a new fact was reported recently which added to the certainty that this creature existed and greatly increased the interest felt in the subject.

In 1917 a French scientist, M. de Loys, led a geological expedition into the virgin forests which are found in the country of the Motilones Indians, who have remained absolute savages. The country lies along the borders of Venezuela and Colombia.

The behavior of the Indians rendered the task of the explorer very difficult. Out of twenty men who accompanied the explorer, he was only able to bring back four alive after three years of cruel hardships. The others had either died from fever or been killed by the arrows of invisible enemies. Monsieur de Loys himself was wounded by one of these arrows. It was only after the most desperate struggles that the survivors were able to escape.

In the course of their perilous journey the party camped one day on the bank of a tributary on the left side of the upper Tarra river. Suddenly they heard a noise in the forest and soon saw two creatures come out who stood on their feet after the manner of men. They were in a state of great fury, shrieked, broke off branches of trees which they flourished like clubs, and threw projectiles which they drew from their own bodies.

In answer to these threats the explorers fired several rifle shots. The female of the strange couple, who was walking in front, was killed and the male disappeared. The explorers dissected the fallen animal and intended to preserve the body, but the exposition found itself in such extreme danger that the pieces were lost one after another and the four survivors had great difficulty in saving their own lives. It is, therefore, only from their descriptions that the extraordinary animal can be reconstructed.

They said that its head was particularly remarkable, having a face very highly developed in proportion to the jaws. The legs were noticeably longer than those of the gorilla and the orang-utan and showed a human character in their proportions. The height of the animal was about five feet, which is a common height among savages and the smaller races of men, and greatly exceeds that of all hitherto known American monkeys.

Commenting on Dr. de Loys's remarkable discovery, Professor Francis M. Ashley-Montagu, of the Royal Anthropological Institute of Great Britain, says no Old World monkey reaches the height of 5 feet 2 inches (the height of this South American monkey), nor the weight of 115 pounds. This is the height and weight of an average human being. He then continues:

"It has ever been the custom to deride the new discovery of apes—the classical case of Du Chaillu and the gorilla is yet fresh within living memory (1859-65)—while the story of the acrimonious battles which have raged over the discovery of the remains of extinct races of man is too well known to require any amplification here. Let us here bear these events in mind, and endeavor not to commit a like injustice."

It might be supposed that in the realm of bird life there remained little or nothing unknown to man. While an animal might be restricted to some jungle or remote and unexplored spot, owing to mountain barriers, rivers or other natural limitations—yet the birds could easily overcome such barriers.

And yet new forms of bird life are constantly being discovered. In mountain ranges, on isolated peaks or on islands off the mainland remarkable discoveries of new birds have been made. Prof. G. L. Bates, the well-known naturalist and collector, has recently returned from a trip across Africa in the interests of the British Museum. He was rewarded by securing many new feathered creatures never before seen or reported by naturalists. And there are many other similar instances.

These facts are now giving a great deal of concern to scientists and place the statements of old authors and the monuments of ancient races such as we have mentioned, in a new light.

They show that in the depths of remote forests important secrets are still concealed which, if they should be one day cleared up, would furnish us with information of inestimable value. They prove, indeed, as we suggested at the beginning of this article, that upon the earth where we dwell and whose inhabitants we thought until recently were entirely known to us, there remain to be discovered some very important and curious creatures.

Lava Love — by Inez Castello

The Gripping Story of a Girl Who Fought Against Her Own Heart

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

BEAUTIFUL Adora Vernon is persuaded on the yacht Sea-Spray to take a cruise in the South Seas. She becomes embarrassing when Nicky Armstrong, the owner, makes clandestine love to her. Nicky's wife discovers the affair and innocent Adora is drugged and left behind at Saranoa at the plantation of Carlos de Velasquinez, a former admirer of hers.

The Spaniard makes her an offer of marriage but head-strong Adora refuses and escapes to Saranoa, where she falls into the hands of Manoel da Costa, a Portuguese innkeeper. Carlos rescues her and returns her to his plantation. Under the ardor of his love-making Adora feels herself wakening.

She decides to marry Carlos, but determines to tantalize him a bit before she surrenders. She is about to confess her love when Conchita Mendez and her brother Luiz arrive unexpectedly for a visit. The Spaniard introduces Adora as his wife to save her reputation.

Conchita is furious, as she hoped to marry Carlos for his wealth and titles. They trick Adora into admitting that she is not married and then manage to discredit her and Carlos with each other. An earthquake drives Adora into the Spaniard's arms, all misunderstandings are swept away and they agree to be married in the morning.

While Carlos is after the priest, Luiz, now madly infatuated with Adora, has her kidnaped by da Costa. They make it appear that Adora has drowned herself and hold her prisoner in the house of da Costa's nephew, Jaime.

Carlos is suspicious of Conchita and in order to trap her says he will marry her when Adora's body is found, or at Conchita's suggestion, when he is convinced Adora does not wish to marry him. The Spanish girl persuades her brother to force Adora to write a letter to that effect.

Da Costa intends to keep Adora for himself but Luiz finds the hiding place as the innkeeper is attempting to force his attentions upon her. Luiz threatens to make her death a reality or leave her to da Costa unless she writes the letter, then offers to put her aboard a ship for England in return for the letter and her promise never to see Carlos again.

Adora writes it and when it is completed there is a terrific earthquake shock and the volcano Pellarossa begins to erupt. Luiz flees and she is able to escape to the castello, where she finds Don Carlos and Conchita in a passionate embrace. The Spaniard is merely reassuring Conchita in her terror but Adora believes he has forgotten her already and allows him to depart to aid in the rescue work at Saranoa without disclosing herself.

When Conchita discovers Adora the Spanish girl is desperate enough to murder her if necessary. She is only prevented by the arrival of a priest who intimates that Carlos has been killed. They return to Saranoa with the priest, where all but Conchita engage in rescue work as the disturbance subsides.

Conchita discovers that Carlos is not dead but has been hidden by the priest until his injuries mend and he knows whom he can trust. He is about to disclose himself and unmask their villainy. Desperate, Conchita and Luiz lure Adora aboard a steamer bound for the mainland, determined that she shall not have Carlos.

"Love," Don Carlos Said Softly, Kissing Adora. "Is a victory over self. It does not mean passion alone. It conquers even while it surrenders."

CHAPTER XXIX.

Deceived Again.

THE vessel, which was called the Castilian, did not impress Adora at all. It was a weather-beaten cargo-boat, with little accommodation for passengers. The cabin which was given to Adora was tiny and horribly stuffy and not too clean. The captain was a squat and heavy-bodied fellow with a brutal face. The crew were a mixed lot, and did not strike Adora as too well disciplined.

When compared with the beauty and the luxury of the Sea-Spray and other vessels in which she had traveled, this boat was mean and loathsome. However, she was—Adora decided—the only alternative to a longer stay in Saranoa, vivid in its wreckage—her widowed love.

From the deck of the Castilian that late afternoon she gazed at Saranoa, where—so far as she was aware—Carlos was buried; and the tears came into her eyes. There came to her as well a strange feeling, a sense of foreboding, as though she were taking some false step! The more she looked at Saranoa the more she felt that she was wrong in leaving the place. It seemed to her that, in doing so, she was losing the better part of herself.

The sensation became so pronounced in her that she grew alarmed, inclined to panic, even so much as to feel like leaping over the taffrail into the sea and swimming ashore, if there were no other way of returning. And then she controlled herself, feeling herself to be foolish. She went into her cabin and occupied herself writing to Father Ignatius. Luiz having promised—with no intention of fulfilling his word—to have the letter sent ashore.

But, before she had done more than pen a line or two of this, her cabin door was opened furtively and someone entered in the growing dusk, shutting the door behind him. Thinking it must be Conchita, Adora turned, to discover the grimed figure of a man, at whom she gazed in growing surprise, his face suddenly familiar to her.

"Why—it is surely Jaime?" she said under her breath, remembering that nephew of da Costa who had tried to befriend her by letting Carlos know her whereabouts when she was in the hands of the inn-keeper, and had been locked up in prison on some excuse to prevent that from happening.

Jaime nodded, making to her a sign suggesting alarm in case he was discovered there; and ordinarily Adora would have resented that fact, but now she remembered his earlier friendliness and concluded he still felt the same towards her.

"What are you doing here, Jaime?" she asked under her breath.

"I saw you come on board," he said softly, "and I am one of the crew. Why are you on board, senorita? Is not all well now with you and Don Carlos?"

"How can you ask that?" whispered Adora. "But perhaps you do not know that Don Carlos is dead?"

"That I do not!" he answered, looking at her in surprise. "That, senorita, I certainly do not."

"He is. Father Ignatius told me so. He was buried under a house near the church while he was doing rescue work during the earthquake."

"Father Ignatius told you that?" murmured Jaime in still further surprise. "If so, I do not understand such a thing. The father is a priest, and—priests do not lie."

"Lie?" Adora stared in the gloom of dusk at the face of Jaime with its scarred cheek and puzzled eyes. "What do you mean?" she asked, puzzled as himself.

"This," he said. "True it is that Don Carlos was hurt by that falling building. But he was not killed. That I do know. How? I will tell the senorita. I myself helped the father to rescue Don Carlos. I myself helped to carry him to the church, to a crypt under the church. Also, only yesterday before I joined the crew of this boat to work my way to the mainland, I saw Father Ignatius, and he told me that Don Carlos was now almost recovered from the wound he received, and would be about again in a day or two."

"You really mean that?" Adora gasped, incredulous, and yet suddenly realizing the man was telling nothing but the truth.

"I swear it!" he answered and crossed himself piously, as he added: "I swear it. The thing is true, and if you did not know it—"

"If I had known it, Jaime, I should never have been here. But—why did Father Ignatius not tell me and—the others the truth?"

"He only can say. But—" Jaime glanced furtively round at the cabin door—"the others—the Senor and Senorita Mendez—they are not your friends. I mistrust them, and I heard Don Luiz talking to the captain in such a way as made me mistrust him still more. That is why I came here secretly, senorita. I think—from what little I overheard—that he must have known the truth. Did he not persuade you to come on board this boat?"

"He and his sister between them—yes!" nodded Adora, now thoroughly frightened. "Do you mean that they—?"

"Have trapped you, senorita. That is what has happened. They discovered Don Carlos to be alive, and remembering how they and my uncle hid you away and made it look as if you were dead, they are afraid and are taking you from him without you knowing it. But now I have told you—"

"You must help me get back ashore, Jaime!" Adora urged frantically, laying little hands appealingly on his arm.

"How?" he muttered. "That is not going to be easy unless one swam ashore. To do that one risks the sharks which are hereabouts in numbers. However—"

At this moment, through the cabin porthole, the voice of Luiz could be heard approaching, calling to Adora. Jaime shrank back into the shadows, urging her towards the door.

"Do you go and meet him, senorita," he whispered. "Lead him from here along the deck, so that I can slip away unseen. I will do whatever can be done..."

Adora went out on to the deck, closing the cabin door behind her. And now Luiz appeared to her in a new light, or rather that old light in which she had feared and hated him. Carlos alive, after all! But—why had Father Ignatius hidden the fact? Adora could not understand it at all. Meantime, trying to appear unperturbed, she moved along the deck to meet Luiz, suddenly aware that the Castilian was no longer at anchor. She was moving slowly through the water.

"We have actually started?" she gasped as she reached Luiz.

"At last, querida mia," he answered. "I thought we should never get under way. And now Saranoa will see us no more."

"But—I want to go back there!" Adora said frenziedly.

"Go back, loveliest? But—why?"

Without disclosing the source of her information, and so perhaps losing her one hope of rescue, Adora could not explain her knowledge. She hinted at it, however, in a round-about fashion.

"Something keeps on telling

Don't be short-changed on vacation

POST'S BRAN FLAKES—a regulator, to balance the modern diet. It gives you bran, with other parts of wheat. Eaten by more people than any other bran cereal. There are now two Post's bran cereals, both delicious

WHOLE BRAN is new. Full strength bran for stubborn or chronic cases of constipation due to insufficient bulk in the diet. So effective that 2 tablespoons make an adequate serving for most people. There are now two Post's bran cereals, both delicious

It's 9 to 1 you need bran.... get the kind you need

SOON you'll be on vacation. Vacation! To put fresh color in your cheeks, new spring in your step, new flash in your smile—to build up buoyant good health for another year.

But one oversight may "short-change" you—one small neglect may take away some part of the good a vacation brings to you.

Particularly when you are "on the go"—guard against faulty elimination. Strange meals in strange places may not give you the balanced diet, the wholesome bulk which you need to cleanse the system of digestive wastes. It's 9 to 1 you need bran at any time—but on vacation it is even more important.

Nature's food—in delicious form

Obviously not everyone needs more bulk food in the same degree. That's why there are two Post's cereals, each deliciously tempting to eat, each containing bran, but in different measure.

Post's Bran Flakes is a regulator. Bran with other parts of wheat. It supplies the bulk food which most of us need; even those who aren't aware of the fact. Post's Bran Flakes belongs on just about every breakfast table. It is on millions of them. For these dainty toasted amber flakes, so flavory and alluring, are eaten by more families than any other bran food in the world.

Whole Bran is for stubborn or chronic constipation due to insufficient bulk in the diet. It is full strength bran. Just as effective as any full strength bran cereal but a triumph of taste. You will want to eat these crisp, crunchy little shreds with milk or cream, or sprinkled over fruit or berries. Two tablespoons make an effective serving. An irresistible way to serve Whole Bran is in muffins—puffy, golden morsels that melt in the mouth. The new recipe is on the package.

Remember these two names, "POST'S BRAN FLAKES" and "WHOLE BRAN." In hotels, on trains or boats, at camps, you can get each in a convenient individual package—just the same as you can order each from your grocer for use in the home.

Constipation, due to insufficient bulk in the diet, should yield to one of these cereals. If your case is abnormal, consult a competent physician at once and follow his advice

SEND BOX TOPS FOR GLASS CEREAL SET

This charming green glass set consists of bowl and saucer for cereal and many other uses. They were first offered by us through grocers in certain parts of the country, but so many women expressed a desire to build up complete collections of these dainty dishes that we decided to make the offer general.

Just save the tops of the boxes containing Whole Bran and Post's Bran Flakes (either or both) and send them with a few cents as stated in the coupon below. You will soon have enough of these cereal sets for the whole family. And they make delightful gifts.

The coupon is for your convenience but it is not necessary to use it in ordering the dishes.

Fear Of Fear

By Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements

Chanda Does Everything for Otto—Is His Nurse, His Secretary, and Even Assists Him in His Laboratory.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

NORAH FALLON, beautiful musical comedy and picture star, is being blackmailed by Harlan Grant, a fashionable medium and astrological adviser on business, horoscopes and love affairs of Hollywood notables. Grant, who is in love with Norah, threatens to use certain details of her past which have come into his possession to try to separate her from her fiancé, Dick Stoddard, a wealthy scientist.

Norah is consulting Jimmy Lane, author and amateur criminologist, and his friend Phil Carter, a lawyer, about her troubles with Grant when they receive word that the medium has been discovered dead in his seance room, his face twisted in an expression of horror.

Lane and Carter learn from Corrigan, a reporter, that the police believe Grant was murdered by a blow on the back of the head and are looking for Dick Stoddard, who was heard quarreling with the medium and is the last person known to have been with him.

Then Inferior Colonel Grant, the medium's brother, who tells them that Grant's murder, herself a famous medium, died of apoplexy, her face twisted in an expression of horror, although her followers believed she was murdered by the spirits she invoked. Harlan, however, contended that she was killed by the fear of fear. As reward he went to India with his brother and became a student of the occult. When the Colonel's wife died they came to San Francisco where his daughter Chanda married a German chemist, Otto Steeb. The brothers bought adjoining houses on Russian Hill and were later joined by Dr. Herbert Waverly, an old friend from India, who purchased the third house on the Hill.

Captain Hemming, Chief of the Detective Bureau, learns from the Colonel that he and Singh, Harlan's Indian servant, called the medium about noon and when he did not answer forced the door, which was bolted from the inside. There was no other means of entering the room.

As the body has been embalmed it is impossible to determine if poison was present.

Stoddard returns via boat to San Francisco and testifies that he was with Grant from eleven-fifteen until twelve Monday night and they quarreled over the papers with which Grant was threatening to blackmail Norah Fallon, that they came to an amicable agreement before he left and that he heard Grant shoot the bolt in the door as he went downstairs.

Both Colonel Grant and Stoddard agree that Grant seemed nervous and worried about something, and that there was an odor of jasmine in the room.

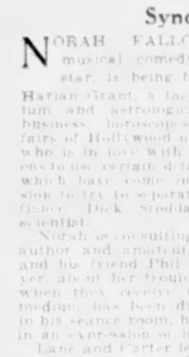
Norah Fallon and the Colonel have both got the phrase, "fear of fear," from Grant. In Norah's case it was scrawled on a contract, in the Colonel's it was spoken by Grant himself.

The situation looks bad for Stoddard. The police believe he is guilty of the murder but are holding off from an arrest until they can prove how he managed to murder Grant and yet leave the door bolted on the inside.

Captain Hemming questions Dr. Waverly, whose dead wife's spirit Grant often brought back. The Doctor believes the medium was genuine as his wife's spirit repeated intimate details of their life together.

CHAPTER XI.

"The Lady Elfrieda."



"YOU knew Colonel Grant in India, too, I presume?" Captain Hemming asked, continuing his interrogation of Dr. Waverly.

"No; I never saw the Colonel in India," the Doctor answered. "He and Harlan were at odds for a good many years. Didn't make it up until just before they came to this country."

"Do you know what they quarreled about?"

"It had something to do with the Colonel's marriage. His wife was a foreigner, and Harlan objected to her. Both he and the Colonel had quick tempers and they quarreled violently. Even after Mrs. Grant died they remained at odds until Chanda grew up and reconciled them."

"Is Mrs. Steeb the Colonel's only child?"

"Yes; she was born in Chanda ... a place in the center of India. Her mother died when she was a baby and she was brought up in a mission school ... which accounts for her little oddities."

"She's odd is she?" inquired the Chief keenly, and the Doctor hastened to explain.

"I've probably used the wrong word. It's just that she's different from most of the young women of today."

"What's her husband like?" Jimmy asked.

"Steeb's rather a difficult chap. He's a cripple ... from infantile paralysis in his youth. It's made him abnormally sensitive and ... him a horror of meeting ... He keeps himself shut ... for the most part, on the ... floor, in his laboratory."

"Just what is his line?"

"Research chemistry. He's been working on a new developing ... for a company which manufactures motion picture film. He thinks he's hit on a formula that will save an immense amount of money. I hope he's right, because, so far, his work hasn't paid well, and they've had to live off the Colonel, which is difficult for Chanda."

"How on earth did a girl like that happen to marry such a fellow?" I asked. "It seems incredible."

"Not if you knew Chanda. She's the kindest person in the world ... always bringing home starving dogs and cats to feed and care for. Otto was down and out, and she married him in exactly the same spirit as she'd pick up a maimed animal.

"Chanda does everything for Otto—is his nurse, his secretary, and even assists him in his laboratory. Whatever work he accomplishes will be largely due to her. Not that he appreciates the fact. His physical condition has made him egotistical and he's so insufferably conceited that he's almost impossible to live with."

"The Colonel must adore his son-in-law," Jimmy said ironically.

The Doctor smiled. "Well, hardly; they fought like cat and dog the first year, and my friend Harlan sided with his brother. There used to be some pretty fierce encounters among the three of them, but lately they've been more friendly. Harlan confided to me one night that he'd begun to have a great respect for Steeb, really thought he was going to amount to something. I gathered that he and the Colonel contemplated backing him in his researches."

The Chief sighed with disappointment. "I was hoping, from what you first said, that he might have quarreled with Grant and been the one who polished him off."

"They might easily have quarreled," agreed the Doctor, "but I'm afraid you'll have to cross him off your list. To my certain knowledge, he has never been in Grant's study. His crippled condition makes it almost impossible for him to get about."

"Who else is living in the two houses?" the Chief asked.

"Only the servants—Singh and Lalah, his wife. Singh was with Harlan for over twenty years; and, during the time we were stationed in the same district, Lalah used to act as my wife's maid. Now she helps Chanda Steeb around the house. Singh's work was mostly with Grant in his researches, and handling the people who came to the house. He's really a brainy chap and from good people ... had a year or two at Oxford when he was young. He was more of a secretary than a servant."

"Have you any reason to believe—" The Chief was beginning when the door opened and McCarthy came in apologetically.

"Sorry to bother you, Captain, but that Chapman nut insists on seeing you. Swears it's important."

The Chief sighed. "All right, send her in." And as Dr. Waverly started to rise, he shook his head. "Wait a minute, do you know this Chapman woman?"

"Only as I have met her at the Grant's. She was originally one of Chanda's friends. They were both interested in the question of international peace, I believe, and got acquainted in that way. Later Mrs. Chapman became one of Harlan's devotees."

"Do you think she's all there ... mentally, I mean?"

The Doctor chuckled. "I don't believe there's anything actually wrong with her, although she's more or less unbalanced and apt to go to extremes. She was pretty much of a nuisance to Harlan ... sentimental and all that. Used to use every pretext for hanging around him. He was constantly trying to get rid of her."

"Oh, he was, was he?" I saw that the Chief was interested, but before he could ask anything more the door opened and McCarthy ushered the Lady Elfrieda into the room.

The Lady Elfrieda; it was Jimmy, with his fatal propensity for nicknames, that had bestowed the title and, because of its absolute incongruity, it was adopted by us all. She was a dumpy little woman with scrambled hair which wavered uncertainly between red and purple; she smiled perpetually and her voice babbled along in a ceaseless monologue, not quite normal in its incoherence. To hear her talk, everything was "sweet" and "lovely" in this best of all possible worlds, but there was a strained look about her eyes which belied her words.

Not quite all on the surface, the Lady Elfrieda, I decided, and difficult to handle. That the Chief

NAZIMOVA SAYS, "I am over 40 years old!"

Famous stage and screen star declares years need not rob you of Youth

"ONLY the woman who looks it is afraid to admit her age," says Nazimova. "But I am proud of mine—look at me—I am over forty!

"It is easy to be lovely at sixteen, but to be still lovelier at forty ... well, that is easy, too, if a woman is wise! Actresses rarely look their age, you notice. Like me, they guard their complexions with Lux Toilet Soap.

"It is a marvel, that soap. For years I have been faithful to it—and my skin is so soft, so smooth. A woman's age is not the measure of her charm—oh, no."

How 9 out of 10 screen stars guard complexion beauty

Nazimova is only one of countless perpetually youthful stage and screen stars who use Lux Toilet Soap to guard complexion beauty.

Of the 613 important Hollywood actresses, including all stars, actually 605 use this fragrant white soap regularly. Surely your skin should have this gentle, luxurious care!

NAZIMOVA. Who would guess, looking at this recent photograph, that she is over 40! More fascinating than ever she seems, this star who won early stage fame in The Doll's House, became a favorite of the screen in such hits as Salome, and returned to the stage recently in The Cherry Orchard.

The Long, Long Road From Him—To You

The long, long struggle for personal power that ends with us at the wheel of our automobile.

"I've bought me a car," we say, quite casually. "I've bought me an automobile." And it never seems to enter our minds that at last we have acquired the substance of all the longing of all mankind since this first poor, shivering wretch hopped about in the tall grass, shuddering at shadows, so very long ago.

"I've bought me an automobile."

And what we are saying is, "I have acquired the highest form of personal power that has thus far been known to man."

* * * * *

Throughout the greater part of this long, long past you in your automobile might have ruled the world.

If you had been in early Persia, you might have led the vast army that invaded Greece, and there probably would have been no battle of Thermopylae. The Spartans would have fallen down before you in awe and fear.

If you had driven up to the Palatine Hill in almost any period of the Roman Empire, you probably would have been made Emperor of Rome.

If you had come in the later ages, the very kings bumping about in their gilded coaches would have envied you your speed and your deep-seated luxury.

You in your automobile have a personal power within yourself greater than any of these rulers of men ever dreamed of throughout the long, long past.

We must have sensed this thing from the start. We must have known that this was the thing the world had been striving for through all the centuries. Nothing else could account for the production of over forty million automobiles in a little over thirty years.

"I've bought me an automobile," we say in our colloquial way. Millions of others have said the same. And what we are really saying is, "I have acquired the highest sense of personal power that has thus far been known to man. And in my automobile my age-old desire for personal power has been satisfied."

Fear Of Fear

By Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements

and McCarthy shared my opinion, I was sure, but Jimmy seemed entranced by the woman. He hung upon her words as though they were precious pearls, encouraging her when the flood of her speech seemed to lessen. Not that she needed encouragement. She was talking steadily when she entered the room, emphasizing every fourth or fifth word irrespective of syntax, and she practically never stopped during the ensuing half hour.

"Oh, Captain, I've been trying and trying to see you, but they simply wouldn't let me in—although I explained just how important it was—oh, I didn't know you had other people with you! How do you do, Dr. Waverly? And this is Mr. Lane, isn't it? They pointed you out at the inquest. I've read practically every word you've written and seen all your plays, Mr. Lane, and I'd dearly love to talk with you some day about some perfectly splendid ideas . . . I've always felt sure I could write if only I had someone to put things down for me. I have such lovely thoughts to give the world."

The Chief coughed. "No doubt . . . no doubt," he said, "but we haven't time to listen to them now, Mrs. Chapman. I'm extremely busy today."

The Lady Elfrieda abruptly switched her attention to him. "You really oughtn't to allow your psyche to be thrown out of tune by adverse vibrations, Captain," she said. "Oh, don't try to deny it, I can see that it is! You should cultivate a serene soul. Three minutes every hour of silent affirmation would do it, only three minutes out of each hour."

The Chief's psyche went even more violently out of tune. "Is that what you came in to tell me?" he roared.

"Oh, dear me, no! I came in to ask you not to bother that nice Mr. Stoddard because of anything I said. If I'd known you were going to take it in such an unpleasant way I'd never have said anything about his quarrel with Mr. Grant."

"You don't think he did it, eh?" The chief was watching her keenly, and she shook her head.

"I'm sure he didn't. And I'm sure I know who did. Mr. Grant as good as told me the night he was killed."

"He did?" This was news with a vengeance; we all followed the Chief's lead and sat forward eagerly as she rambled on:

"Yes; he always liked to have me stay after the others had gone, but that night he seemed fearfully upset. I thought at first it was because he hadn't been able to get my son."

"Your son?" The Chief was bewildered.

"Yes. Ronald is what the unenlightened call 'dead,' although, to me, he's just vibrating upon another plane. Mr. Grant frequently got me into communication with him."

"You mean you actually saw him?" I blurted out.

"Oh, no. Ronald has passed over too recently to be able to get back to the earth plane, but twice we obtained materializations of my husband."

"I can testify to that," said Dr. Waverly. "I was present."

"This is all beside the point," snapped the Chief. "I want to know why you think Grant foresaw his own death."

"Oh, not his death, Captain!" the Lady Elfrieda protested. "It was just that he seemed to feel there were unfriendly forces around him. I'd been reading a great many reports on psychical researches in France, and Mr. Grant asked about them. He seemed particularly interested in the question of malignant spirits."

"And what are 'malignant spirits'?"

"Spirits that are not in harmony with the other world. Sometimes a soul fails to vibrate properly in the next plane. Then it may come back and do real harm upon this side. There are authentic cases of such spirits murdering people."

The Chief stared for a moment, then exploded. "You're trying to tell me Grant was killed by a spook with a grudge?"

"We don't call them spooks," said the Lady Elfrieda with dignity. "We call them 'spirit entities'."

"Call them what you like," the Chief snapped, "so long as you don't do it around me. I've no time for such nonsense."

"Just a minute, Captain," Jimmy Lane interrupted, "I want to ask a question. Have you any idea who this 'malignant spirit' was, Mrs. Chapman?"

The Lady Elfrieda promptly transferred her affections to him. "I most certainly have. I think it was Amos Harcastle."

"Amos Harcastle? And who is . . . or, I mean, who was he?"

"He was Mr. Grant's control. Every medium has a control, a spirit who helps with the seances. Mr. Harcastle was a man who once owned those three houses on the hill. He died in the seance room."

"What?" The Chief's attention was attracted now, and the Lady Elfrieda's voice deepened with conscious importance.

"Yes; he died in the seance room . . . only it was a long time ago. Mr. Harcastle bought the three houses for himself and his two married daughters. He was a philologist and used that big room for his study. He was in there when he died."

"What did he die of?" I am sure at least three of us asked that question at once, and it was Dr. Waverly who answered.

"Nothing mysterious," he assured us. "The man was over eighty and he died of a heart attack. His daughter was in the next house and ran into the room in time to be with him when he died. Harlan once told me that was one reason for his buying the house. He had a theory that it was easier to connect with the spirit plane in a room where someone had died. Mr. Harcastle came back frequently and acted as his control."

"You actually saw him?"

"Oh, yes, several times—vaguely, and once with great distinctness. He was an old chap with a long white beard."

"—and a skull cap," the Lady Elfrieda finished for him. "I'm sure it was he who murdered Mr. Grant."

"Why do you think he wanted to murder him?" Jimmy asked before the Chief could explode.

"Because he was jealous of Mr. Grant for still being on the earth plane."

"Did Grant say anything about Harcastle Monday night?"

"No; but, as I told you, he asked me what I'd read about malignant spirits. Before we finished Singh came up with word that Mr. Stoddard was waiting. So I went home."

"Without anything more being said?"

"Yes; except—he did ask me one very strange question. He asked if I thought women ever forgave an injury, or if they went right on hating the man who had hurt them."

*Consider your Adam's Apple!!

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

When you visit your physician for your periodic health examination, one of the very first things he asks you to do is to open your mouth wide, and to say "Ah." He is examining the delicate lining of your throat. "Ah!" There is not a man or woman who could even make this simple sound, if in the throat there were no Adam's Apple. For your Adam's Apple is your larynx—the voice box containing your vocal chords. And what a delicate piece of Nature's handiwork the Adam's Apple is. A slight cold—even a tiny particle lodged in the throat—and our voice often grows husky. In acute cases, we may even lose our voice for several days. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants—Reach for a LUCKY instead—remember, LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette in America that through its exclusive "TOASTING" process expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are sold to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. No wonder 20,679 American physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating. LUCKIES are always kind to your throat. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple."

Fear Of Fear

By Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements

Jimmy turned quickly to Dr. Waverly. "Did you ever know of Grant's having trouble over a woman?"

The Doctor shook his head. "Never. Of course he met a great many women in his work and he may have had friendships I knew nothing about, but I always supposed his relations with them were strictly of a business nature."

The Lady Elfrieda seemed about to speak, then changed her mind and there was a short silence, broken by the Chief.

"I can't see that anything you've brought us is important, Mrs. Chapman, except, possibly, the fact that Grant was worried about some woman. I'll have that lead followed up." He rose in polite dismissal and the woman began gathering up an assortment of gloves, fur neckpiece, embroidered handbag, and pamphlets which she had dropped on the desk. These last she held out to the Chief.

"I brought them for you to study, Captain. They will show you how to tranquilize your vibrations, and tune them with the infinite."

Captain Hemming snorted and drew back as though they were red hot.

"Thanks," he growled. "I'll be too busy for the next few days to do any reading."

"I won't." Jimmy Lane took the pamphlets from her hand. "If you don't mind, I'd like to look them over, Mrs. Chapman."

The Lady Elfrieda burbled happily. "If you're interested, Mr. Lane, I should simply love to have you come up to my house on Sunday afternoon. A little group of seekers meets there for tea. You, too, Captain... we'd be delighted to see you at any time, or any other friend Mr. Lane would care to bring."

The Chief made no direct reply. He had already disgustedly punched a bell, and an officer was at the door. "You may show this lady out," he said.

The man took the Lady Elfrieda's arm and steered her toward the door; on the threshold she paused. "It's been perfectly delightful to meet you," she declared chattily. "I can't tell you how I have enjoyed our little talk. I do hope we'll all meet again when we can have a real visit."

A moment later she was gone, and the Chief sank into his chair, mopping his brow.

"Now that," he said, "is what I consider a good half hour wasted."

Jimmy Lane was glancing through the pamphlets. "I don't agree with you, Captain. It may sound mad, but I've a feeling that somewhere in what we've just heard there's a key to Grant's murder. If only," he shook his head gloomily, "if only we were clairvoyant, and could see where it lies."

It was a full hour before we got away from headquarters. In the interval the Chief had rapidly disposed of six or eight witnesses, none of whom had anything new to offer.

Stoddard and Norah came first. They were looking much more cheerful than when we had last seen them, and Norah gave me the reason, sotto voce. "The Chief's been simply adorable. He's really a perfect old lamb."

Jimmy Hung Upon the Lady Elfrieda's Words as Though They Were Precious Pearls, Encouraging Her When the Flood of Her Speech Seemed to Lessen.

Captain Hemming tried to pretend that he hadn't heard, but when he spoke I swear his voice was faintly reminiscent of the Lady Elfrieda's dulcet tones.

"Sorry to trouble you again, Miss Fallon, but there are still a few things we need for our records. Nothing that need worry you, of course."

"I'm not worried," Norah smiled up at him. "I'll be glad to tell you anything I can."

"Then suppose we get the question of time straight. We're checking everyone who was in the Grant house on Monday night. Will you start at eight and give us your program through midnight?"

"I had dinner at my hotel at eight——" Norah began, and as she talked I jotted down notes. To save time and space I shall give them here, along with those for Stoddard:

Norah:

8 to 9 P. M.—Dining at hotel.
9 to 9:30—Visiting Grant.
9:30 to 11—At a movie.
11 to 11:30—In sweet shop.
11:30—through night. In bed at hotel.

Stoddard:

9 to 9:30—Arrives at S. F. aerodrome.
9:30 to 10—In car on way to hotel.
10 to 11—At hotel. Phones Norah and does not get her. Phones Grant and makes appointment.
11:15 — Arrives at Grant's. Meets Lady Elfrieda on stairs.
11:15 to 12—Talking with Grant.
12 to 12:30—On way to aerodrome in taxi.
12:30—Leaves for Los Angeles in plane.

After jotting down these facts the Chief asked a few more general questions and was about to dismiss the two when Jimmy demurred.

"Just a minute, there's something I want to ask." And to Norah, "Do you know of any woman who had a grudge against Grant? Anyone to whom he'd done some injury?"

She looked surprised. "Why, no. He always had a lot of wild-eyed females around him. I used to see them coming and going to his seances, but they all seemed to adore him. Hold on, I do remember, I heard him quarreling with one of them."

"When was that?"

"Some time last week. I went up there quite late, after one of his seances. There was a woman with him and she was acting absolutely crazy. I could hear her halfway down stairs."

"Could you make out what she said?"

"No, except that she was jealous of the other women at the seance. She gave me a perfectly poisonous look when I came in. She was a funny, dumpy little thing with dyed hair."

"The Lady Elfrieda!" Jimmy exclaimed, and turned to Stoddard. "You told us you met her the night of the murder. Did it strike you that she had been quarreling with Grant?"

"No, but I wouldn't have known it if she had. All I saw was a woman hurrying past me down the stairs."

"Did Grant look upset when you reached the room?"

"I'm afraid I was too upset myself to notice."

The Chief was impatient. "I wish you wouldn't waste time over trifles, Lane. I've still got a lot of people to see."

"Very well," Jimmy subsided.

Stoddard left with Norah, and was succeeded by a group of Grant's followers who were at the seance on the night of his death. Most of them belonged to what Jimmy calls the "scrambled brains" type, and their talk was reminiscent of the Lady Elfrieda, who was, apparently, High Priestess of the Grant cult. Her theory about Grant's having been murdered by a bad tempered ghost seemed to have been accepted with weird variations by them all, and thirty minutes of their babbling reduced the Chief to a condition which bordered upon apoplexy. When Jimmy showed a disposition to question them about Grant's dealings with the unseen world, he simply blew up.

"Clear out the whole lot," he roared to his assistant. "I've had my fill of ghosts. I'm going to chuck the case until McCarthy gets back from Russian Hill."

"Russian Hill?" Jimmy pricked up his ears. "What's he doing there?"

"Examining the Grant family. We want to know exactly where everyone was at midnight on Monday."

Jimmy rose quickly. "In that case I'll beat it up to the hill. If I know McCarthy, he'll have the whole family in fits by now."

"All right," the Chief agreed, not too enthusiastically, "only don't interfere. Mac's a good man even if he is a bit heavy."

"Heavy?" Jimmy groaned. "He's positively elephantine. Every time he finds a poor little clew he sits on it as though it were an egg and he hoped to hatch out a solution...and all he manages to do is squash it flat! You should have picked out someone with subtlety and imagination for this case."

"You've got enough for us all," the Chief growled. "The way you wallow around among spooks and banshees anyone'd think you're intending to set up in Grant's place."

"Maybe I am," said Jimmy sweetly. "Anybody you want me to call back for you from the spirit plane?"

"Not unless you can get Grant to tell us who bumped him off."

Jimmy picked up the Lady Elfrieda's pamphlets and moved lazily toward the door, but on the threshold he paused. "After two hours of observing your methods, Captain dear, I should say that's the only way you'll ever find out."

CHAPTER XII.

The Grant Household.

THE Doctor had accepted Jimmy Lane's invitation to ride back to Russian Hill in his car, and five minutes later we were moving through the traffic on Market Street, bound for the Grant place. Waverly looked utterly exhausted. As he sank back on the cushions of the limousine he sighed deeply and closed his eyes.

"The excitement of the last two days has been too much for me," he explained apologetically. "I'm rather a quiet chap and the only company I normally keep is that of my microbes."

"I should think the germs of an Oriental disease would be exciting enough for anyone," I remarked.

"I supose it does seem so, but I'm used to them and my work is largely routine observation and the writing of notes."

"It's rather a dangerous type of research. How did you happen to select it?"

"It selected me," the Doctor said gravely. "My wife died of an obscure form of cholera and I have been dedicating myself to the work ever since. I shall probably never achieve anything of real value, but my notes may be helpful to younger men."

He closed his eyes once more and I saw that he was too thoroughly exhausted to talk. Jimmy, too, seemed to have little desire for conversation, and there was complete silence until the car reached the stopping place near the summit of Russian Hill. The chauffeur drew up to the curb and we started up the steep way on foot. It was late and the world was drifting slowly into twilight. A fog was beginning to creep up from the bay and the low, persistent moan of the foghorn in the distance was sounding through the mist like the sad plaint of a lost soul.

Jimmy shivered slightly. "My word, that's a creepy sound. It gives you a nasty feeling that something unpleasant is in the offing, doesn't it?"

It did, but I forebore to say so, and we climbed the steps to the Colonel's house in gloomy silence. Before we reached the porch we could hear a man's voice from inside, raised in a continuous tirade. At our first touch on the bell the door swung open and we saw the Colonel standing in the entrance hall; his face was mottled red, his eyes bloodshot.

"Ah, Lane. Thank heaven, it's you! There's a fellow here from headquarters who's been deucedly impertinent. I hope you'll send him about his business."

Jimmy grinned. "Afraid I can't hurl him out, Colonel, but I may be able to tone him down. Where's he operating?"

"In the living-room." The Colonel led us across the hall to the doorway beyond. Through the wide arch the room was plainly visible and it was here that I first saw Otto Steeb.

He was sitting in a wheel chair at the far side of the room and, at first glance I should have said he was a handsome man, with broad shoulders and a large, well-shaped head; but as I studied him more closely I saw that his legs were wretchedly disporportionate, scarcely larger than those of a ten-year-old child. His arms were abnormally long and thin, and his hands, slim, flexible, stained with chemicals, seemed perpetually in motion. His face, when viewed in profile, was singularly regular in outline, but there was something malignant in the chill blue eyes with their sparse fair lashes; and the lips, full of sensuousness, had a sardonic twist which was vaguely disquieting. This was a mere fleeting impression, I am bound to admit, and probably an unfair one, for the memory of our first meeting is, doubtlessly, colored by the character of the man as I knew him later. The Colonel performed the introductions a trifle curtly, I thought, and Steeb allowed his hard blue eyes to pass from one to the other of us without any attempt at greeting other than a slight nod, then he turned to the Doctor at the door.

"I'm glad you've got here, Waverly," he said. "I wish you'd convince this fool," he jerked his head toward McCarthy, "that I've never been up in that room of Harlan's." His voice was low and guttural, with an occasional hissing sibilant which slurred the words between breaths. "Make him to understand that I could not possibly have climbed those stairs. He has got it into his stupid head that I had something to do with this murder."

"Nothing of the sort," McCarthy protested, "nothing of the sort." He turned to us for sympathy. "I'm only asking him a few questions, you understand. Just like I intend to ask all of the family, and he turns mad on me. Bellows like a bull. If he keeps on I will think he had something to do with it, you bet!"

The Doctor came forward and assumed the role of peacemaker. From his gentle, pleasing manner I suspected that this was not the first time he had oiled troubled waters in the Grant family.

"Nonsense, Otto," he said. "There's no use your getting excited." And to McCarthy, "I can assure you, Sergeant, that it would be impossible for Mr. Steeb to climb the stairs next door without help."

McCarthy grunted. "All right, all right. I was just trying to get the position of everybody the night of the murder. Mind telling me where you were, Mr. Steeb?"

"Most certainly not. I had dinner on a tray in my laboratory at the top of this house. Later Dr. Waverly came up with Mrs. Steeb and the three of us talked for a short time. After that Mrs. Steeb and I put in several hours' work on my notes. At about eleven I went down to the second floor to bed."

"Thanks." McCarthy wrote for a moment in his notebook. "That's all I want of you just now. I'd like to ask Singh a few questions."

As he spoke he glanced across the room toward a shadowy corner, and, for the first time, I realized that the East Indian was in the room. He had discarded his long robes and was in a houseboy's suit of white drill, but he retained his quiet air of dignity as he stood in front of the detective. McCarthy regarded him keenly.

HANDS UP!!

don't be afraid....

Removal of superfluous hair under the arms and on the limbs should be your first thought in the care of your skin.

Since 1900, physicians and hospitals have used and recommended De Miracle, the original liquid hair-remover. They call it "the quickest, smoothest, most sanitary way."

Ask for De Miracle at your druggist or department store. Or, mail $1 and we will send you a bottle immediately, postpaid. De Miracle, Dept. 11B, 138 West 14th Street, New York, N. Y.

FREE: Write for scientific report, "The Truth About Superfluous Hair." Frankly written. Beautifully illustrated. Tells everything you want to know.

De Miracle washes away hair.

• do you do this after exercising?

Scientists say DON'T—unless you want to invite falling hair and premature baldness. The sudden shock of a cold shower on a hot and dilated scalp is sufficient to permanently injure the hair-producing follicles. When you come in from a hot tennis court or golf course, give your scalp time to contract normally.

And give it regular treatments with "Vaseline" Hair Tonic. Before each shampoo apply the Tonic generously to the scalp and massage gently with the finger tips. Use a rotary motion until the scalp feels loose, and tingling with increased circulation. "Vaseline" Hair Tonic removes encrusted dust and dandruff, and prepares the scalp for a good cleansing. Supplies the oils so needed during the summer months to keep the hair soft and induce perfect scalp health.

Fear Of Fear

By Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements

"You told a pretty straight story at the inquest this morning," he said, "but there's a few more things I want to ask you."

"Yes, sar."

"You testified that you didn't see Grant again after you took Stoddard up to his room at eleven-fifteen. What did you do immediately after that?"

"The master said he did not need me and I went for a walk."

"What time did you get back?"

"About twelve-thirty, sar."

"Did you go into the lower house at all on your return?"

"No, sar. I sleep here in the house of Colonel Grant, and I came straight home to bed."

"Did you see anyone who could verify that statement?"

"Yes, sar, my wife."

"And, of course, if you're lying she'll back you up."

"Yes, sar." Singh's voice was flat and metallic, utterly devoid of humor. "But I am not lying. It is as I have told you. After I left him with Mr. Stoddard I never saw Mr. Grant alive again."

"Very well." McCarthy was about to dismiss him when Jimmy spoke.

"Just a minute, Singh." The East Indian obediently faced him and he asked: "About the lady who was with Mr. Grant when Mr. Stoddard arrived—you remember?"

"Yes, sar. You mean Mrs. Chapman. She went out as I took Mr. Stoddard upstairs."

"You actually saw her leave?" Jimmy's voice was eager, and Singh started to reply, then hesitated in thought.

"No," he said slowly, "she passed us on the stairs, but I did not see her leave."

"Did you pass her on the first or second flight?"

"On the flight between the second floor and the seance room."

"How long were you in the room with Grant and Mr. Stoddard?"

"Perhaps two, perhaps three minutes."

The Chief Was Testing the Hardened Paint With His Knife. "The drops are old," He Said. "That mirror must have been there for a long time, because the stuff's badly oxidized."

"And after that you came straight down and went out?"

"It is as you have said, sar."

Jimmy leaned forward and spoke eagerly. "Then Mrs. Chapman might have remained in the house without your knowledge... in one of those rooms on the second floor?"

"Yes, sar, it is possible."

"Say," McCarthy broke in, "what are you trying to get at?"

"Nothing." Jimmy smiled quietly to himself. "Just a vague idea." And to Singh: "Thank you, that's all."

As the East Indian retired noiselessly into the shadows the Colonel spoke. "Is it necessary for this farce to go on any longer?" he demanded. "You can see you're getting nowhere."

The Sergeant shook his head doggedly. "I'm not going to leave till I've got that information. I'll take you next, Colonel."

"Oh, very well, very well." The Colonel was evidently making a violent effort to control himself. "Where do you want me to begin?"

"Start at dinner, same as Mr. Steeb. Where did you eat?"

"In the dining-room, of course. And, afterward, I went over to my brother's study for a little talk with him."

"What did you talk about?"

"Business mainly. Harlan left all his affairs in my hands, and we discussed the advisability of selling some bonds in order to raise money for a new invention we were contemplating."

"What time did you leave?"

"About nine. Miss Fallon arrived to see my brother, so we postponed our talk until the next day."

"What did you do next?"

"I returned to my house, and read in my room for several hours."

"Did you see anyone during that time?"

"Only my daughter and son-in-law. Somewhere around midnight, I went to bed."

"Is your room on the side nearest the house next door?"

"Yes; because of the rise in the hill our house is over a floor higher than Harlan's, which brings the wall of my room next to his study. But if you're going to ask if I heard anything, I'll tell you plainly that I didn't. The wall between is very thick and not even a scream could get through."

"All right," McCarthy entered this in his notebook and turned the page. "Now who else is in the family?"

"No one, except my daughter, Mrs. Steeb. Surely you don't intend to annoy her at this time?"

"I don't know that this time is any worse than any other," snapped McCarthy. "Will you ask Mrs. Steeb to come in?"

For a moment I thought the Colonel's temper would break loose again, but before he could reply Steeb spoke to Singh, who left the room. For a moment there was silence, then the door opened and Chanda Steeb appeared. She was dressed as before, in a straight woolen gown with white linen at the throat and wrists. It was a sort of uniform she had adopted, I discovered later. Although its color frequently changed, its general lines were always the same.

"This is my daughter, Mrs. Steeb," the Colonel said. And to Chanda, "The Sergeant would like to ask you a few questions."

She smiled at McCarthy and dropped into a chair. "I shall be glad to tell you anything I can, Sergeant."

McCarthy picked up his notebook and moved toward Chanda, a slight deference showing through his brusqueness. "I'll make it as snappy as I can, Mrs. Steeb. All I want is an idea of what you did on Monday night."

"Monday night?" She paused a moment, her brow wrinkled in thought, then: "To begin with, I had supper here with the family. That must have lasted until about eight. Then I went up to the laboratory with Dr. Waverly and we talked to my husband until somewhere around nine. After he left, I remained working on notes, with Mr. Steeb, until eleven. Then father and I helped him downstairs and he got ready for bed."

"You went to bed at the same time?"

"Not immediately. Sometimes my husband does not sleep and I have to get him a hot drink, so I always read until I am sure he won't need me. That night he seemed restless, so I read until around twelve."

"And you didn't hear anything?" McCarthy was watching her keenly.

"Nothing from the house next door. But I heard Singh come in for the night."

"What time was that?"

"Sometime after I had gone to bed, twenty minutes to half an hour, I should say."

"Which would make it about twelve-thirty." McCarthy wrote the time down, and nodded to Chanda. "That's all I need from you, Mrs. Steeb. Now, Dr. Waverly, just as a matter of form, y'understand, I'd like to take you."

"Certainly." The Doctor drew out a little card. "I've already jotted my movements down to save you the trouble. I had dinner over here with the family, then, as Mr. Steeb has told you, I went up to the laboratory and talked for half an hour or so up there. Following that, I returned home and began going through some old trunks and letters. That took longer than I expected and I didn't get to bed until around midnight."

"Anyone in the house except yourself?"

"No one. There's a sort of a charwoman tends to it during the day, but she goes home at night. I'm afraid you'll have to take my word for my movements during the evening. I've no way of proving that I wasn't in and out of the house a dozen times."

"No, no," McCarthy protested, "I wasn't meaning that, Doctor." He took the card and slipped it into his notebook. "I guess this takes in everyone except that maid of yours, Mrs. Steeb."

"Lalah?" Chanda stared at him, then gave a little laugh. "Oh, I can answer for Lalah. She was busy in the kitchen during dinner, and was cleaning it up until eight or nine; after that, she sat in my bedroom making over one of my dresses. At about eleven o'clock I sent her to bed."

"You're sure she went there?"

"Absolutely sure. She's extremely shy and never goes out. I know she was in her room when Singh got home because I heard them talking."

"Where do the servants sleep?"

"At the back of the house, just off the kitchen. Their window is directly below mine and I frequently hear the murmur of their voices."

McCarthy made a note or so, then closed his book. "That's all," he said, "unless Mr. Lane has something he wants to ask." He turned to Jimmy who was standing at one side of the room, his eyes fixed with an almost hypnotic gaze upon the Colonel's hands where they gripped his cane. "Anything more you want to know before we go up to the seance room, Mr. Lane?" McCarthy repeated.

"Yes," said Jimmy slowly, "just one little thing. I'd like to know how well the Colonel plays golf."

CHAPTER XIII.

Blackmail.

"WHAT made you ask that idiotic question about golf?" We were in Grant's house, climbing the stairs toward the seance room, and McCarthy was out of earshot on the flight ahead. "Did you have something in mind, or were you just trying to get the Colonel's goat?"

"A little of both. There was a bag of golf clubs in the hall and it suggested a wild idea which may not mean anything."

We had reached the top of the stairs where an officer was guarding the door. "The Captain's inside," he said. "He's expecting you, Mr. Lane."

"Good." Jimmy hurried into the room and grinned at Captain Hemming. "I thought you'd decided to lay off the case for a while."

"I thought so, too," growled the Chief, "but it wouldn't let me alone. I knew I'd never be content with a second-hand report so I came up to go over the place again."

"Looking for the secret passage?"

"Something like that. But I'll be hanged if we can find anything." He was standing at the farther end where the mirror had formerly been framed by bookcases. Now the shelves had been pulled from the wall, disclosing an unbroken expanse of plaster. "This is the only wall that could possibly have an entrance," he pointed out, "because the other three are on the outside of the building."

"This is against the house next door, isn't it?" Jimmy asked.

"Yes, but those bookcases haven't been moved for years, judging by the dust and cobwebs, and the wall back of them is as solid as granite."

"How about the mirror?" Jimmy was regarding the huge affair of French gilt that reached from the ceiling to within three feet of the floor. "If you'd read the proper books, Capt'n, you'd know there is always a knob concealed in the frame of the mirror."

"Sure," the Chief agreed with a chuckle. "And when you twist it the glass swings out silently and discloses a hidden staircase. But this one doesn't work that way, see? It's been screwed into the wall with heavy bolts; and I'm dead sure it never did any swinging because the paint that was used to gild the frame has dripped and stuck to the plaster. If it had ever been pulled loose the drops would be broken."

Do as Your Dentist does—when he cleans your teeth

Powder Cleans and Whitens Teeth—as nothing else can

There is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleaming white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER just naturally cleans best.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder IS ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

Dull Teeth Become White

For over SIXTY YEARS—dentists everywhere have prescribed Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder because—"eth simply cannot . . . remain dull and film coated when it is used.

It cleans off all stains and tartar, and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter.

No Glycerine—No Grit

Being an ALL POWDER dentifrice, Dr. Lyon's contains no glycerine, therefore does not soften the gums. It is free from all grit or pumice and cannot possibly scratch, or injure, the softest enamel, as years of constant use have shown.

Dr. Lyon's is the only dentifrice old enough to prove it can be safely used for life.

Neutralizes Acids

In addition to cleansing, it is probably the greatest neutralizer known for ACID MOUTH, being many times more effective than Milk of Magnesia.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean—firm, healthy gums, freedom from pyorrhea and the least possible tooth decay.

Brush your teeth with Dr. Lyon's regularly—consult your dentist periodically—and you will be doing ALL that you can possibly do, to protect your teeth.

Lasts Longer—Costs Less

Once you use Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, you will never be satisfied to use anything else. It leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed and your breath so sweet and pure.

Dr. Lyon's is not only doubly efficient, but it costs, only half as much, to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

In use over 60 years me that Carlos might not, after all, be dead," she explained.

Luiz laughed.

"A foolish fancy! Poor Carlos is dead. Why should you think otherwise?"

"I tell you, Luiz. The feeling within me is so strong as almost to be a certainty."

"Then I should forget it, querida mia. What you need to do is to think only of your loving Luiz, who wants you so badly and means to have you this very night."

"So?" Adora, in the darkness of a moonless night, realized the light of truth more than ever. "That is why you and Conchita persuaded me on board here?" she said. "Although you promised me you would not force yourself upon me, the vessel has scarcely started when you begin."

"And I shall continue to do so, my sweet pet, all the voyage to the mainland. Also, I will tell you something now. That queer feeling within you about Carlos—it is quite true. He lives. That sly old priest had hidden the truth from us. He had found out too much when he confessed the dying da Costa. So—in case Carlos—who is in love with you—wished to avenge himself on us—we removed ourselves and you to safety."

Safety! There was none, Adora realized, for her on this boat, unless Jaime could help her. And—what chance was there of that? Little indeed. Meantime Luiz thrust himself upon her with all the ardor of his unloosed passions, snatching her to him and carrying her, even though she struggled, back to her cabin, crushing her to him and devouring her face with his burning kisses.

"Don't think to escape me this time!" he said as he laid her on her berth and unloosed her. "This little cabin is your prison, your honeymoon prison which I shall share with you whenever I wish. Screaming will be of no use. The captain is in my pay, and the crew know better than to interfere.

"In here I am going to lock you, my glorious little beauty, till it is my pleasure to visit you and have my will of you," he added thickly as, with the key of the cabin door in his hand, he turned to go. "If you are wise, when I do come back, you will be loving and submit to my desires. Your Luiz has waited long, and is impatient. He can hurt as well as be tender with adoration. You will be wise to remember that."

He seized her, all struggling and fighting, in his arms and pressed his mouth to her unresponsive lips, and then flung her from him, passing out of the door and turning the key on the other side before she could do more than reach the door and batter her little clenched fists vainly upon the panels.

CHAPTER XXX.

Love's Victory.

THROUGH the cabin porthole Adora could see the black mass of the still faintly-lit Pallarossa fading into the distance as the Castilian left the island. On the vessel, for what seemed an interminable period, there was little of sound or movement. Occasionally a ragged member of the crew would flit past the porthole along the deck, and once the bulky figure of the captain lounged by.

This period of waiting was an appalling strain to Adora's nerves. No one brought her food, and she was famished, although in her present position food did not matter at all. The situation was too terrible for thought. Carlos, alive in Saranoa and wanting her. She, on this vile old sea-tramp, needing him badly, and he knowing nothing of where she was, how she was at the mercy of Luiz.

Luiz, who would presently force himself upon her, like the coward he was. And afterwards . . . She could never belong to Carlos. That was the pity and the horror of it all. Between Adora and that fate there stood only Jaime, whose hope of helping her seemed small indeed! And, while she thought this sadly—when the ship had been long at sea and hours must have passed, the key turned in the lock outside her cabin door. Luiz appeared, his eyes glowing avariciously in the feeble electric light. Closing the door he feasted his eyes on her, moving towards her.

"You are going to be wise, querida mia?" he said silkily. "You are by now willing that our honeymoon should be a happy one? You are not thinking of Carlos any more?"

"I must always think of him, Luiz," answered Adora. "I am in your hands! I know I can expect no mercy from you or your sister. But even now I do appeal to you. I love Carlos, and he loves me. Love is eternal. You can separate Carlos and me. You can ruin me. But—what good will that do to you?"

"What good? I love you. Love, you say, is eternal. Well, that is my love for you. It can never die. Why should my love ruin you?"

"Because it has taken me from Carlos—the man I love. Luiz—you know quite well that I am speaking the truth. If you are honest with yourself and me, you will be honorable. You will leave me in peace till we reach the mainland and then send me back to Carlos. You need not fear his vengeance. I shall tell him it was all a mistake, that you believed him dead, as I did, and that you were repentant of the past and were helping me."

"And you expect me to do that? Do you think I love Carlos so much? I hate him. Besides, Conchita would never agree to him marrying you. No. You do not escape me, loveliest, by persuading me to be a saint. I am no saint, but a man desirous of a woman so beautiful that I care for nothing but to possess her. I can wait no longer ——"

He snatched her to him, although she tried to keep him at a distance. But—that was as far as he went. Even while his lips were close to hers, he suddenly drew back, startled by the sound of a revolver shot, a second and then a third. He unloosed her in a sudden panic. She remembered how, in the first outbreak of Pallarossa when they were together in da Costa's house, he had behaved like a coward. She took heart at this moment, hearing the revolver shots followed by a roar of voices. She thrust him on one side and was out of the cabin and on the deck.

There was by now a pale moon, and she could see along the deck. She could see the captain with his hands held above his head, while others bound him. She could see a figure leaping along the deck towards her—the figure of Jaime, a gun in his hand, a gun with which he covered Don Luiz. At the same moment, alarmed by the noise, Conchita appeared on the deck, and screamed.

Jaime seized her roughly by one shoulder and placed her beside her brother, still covering them both with his gun, while two of the crew bound their wrists and ankles. Jaime meantime explained the situation to Adora.

"The thing was easier than I expected, senorita," he said. "I found the crew more than ready to turn on the captain, because of his ill-temper and bad treatment of them. I told them about you, and about how Don Carlos was a rich man and would pay a big reward if you were rescued. Well, senorita, it took little time for them to make up their minds. The captain and his other officers are secure from doing any harm, and—"

He was interrupted by a shout from the bridge, and a man came running to say a ship was signalling them by wireless to stop. It was, the sailor said, a British cruiser. Jaime breathed a sigh of intense relief and turned to Adora.

"Don Carlos must have had us followed," he said. "Directly I saw you come on board, senorita, I sent a message to Father Ignatius that you were on this ship. I felt somehow that something was wrong. Don Carlos must have asked that British war vessel to follow us."

That, as a matter of fact, proved quite correct. So soon as the Castilian's engines had been stopped and the British cruiser drew alongside, a little launch left the side of the last and made for the old sea-tramp. From the launch some people mounted the Castilian's side and came on deck. A spruce British naval officer and some British sailors, fully armed. Behind them, looking very pale, and leaning on a stick, came Carlos, moving very slowly, his eyes searching for Adora.

With a little cry she ran to him and he bowed over her hands.

"Then I was right, querida mia," he said, "and you were not here of your own free will?"

"Surely not, Carlos darling!" she exclaimed, blushing with a ravishing sense of unexpected happiness. "It was not—at least—until I had been persuaded on board by Conchita and Luiz that I learnt, through Jaime here, that you were alive. Thank heaven you came after me."

Here the British naval officer took a hand in the proceedings. He had to receive assurance that Adora was a British subject and had been forcibly abducted in order to make good his right to stop the vessel and search her.

"I see," he said, after a few words with Jaime and the bound captain of the Castilian, "there has been something of a mutiny on board here. That, Don Carlos, is not our affair, this vessel flying a South American flag. I am only concerned with the lady here, and am ready to assist you to remove her."

Very soon Adora had been taken on board the cruiser, Jaime going with them, while Conchita and Luiz were left behind.

"As I shall be going back to Spain in the next few days," Don Carlos said to those two in low tones of contempt, "I shall probably never see you again. Perhaps that will be as well for you. Take a wise man's advice, the pair of you, and never let Carlos de Velasquinez set eyes on you again in this life."

Conchita and Luiz, when last seen by Adora, were standing on the deck, released from their bonds, gazing in miserable dejection at the little launch making its way back to the gray shape of the cruiser. What happened afterwards to the Castilian, Adora neither knew nor cared. Don Carlos, before leaving, had distributed a good sum of money quietly among the mutineers, to fulfill Jaime's promise to them.

For some time after the cruiser had turned back towards Saranoa, the sea-tramp remained without movement, but presently Adora saw it was going on its way towards the mainland. It was her last glimpse of a nightmare past, her last sight of the vessel which took Conchita and Luiz out of her life for ever.

Back in Saranoa, where she and Carlos landed next morning, they went to the home of Father Ignatius, anxiously awaiting them. And not till then did Adora really have a chance for much talk with her lover. Naturally, she had many questions to ask, especially as to why Father Ignatius had so tortured her, keeping from her the fact that Carlos really was alive.

"You see," Carlos answered for the old priest, who had gone to prepare the church for a wedding, "so long as I was known to be alive your life was not safe from those two. They were after my money and would stop at nothing if they could remove you so that they were never suspected. Well, Father Ignatius just arrived in time to prevent Conchita from stabbing you in the back, and he thought of that plan. After all, they had tried to deceive me into believing you dead, so it was only right to play the same trick on them.

"And," he added, "coming from Father Ignatius, they could scarcely disbelieve it, though I had hopes you would somehow doubt it yourself, darling heart, just as I did when I heard you had been drowned."

"I know," sighed Adora, happy once again in his arms. "But in that you were stronger than I was, Carlos. I had, indeed, given you up as dead, though I should always have been yours. I could never have belonged to anyone else, as I told Conchita and Luiz before I went on that ship. And then I found out they had discovered that truth about you and had decoyed me away. However——"

"It's all over now, my precious beautiful!" murmured Carlos, endearingly, kissing her willing lips tenderly. "All over, that is to say, excepting for the wedding, which will take place at once. And afterwards—as soon as a boat arrives—we will off to sunny Spain and enjoy at last the Velasquinez estates."

"But how can I possibly be married in these poor rags of mine, all that I have in the world to wear?" asked Adora, coloring deliciously, rising from his embrace and showing shyly the terribly ravaged poverty of her clothes.

But she might have remembered that Carlos was a man never to be caught quite unprepared. He laughed and led her into a room in the priest's house which she had been using only yesterday. Here were a riot of gorgeous frocks, including a white one with a bride's veil.

"I had these bought for you long ago, querida mia," he said, "in the days when we were playing our game of dog and cat fight. I had them kept here for the occasion when, so I had hoped, we should be married. They have been here ever since. And now I will tell you something else. During the days of my illness, Father Ignatius has arranged secretly for the partial rebuilding of my old home where you were left in my charge. It is there, after the wedding, that we are going for the first part of our honeymoon. You will like that?"

Like it? Adora was enamored of the plan. For to her that house in the interior was the beginning of love, the sweetest spot in all the world. For there she had known hate, learnt to love, fought with sorrow, and become wise. She leaned towards Carlos and drew his head down to hers, so that he might kiss her ardent lips.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Conclusion.

THE good people of Saranoa were in no hurry for that wedding to be over. The news of its happening had spread, and when Carlos walked with Adora to the church it was packed with no room to be spared, leaving indeed scarcely enough for Carlos with his lovely bride to reach the altar.

And after the ceremony there were celebrations, for now Saranoa was beginning to resume something of its usual life, the threat of Pallarossa had become forgotten and the inhabitants who had survived had recovered their gaiety. Presently, detained for a while by the celebrations, a car took Carlos and his bride out to his old home.

As he had said, and greatly to Adora's surprise, much had been done in a short time to make this habitable again. Her old room was in ruins, but the rest of the house had been so patched up as to be safe. It was a homecoming which filled her with joy as Carlos took her in his arms in the dusk, kissing her passionately and murmuring endearments.

"And here," he murmured in her ear, "you began by hating me. Here you swore that you would never—never be mine."

"But remember how cruel you were to me in those days," she colored, clinging to him but laying her soft white fingers over his lips to prevent him from kissing her while she teased and tormented him.

"Cruel?" he shook his head, laughing. "If so, it was only to be kind."

"Kind?" she laughed, too. "Dressing me up in boy's clothes and making me do all the work. Threatening me with a caning, too."

"Supposing I did the same now?" he demanded, kissing her fingers and drawing her to him.

She sighed, and leaned her golden head upon his chest, answering him in a low voice, throbbing with emotion.

"You wouldn't," she said. "But—if you did—I love you so much now that I wouldn't care. I belong to you. In those days I belonged only to myself. I did not know what love was."

"Love," Don Carlos said softly, kissing Adora, "is victory over self. It does not mean passion alone. It conquers even while it surrenders. And you, loveliest of white angels, you can mold me to your will although you submit yourself to me. Indeed, because you submit, the mastery is with you. Be sure that in all the years of our married life, my darlingest, I shall be very tender with you."

For a long while they sat in the moonlight, with silent Pallarossa behind them and the undisturbed sea in front of them. Till presently, looking towards the latter with a curious expression in his eyes, Carlos suddenly rose to his feet.

"It is time . . ."

He took Adora up in his arms as if she had been a feather and carried her indoors to their room.

* * *

In the morning she wakened from a deep and beautiful sleep to find that Carlos had already risen. She laid her burning face on the depression made by his head on his pillow and lay so for awhile in an ecstasy of delightful remembrance. Then he suddenly appeared, bringing her in the morning coffee, laying this on a table while he sat by her, kissing and fondling her.

"When you are dressed, beloved of mine," he said after a while, "join me on the veranda and you will find I have a surprise for you."

"Nothing will ever surprise me again, Carlos darling," she breathed, stroking his dark hair with her white fingers. "You have made me love you. I can think of nothing else."

"We shall see." He laughed tenderly and rose to his feet. "At any rate," he added, "I suppose you do not bear any ill-feeling against the woman and man who left you here?"

"Diana and Nicky?" she stared at him and smiled. "I do believe, if I ever saw them again, I should go down on my knees and thank them for doing it."

"In spite of all you have been through?"

"I have you in the end," she answered tenderly. "Nothing else matters."

"You glorious darling . . ."

At last he left her to drink her coffee and to dress. She was some little time over the last, trying to make herself look as sweet as possible in his eyes. And before she went out to join him she glanced out at the sea through an open window. She could just see the harbor, where still the gray cruiser lay at her moorings. But now, too, another vessel lay

he's a 12-Minute Man

THE MINUTE MAN is a national hero—but the 12-minute man is a national nuisance. Take the case of this 12-minute man. Scarcely half an hour ago he stepped from his bath—tingling, fresh, sparkling. Yet now, he's guilty of perspiration odor!

He doesn't suspect it of course. Any more than you suspect that in only 12 minutes after a bath, your pores are again secreting odor-causing wastes.

12 minutes—that's all. 12 minutes—that's as long as we can trust the protection of a bath. What's to be done? We can't bathe every 12 minutes. But we can do what millions of wise and immaculate people already are doing. We can, after every bath, use Amolin—and keep safe!

Amolin is unlike messy liquids or sticky creams. It's a powder deodorant—soft, refreshing, miraculously effective. There's nothing to seal delicate pores, nothing to irritate the skin or raise hob with fabrics. You dust Amolin on—and it absorbs odors.

Play safe—follow every bath with Amolin. And, when time denies you the luxury of a bath, Amolin freshens you up marvelously!

Foot Sufferers—Good News!

THIS IS THE AGE of popular science. If you study the pages in this and other issues of The American Weekly you will be well informed in every field of science and in every specialty in every field.

What fun to be Good-looking!

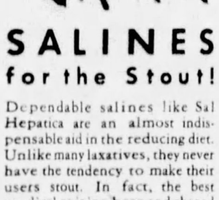
Even twenty-one looks old, jaded, sallow, if poisons collect in the body. But where there's internal cleanliness, forty can be young!

Think of the girls you know who are "almost good-looking." What keeps their skin cloudy, their eyes dull, their brains slow? What spoils their fun? Just this: They neglect internal cleanliness! It shows in the way they look, in everything they do.

Make internal cleanliness the foundation of your charm. It's easy the saline way, with Sal Hepatica.

The benefits—which wealthy Europeans find in the "saline cure" at Continental spas—can be yours, in your own home. For, by cleansing the bloodstream, Sal Hepatica wards off colds and frees the body of poisons. Clear skin, shining eyes, a renewed charm—these are the rewards.

Begin with Sal Hepatica today.



SALINES for the Stout!

Dependable salines like Sal Hepatica are an almost indispensable aid in the reducing diet. Unlike many laxatives, they never have the tendency to make their users stout. In fact, the best medical opinion here and abroad highly commends them to those who are reducing.

UGLY HAIRS can never grow again

A Written Guarantee assures permanent removal of unwanted hair

THOUSANDS of women both here and abroad now know the joy of an alluringly smooth and beautiful skin, forever free from the regrowth of ugly, unfeminine hair. The Koremlu Cream Method—based on the discovery of a noted French scientist—removes the hair for all time.

Koremlu is a delightfully fragrant, quick-drying cream, applied to the skin and left on all night. The Koremlu Cream Method may be used with positive effectiveness on face, legs, arms and underarms.

The Koremlu Cream Method is not to be confused with temporary correctives, nor is it to be confused with any other method. The Koremlu Method gives permanent results. It removes the hairs by weakening the follicles that hold the hairs in the roots, so that they are most easily lifted out. A number of applications definitely destroys the growth of hair. The Koremlu Cream Method, used regularly for a definite period as directed, is guaranteed by a signed, money-back guarantee to achieve the permanent results you have always hoped for—the complete and lasting removal of superfluous hair.

Rejoice that you can now be forever rid of all unwanted hair. Send the coupon today for our booklet containing full details of the Koremlu Cream Method.

Koremlu Cream is for sale at leading department stores (ask them for booklets). If you find that you cannot get Koremlu Cream in your locality, you may order direct from us.

Tested Economical Recipes

By Mary Lee Swann,
The Well-Known Writer and Lecturer on Cooking.

Meat Sandwiches.

PASS roast beef or pork through food chopper. Pass crisp white cabbage and tender carrots through chopper. Mix with the meat in any desired proportion. Season to taste with mayonnaise, salt, celery salt, pepper and onion juice and spread between slices of graham bread.

Vegetable Salad.

PRESS 1 cup, each, cooked diced carrots, diced turnips, shredded string beans, green peas and ½ cup diced or sliced cooked beets with well-seasoned French dressing. Add 2 tablespoons chopped gherkins. Drain and mix with well-seasoned mayonnaise. Garnish with rounds of potato and beet and light green aspic jelly cut in small cubes, or diced cucumbers. Use left-over veal or chicken stock for the aspic and color with a little green vegetable color paste.

Potato Salad.

SLICE cold boiled potatoes. Sprinkle with a little onion juice and French dressing. Let stand several hours. Drain and arrange on crisp lettuce leaves. Add sifted hard cooked eggs to add nutritive value to the salad. Put a little mayonnaise on each serving and garnish with sliced tomatoes and cucumbers.

Potato Stuffing.

(For Extending Flavor of Chicken or Meat.)

MIX 2 cups hot mashed potato, 2 cups cracker or fine bread crumbs, ⅓ cup melted butter or substitute, ⅓ cup sausage fat, salt and pepper to taste, a suggestion of powdered sage and the finely chopped cooked giblets. Moisten with hot water or stock and use as any stuffing.

Vinaigrette Sauce.

MIX 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, a few grains pepper, 1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar, 2 tablespoons apple vinegar, 6 tablespoons salad oil, 1 tablespoon, each, finely chopped green pepper and cucumber pickle and, if desired, 1 teaspoon finely chopped parsley.

Casserole of Vegetables With Meat Broth.

WASH, pare and thinly slice 6 or 8 potatoes. Wash and pare 1 small turnip or slice 1 stalk of celery. Peel and slice 1 onion. Pick over and wash ¼ cup rice. Strain 1 cup thick tomato pulp and have ready 1 cup of cooked green peas. Arrange in alternate layers in a buttered baking dish, seasoning with 1 teaspoon salt, a few grains pepper, and ⅛ teaspoon ground allspice. Pour 1 quart brown stock over the vegetables. Cover and bake in a slow oven about 3 hours.

Smothered Southern Cabbage.

PASS 1 hard crisp head of white cabbage through food chopper. Melt ¼ cup butter but do not allow butter to brown. Add 2 tablespoons flour and blend well. Add 1 cup milk and stir constantly until smooth and creamy. Bring to boiling point and add 5 cups of the cabbage. Add about 2 teaspoons salt and a few grains pepper. Mix well, cover and cook gently about an hour.

Lemon Rice Pudding.

(For Children.)

PICK over and wash ½ cup rice. Put in top of double boiler and add 3 cups milk, cover and cook until rice is soft. Add ½ cup sugar, the grated zest of ½ lemon and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Beat 2 egg yolks slightly with a scant teaspoon salt and add to the milk and rice, stirring constantly to prevent lumping. Turn into a buttered baking dish and cool slightly. Beat 2 egg whites until stiff, adding 4 tablespoons sifted powdered sugar gradually and ¼ teaspoon lemon extract. Spread on pudding and brown in a moderate oven.

Strawberry Sauce.

(For Shortcake).

PICK over and wash strawberries. Press through sieve or fruit press. To 2 cups of the pulp add 1 cup of sugar, set on back of stove for an hour or longer. Just before serving add 1 teaspoon melted butter. Beat well and serve.

Prune Pudding.

(For Children.)

PICK over and wash ¾ pound prunes. Soak overnight or several hours in cold water to cover. Cook in the same water until soft, when water should be nearly evaporated. Cut prunes in small pieces and sprinkle with ½ cup sugar. Beat 4 egg whites until stiff and gradually add the prunes. Pour into a buttered and sugared baking dish and bake in a moderate oven about 25 minutes. Serve immediately with cream and sugar or chill and serve with boiled custard or sweetened whipped cream.

Sweet Pickled Carrots.

SWEET pickled carrots may be used as a very acceptable substitute for more expensive relishes and at times the tender young carrots can be bought at very little cost. Have ready 2 quarts of the tender young carrots. Trim carefully. To 1 pint vinegar add 1 cup sugar and a spice bag containing 1 ounce of mixed spices. Bring to boiling point, add the carrots and cook until carrots are soft but not mushy. Seal in sterilized jars.

Sour Cream Ice Cream.

THIS is a pleasant way of using any sour cream that you have on hand. To a scant pint of strained apricot pulp or finely chopped sweetened pineapple add 1½ cups sugar and let stand several hours. Add 1 quart thick sour cream and freeze as usual.

Egg Salad.

PRESS 4 hard-cooked eggs through potato ricer. Blend with well seasoned mayonnaise or Russian dressing. Add more salt if needed. Press lightly into egg shapes. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves with French or mayonnaise dressing.

Blueberry or Blackberry Mold.

PICK over, wash, strain and sweeten 3 cups of berries. Bring to boiling point, add ½ cup cornstarch mixed with 1 cup cold water and stir constantly until smooth and creamy. Cook over hot water about ½ hour. Add a few drops of lemon juice, if desired. Pour into individual wet molds and let stand until cold. Serve with plain or whipped and sweetened cream.

Berry Pies.

LINE a pie plate with your favorite pastry, sprinkling with 1 tablespoon fine cracker crumbs. Dot with 1 tablespoon butter and spread on ½ cup sugar. Fill with carefully washed and drained berries (about 3 cups). Sprinkle with ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon fine cracker crumbs, dot with 1 tablespoon butter and flavor with a few drops lemon juice or a suggestion of any desired spices. Cover with pastry, prick so that steam may escape, and bake in a moderately hot oven or at about 375 degrees, reducing heat to about 350 degrees after the pastry is set.

there, one at which she stared in amazed recognition.

Then she turned and ran out to find Carlos, calling to him from afar when she heard his voice in the distance:

"Carlos, darling...I do believe the Sea-Spray is lying in the harbor!"

Then, joining Carlos, she knew she had been right. He had heard her and turned to greet her as he came out into the open. Near to him, staring at her, were Diana and Nicky, both looking awkward and doubtful as to their reception at her hands.

"They heard about Pallarossa's outbreak, darling," Carlos explained, "and they were so conscience-stricken about you that they hurried the yacht back here. They came into port last night and came on here for breakfast."

"Oh, no, Don Carlos . . ." Diana looked both shamefaced and embarrassed. "Nicky and I could not think of imposing on your hospitality after all that has happened. We only wanted to make sure that Adora was alive and well——"

"I am very much of both, Diana!" laughed Adora, gaily, coming close to Carlos, who threw an arm around her waist.

"And especially—safely married!" colored Adora, exhibiting her left hand.

"And—can you really forgive us, as Carlos says you have done?" questioned Diana, doubtfully, while Nicky looked awkward and abashed.

"I can, and do," said Adora, while Carlos added:

"On one condition, that you kindly take us back to Europe in that nice yacht of yours, Armstrong, without attempting to flirt with my wife."

"You are a sport, Don Carlos," murmured Nicky on a note of enthusiasm as he wrung the other's hand. "I am afraid Di and I behaved very badly to Adora and you. We went into a blue funk when we heard about the old volcano. Any mortal thing we can do to make up for the past——"

"Forget it, my friends," laughed Carlos. "Everything is wonderful in this best of all worlds. Even Pallarossa is asleep again. Only take my wife and me to Spain in your yacht, and we do not care if Pallarossa is asleep or not."

And so presently they all went down to Saranoa to go on board the Sea-Spray. Jaime went with them as the body servant of Carlos, and Father Ignatius saw them off at the quay on their way to the big estates of Carlos in Spain.

From the deck of the yacht, as she moved seawards, Adora looked her last on Pallarossa, on whose quiet crest lay ridges of cold lava. Lava, which is dangerous both in humans and mountains. Lava, the safety-valve of pent emotions. Adora had witnessed it, both in humans and bubbling from Pallarossa. And she had to remember this. But for Pallarossa and its lava, love might never have been hers. Love and Carlos. Those two were one.

THE END.

Her Fatal Blunder

She loved him and lost him—yet didn't know why. Too late she learned summer heat had made her more guilty than ever of an unforgivable fault

DAINTY, exquisite, fresh as a flower. So she seemed—at first! Then one stifling hot day he noticed—faint but unmistakable—a hint of "B.O." (body odor). And romance fled. Not until long afterwards did she realize why she lost him.

"B. O." weather—beware

What folly it is to take chances with "B.O."—especially these broiling summer days when heat and humidity make us perspire more freely! How easy it is to be guilty now and not know it because we have become used to an ever-present odor. Yet others notice instantly—and they won't overlook it. "B.O." can be a fatal barrier to popularity . . . success . . . love.

A simple safeguard

Play safe. Adopt the pleasant safeguard millions of particular men and women use. Wash and bathe with Lifebuoy—the cooling, refreshing toilet soap that gives extra protection. More lather—creamy, searching, purifying. Lather that penetrates and deodorizes pores—ends all danger of offending. Lifebuoy's very smell is different—a pleasant, hygienic scent that vanishes as you rinse and tells you, "No fear of 'B.O.' now!"

End complexion worries

Bothered because your complexion is dull, cloudy, coarse-textured? Try Lifebuoy "facials". Massage the pure, bland, pore-purifying lather well into the face each night. Then rinse. Pores are gently freed of clogged impurities, toned down to normal fineness. Healthy, glowing radiance coaxed back to dull, sallow skins. Adopt Lifebuoy today.

A product of Lever Brothers Co., Cambridge, Mass.

Blind to the fault that was driving him away. Never once aware she was letting "B.O." offend. And no one would tell her!

Fear Of Fear — By Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements

"How about the glass itself?" Jimmy was investigating as he spoke. "No; the same thing applies there. The gilt has run down onto the glass as well."

The Chief was testing the hardened paint with his knife. "The drops are old," he said. "That mirror must have been there for a long time because the stuff's badly oxidized."

"It's been up about six years," McCarthy told us. "The Colonel said his brother got the mirror when they wrecked an old house downtown. It was brought around the Horn in a sailing ship."

Jimmy was looking at the glass with interest. "It's rather a fine specimen," he said. "They don't make them like that any more, with those heavy candelabra built into the frame. That's another reason why you can be sure it's solid, Captain. Those brackets are wired and to move it the wires would have to be pulled out."

"Yes," The Chief sighed. "I guess we'll have to give up any idea of an entrance being made through the wall." He spoke briefly to his men, and they began moving the bookcases back against the plaster while Jimmy glanced about the room.

"A trap-door is out of the question," he said, "because the carpet is tacked down solidly all the way around."

"Yes, and the side walls are plain plaster, while that window at the end is built in, with no opening of any sort."

"How about the roof?"

"Nothing there. We've had a man look it over."

"How'd he reach it?"

"From a window in the house next door. But even from the roof it's impossible to get in here. A cat couldn't get through those ventilators."

Jimmy had sunk down lazily on a divan. "I don't know what all the snorting's about. The question isn't how somebody got into the room. It's how he managed to lock the door behind him after he left."

"That's just the point," said the Chief despairingly. "That door's not the sort you can play tricks with. Grant didn't depend upon an ordinary lock and key but upon a bolt."

Jimmy rose from the couch and moved across the room. For a moment he regarded the bolt thoughtfully. "It's the sliding type," he observed, "and the door fits tight, without a crack. I don't believe even Philo Vance could figure out a way of locking it from the outside."

"No," agreed the Chief, "not even a burglar with a complete set of tools could handle it, but we've discovered one odd thing . . . look here." He reached up on the outside and touched one of the carved panels. It slid to the left, disclosing a small pane of glass three or four inches square.

"A peep hole!" Jimmy exclaimed.

"Yes; that Hindu servant insists that 'the master' had it put in so that he wouldn't be disturbed when he was concentrating. Personally, I believe it was used for those seances of Grant's."

"Probably." Jimmy was examining the thing carefully. "But I don't see how it can have had anything to do with the bolting of the door. You can see the glass has been built into the woodwork so there's no way of opening it."

"I've already figured that out." The Chief slipped the wooden panel back into place and joined us on the inside of the door.

"The whole thing is beyond me," he confessed. "If it weren't, I'd have put Stoddard under lock and key long since."

"Then you owe a debt of gratitude to that door," Jimmy said. "I tell you frankly, Captain, if you throw Stoddard into the hoosegow, you'll live to regret it."

"Hang it all," the Chief exploded, "you talk as if I wanted to prove him guilty! Matter of fact, I like the chap as well as you do. I'd be glad to discover anyone else who could have polished Grant off."

"If that's all that's worrying you," said Jimmy calmly, "I can make you a present of several."

"Such as?"

"Well, to begin with, such as the Lady Elfrieda."

A Tall Cold Glass for a Hot Day

By Mrs. Christine Frederick,
The Distinguished Authority on Household Efficiency.

"SOMETHING cold to drink," is the universal demand of family and friends alike when the mercury mounts in mid-Summer. And the first duty of the hostess lies in offering a refreshing beverage, one which refreshes not only the palate by its taste but equally refreshes the eye by its gratifying color and charm of arrangement.

Today the scope of the Summer beverage has been greatly widened through the infinite possibilities of the automatic refrigerator. Not only may bottled beverages be chilled as usual, but they may assume solid form in delightful tinkling cubes of flavored ice. Many hostesses are just beginning to grasp this new hospitality aid which permits having a beverage of one flavor and cube ice of a contrasting taste, color and even garnish.

To color plain water, use a few drops of vegetable coloring until a delicate shade is secured. Stir the water well, then pour into the trays. Lime green, ruby and yellow afford the most pleasing contrasts with other beverages, using for example, green cubes in a gingerale beverage, ruby cubes in lemonade, or yellow cubes in a punch made with raspberry, strawberry, etc.

To make garnished ice-cubes, partially fill the trays with colored water or flavored beverage and allow this layer to freeze. Then add the garnish to each tray, cover with another thin layer of liquid, and freeze. Last, fill tray to top with liquid and finish freezing.

The garnish may be in a tiny sprig of mint, particularly delicious in lemon or limeade or gingerale, a whole or half maraschino or large white cherry; a bit of fruit peel cut in three or four colored candy decorettes to each cube; or one or more brilliant red candy peppermint drops.

Fruit juice or bottled beverage of any flavor may be frozen into solid cube form in the trays; the great advantage being that when they melt, unlike ice, they give flavor instead of diluting the beverage. Try using grapejuice, diluted to half its strength and frozen, served to color and chill plain lemonade. Try making cubes of cocoa, to be used in other milk or egg-nog drinks.

Try a strong tea infusion with cherry garnish, to be used with a wide variety of chill Summer beverages.

In recent seasons there has been great improvement in the quality and wide distribution of many bottled and carbonated beverages such as strawberry, raspberry, sarsaparilla or rootbeer, etc. These are now much stepped up from their erstwhile "pop-bottle" stage, may be bought in larger size bottles for more convenient household use, and should be kept on the hostess' reserve guest or emergency shelf, in addition to the familiar gingerale, grapejuice, etc.

One flavor which the writer thinks unexcelled for the Summer beverage is loganberry—too little known and appreciated perhaps by the mixer of punches. The loganberry, that distinctive native variety of the trailing blackberry, which in shape resembles a blackberry, in color a red raspberry, and in flavor more sprightly and acid than either, seems to yield the acme of color and tang to whatever drink it is added. Canned loganberries and bottled loganberry juices are both to be found on grocery shelves.

Grapefruit, orange and lemon, these three citrus fruits need no additional word of praise, since they are the foundation of all true-fruit, and hence "natural" drinks whose wholesome fruit salts and acids give perhaps most refreshment of all. Grapefruit beverages should be served more generally, either the fresh juice or quality canned bottled juice, making for quick and easy use. Grapefruit juice and pineapple, grapefruit juice and cider, these are unusual but delicious.

At least four out of five Summer menus dictate "and a Summer beverage," which in this case generally stands for iced tea, iced coffee or iced chocolate. And while every hostess thinks they are easy to make, like other simple things, they require skill and real art to make them to perfection. Perhaps here are a few suggestions, new at least to the new Summer hostess.

To make:

Good Iced Coffee: Allow 1½ heaping tablespoons of medium ground coffee to each cup of boiling water. Pour freshly made coffee over cracked ice or cubes. Coffee must be extra strong to allow for diluting ice. Never use cold, left-over coffee. Powdered coffee is most convenient for this use.

Good Iced Tea: Allow 1 heaping teaspoon to each 2 cups of boiling water; stand 3 minutes, pour over 1 tablespoon sugar and 1 thin slice lemon to each glass; fill with cracked ice or cubes. Never use stale tea or stand pitcher of cold tea in refrigerator.

Good Sugar Syrup: Keep on hand a supply of plain sugar syrup made as follows: Use 1 cup sugar to every ½ cup water. Boil sugar and water together 5 minutes. Cool. Store in covered jars in refrigerator. Use large tablespoon of syrup (or to taste) to each glass of beverage.

Good Chocolate Syrup: ½ cup cocoa, 1½ cups sugar, dash salt, 1 cup cold water, 2 teaspoons vanilla. Mix cocoa, sugar, salt and water. Place over low flame and stir constantly until sugar is dissolved and mixture boils. Boil 3 minutes and add vanilla. Pour at once into air-tight jar and seal. When cold, place in refrigerator.

Canned evaporated milk and malted milk both have a large place in the economy of the Summer drink. The all-milk shake, especially with the addition of eggs, a serving of ice cream or a couple of spoons of malted milk, is a wholesome meal beverage—nourishing, digestible and popular. Try an all-milk drink for the luncheon on any hot noontime, let the children have it instead of solid dishes. Keep fit and get out of the kitchen by serving whole-meal drinks as often as possible. Add a sandwich, a cracker, some cookies, and it will total as many calories as you need, with no tax on digestion.

Here are a few tasty beverage recipes:

Arctic Ice Frappe: Fill a tall glass ⅔ full of ice—garnish with strawberries or cherries and fill the glass with lemonade.

Mint Lemonade: Combine juice of ten lemons, two bunches crushed mint leaves, two cups sugar and 1 cup water. Place in a saucepan and bring to a boil, cover and allow to cool. Strain. Add six pints golden gingerale. Garnish with fresh mint.

Raspberry Glow: Fill a tall glass ⅔ full of ice cubes made of raspberryade. Pour over grapefruit juice which has been thoroughly chilled.

Loganberry Highball: Fill a tall glass ⅓ full of loganberry juice. Add 1 tablespoon lemon juice and ice. Fill glass with dry gingerale.

Carolina Nectar: Fill a tall glass with ice cubes made of lemonade—add a sprig of mint in the side of the glass and a few cherries. Fill glass with dry gingerale and garnish with a slice of lemon.

Fruit Fizz: Combine juice of 4 oranges and 2 lemons. Add ½ cup canned, unsweetened pineapple juice and ½ cup maraschino cherries and juice. Just before serving add 4 pint bottles sparkling white grapejuice.

The Soap in Sunset Cleans and Softens the Fabrics . . . and this makes possible FULL, DEEP dye-penetration

"IT'S THRIFTY AND WISE-TO USE SUNSET SOAP DYES"

EVERY woman who uses Sunset knows what beautiful color results she achieves. Dresses, coats, drapes, curtains, all dyed in such even, clear color that the fabrics look like new.

SUNSET SOAP DYES

For Fast Dyeing

It's not luck—Sunset does it regularly every time. The soap in this wonderful fast dye is important. Not only does it help clean the goods, it softens and opens up the fibre so that the hot dye seeps into every last little portion.

This is why Sunset gives such surprisingly beautiful color results so easily. You will only believe it possible to produce them at home when you use Sunset yourself. There are many colors, each 15 cents. Ask your dealer to show you the Sunset Color Card.

For lingerie and fabrics not requiring fast dye, the same skillful chemist who invented Sunset, perfected a new and better tint—Dytint. It is guaranteed to be equal or superior to any tint. It costs less to make a tint so we sell Dytint in a BIG PACKAGE for 10 cents everywhere.

Use Sunset for fast dyeing; Dytint for tinting; Dytint Color Remover, 10c, for removing old color before re-dyeing. If your dealer does not carry all these products write us for information. Ask for "Color News" — a helpful home dyeing folder.

His Majesty tells—

—just why MENNEN TALCUM makes him feel so much better

Try it FREE

The litmus paper test which proves that Mennen Borated Talcum neutralizes acids

The Mennen Film which protects the baby's skin from friction and other irritants

SOFT as a caress—refreshing as a breath of air—delicious to the senses in every way—such is Mennen Borated Talcum.

But it is much more than that. It is a highly unusual product. For instance, just moisten a strip of pink litmus paper and rub some Mennen Borated Talcum into it. The pink paper turns blue—proving that Mennen Talcum neutralizes acids. Now make the same test with the talcum you have been using.

How important this Mennen characteristic is! In your baby's perspiration and urine, acids are present. Naturally they irritate his skin, unaccustomed as it is to any irritants. No wonder, then, that this talcum which neutralizes acids keeps your baby more comfortable.

Then make this additional experiment. Sprinkle a little Mennen Borated Talcum into a glass of water and notice the film which it forms—a film so strong and elastic that you can dip your finger into it, as illustrated, without breaking the film.

Think what this, too, means to your baby. Mennen Borated Talcum forms a veritable film of protection in the deep folds of his skin, and between his tender skin and his clothes, protecting him from friction, from the scalding contact of urine and from other irritants.

And for the Wee Infant

CAR OWNERS bought more

Firestone Tires

During April, May and June than in any like period in History

THERE are reasons for this—Firestone is building the Greatest Tire Values in history, with the result that Firestone factories are operating 24 hours a day, 6 days a week, to meet public preference.

This is the year everybody is scrutinizing his purchases. This is particularly true in tire buying because of the many confusing and misleading statements made about tires. To give car owners the facts, Firestone published comparisons showing Quality, Construction and Prices.

Then the public came into Firestone Service Dealers and Service Stores—made their own comparisons with cross-sections cut from Firestone tires—and from special brand mail order tires and others, and when they saw the facts they bought more Firestone tires during April, May and June than in any other like period in Firestone history.

Let the Firestone Service Dealer show you these Firestone Extra Values and have your car equipped for Safe, Trouble-Free Summer Motoring—Drive in today—There is a Firestone Dealer in your community—He will save you money and serve you better.

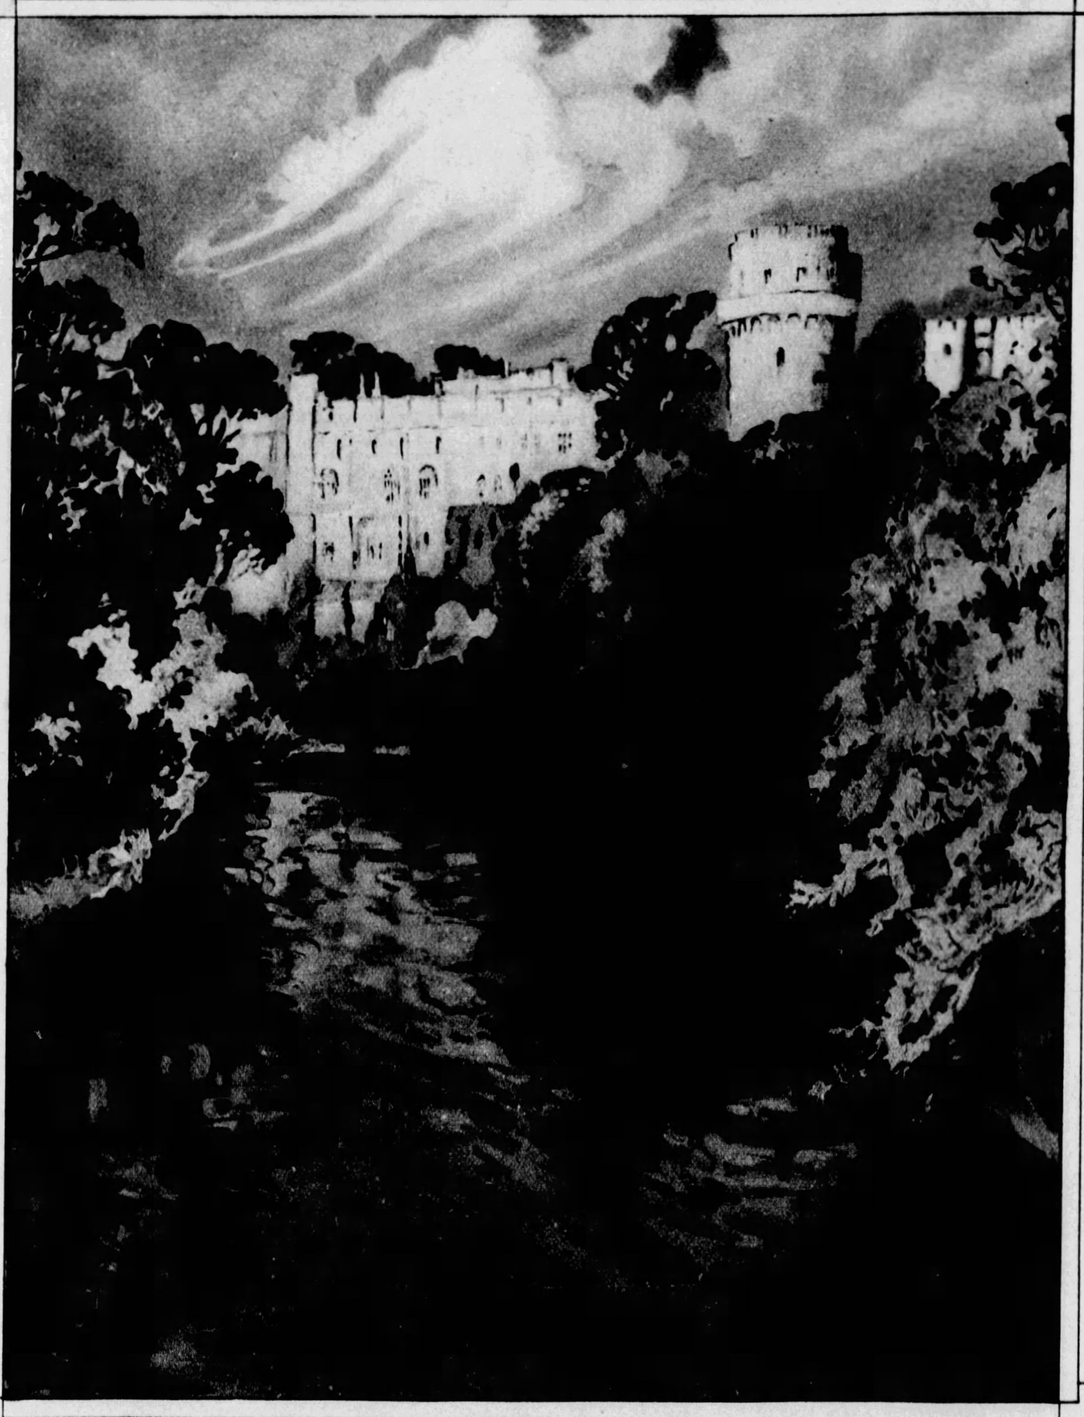
Beach Costumes

WHAT A RIOT OF COLORS ON THE BEACHES THIS SEASON!

Never before have there been such abundantly beautiful costumes for the beaches as this year And, it might also be added, never have there been such radiantly beautiful bathing girls as seen this season. Some of the latest outfits for beach wear are shown here. On the left, Irene Rich is wearing the ever popular red, white and blue combination. Conchita Montenegro, above, wears a bolero styled pajama suit of brightly striped material. Colorful printed silk from China features the summer beach pajamas worn by Mary Carlyle on the right



WARWICK CASTLE, IN SHAKESPEARE'S COUNTRY, ENGLAND.

This lovely castle of the Earls of Warwick stands on an eminence above the river Avon, which, with its thickly wooded banks, affords one of the most enchanting bits of river scenery in all England. The walls, enclosing charming gardens, are flanked by the towers dating from the fourteenth century.

THE CLOWN COGITATES ON LIFE IN GENERAL, LIONS IN PARTICULAR.
